Area Will Gain 500 New Homes In Near Future

To Be Spread Throughout Area; Not Adequate, Pearkes Declares

Immediate construction of 500 houses in Greater Victoria is planned by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P. for Nanaimo, told The Colonist Ottawa correspondent yesterday.

The announcement was greeted with enthusiasm by officials here who forecast a general easing of the housing problem.

"If a large portion of these houses were earmarked for persons in emergency accommodation in converted army huts, we could abolish this unsuitable way of living," declared Forrest L. Shaw, chairman of the Citizen's Rehabilitation Council.

He said an effort will undoubtedly be made to obtain some of the new houses for tenants of the former army huts, who have spent two Winters in the converted structures.

N.T YET DECIDED

Although location of the 500 houses has not been decided, it is expected 150 will be in Saanich, 100 in the city, 150 in View Royal and 100 in Esquimalt.

The Saanich project, it was learned here, probably will be on the old Lansdowne airfield, bounded by Richmond Road and Shelbourne Street, now owned by the Veterans Land Act.

"If this is a plan I saw recently, it will be a fine project and a step in the right direction. We must find adequate housing," Saanich Reeve E. C. Warren commented.

NEAR CAMP

The Esquimalt project, it is believed, will be near Macaulay Camp present emergency shelter project. This, however, may be for married army personnel.

Esquimalt Reeve A. I. Thomas said the report was "welcome news."

The 150 houses slated for View Royal probably would be for naval personnel, according to a Victoria official. However, this number may be lessened because of the difficulty in obtaining suitable land. One tract being considered, he said, has been found to be too small. There is a possibility the Saanich project may be used for naval personnel until other property is located.

UNDER DISCUSSION

The 100 houses for Victoria is the project already under discussion by the City Council.

General Pearkes, however, described the program as "totally inadequate." He expressed disappointment that the Government had not been able to arrange a more extensive program because there are still many veterans living in emergency shelters such as Gordon Head Camp.

"Additional houses are being constructed for veterans, and the fact that permanent force personnel will vacate properties they are now occupying as soon as the permanent quarters are ready, will be of some assistance. However, the 500 houses planned will not care for all veterans seeking permanent homes," said the Nanaimo member.

Safe Stolen in November Found on Leechtown Road

—Colonist Photo.

STOLEN November 15 from Hawkes Brothers' Service Garage, 404 Moss Street, the 1,200-pound safe pictured above was found Friday by two loggers in bushes just off the Leechtown Road, one mile from the Shawnigan Lake cut-off. The loggers were Douglas and Thomas Fleetwood, Cobble Hill. About $400 was taken from the safe by cutting a hole in the bottom. Thieves' efforts to make a hole in the side of the safe with an axe and to smash the dial with a chisel apparently failed. After a lengthy search, a valuable ledger book was found in the bushes by City Detective P. W. Richards. Pictured above are Constable Robert Ross of British Columbia Police and Jack Hawkes, garage co-owner, kneeling, and Detectives Alex Briggs and Richards standing.

Alliance to Forge Full Defence Plan

Will Build Forces to Strength Able to Turn Back Aggressor

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP). — The Atlantic alliance powers intend to set up a "common strategic plan" for defence against Russia.

This would be a major task of a defence committee which is to be formed by the High Policy Atlantic Council provided in the security treaty.

A State Department booklet issued tonight explaining the proposed pact said:

"The last two wars have proved that a major conflict in Europe would inevitably involve the United States.

"The North Atlantic Pact . . . is designed to give assurance that in the case of such a war there will be a co-ordinated defence in which the actual military strength and the military potential of all the members will be integrated into a common strategic plan."

The booklet itself did not say against whom these defences would be organized. Officials consider Russia the only power outside the Alliance capable of waging a "major conflict."

BUILD UP FORCES

The strategic plan, it is understood, is supposed to provide for building up the forces of the West to a point at which they would be reasonably able to turn back aggression.

Also it would decide beforehand the places, times and manner in which those forces would be brought into play.

It would be a great military defence scheme stretching from the tip of Italy across the heart of Europe to the tip of Norway.

The booklet argued that the pact should increase peace prospects by preventing "any potential aggressor" from miscalculating the unity and power of the West. Such a mistake on Russia's part has been a longtime fear of officials here.

The booklet put another new point on the record: Germany and Spain can not get into the Alliance soon. Most members don't want Spain now, it said.

It came forth on the heels of the text of the treaty itself which soon will go to the U.S. Senate for ratification.

Butter Dealers Worried

Drop in butter prices across Canada may reach the "panic" stage, some Victoria dealers think.

This would be a boon to many citizens, but would mean a loss to wholesalers, some of whom are worried that they have too much high-priced stock on hand.

Another drop in prices in Vancouver Friday added weight to the theory that some dealers were trying to "get out from under" by unloading stocks, thus forcing other dealers to drop prices to keep up with the market.

Despite reports that the local price trend closely followed the Vancouver market, dealers here stated that nothing new could be divulged on butter prices, "until Monday."

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP) — A further one-cent cut in the price of wholesale butter here will bring the price of top-grade butter down to 65 cents a pound Monday, it was learned today.

Before the break in prices, top-grade butter sold for 72 and 73 cents.

Farmlands Threatened By Floods

PENDLETON, Ore., March 19 (AP). —The Umatilla River began flooding today, and the weather bureau warned it could become "very serious."

The river began moving around nearby farm fields and houses.

A thaw and rain started the river rising. The weather bureau said the ground was saturated in the mountains and an expected week-end storm could bring a severe flood.

Spring Is Here, Almost; Even Ducks on Time

Spring officially arrives in Victoria at 2:35 p.m. today, Pacific Standard Time.

That's on the authority of Dominion Astrophysical Observatory officials here.

Nature's signs weren't quite so certain, however, yesterday. Winter was still loitering and nobody was in danger of becoming sunburned.

Victoria's Spring watchers, however, think that the season "is pretty well on schedule."

Mrs. Walter Hughes of Elk Lake was perhaps the first to see the swallows. She watches for them every year and this time sighted "quite a flock" on Wednesday.

Later two men saw one swallow and one man saw two flocks over Swan Lake.

LILIES BLOOM

Meanwhile two Easter Lily blooms burst into flower at the home of David MacMillan, Holland Avenue, Strawberry Vale.

And if one swallow doesn't make a Spring perhaps two ducks can prove the point.

They arrived, just as they do every year "about this time," to take up residence on the front lawn of the Empress Hotel. Hotel employees are hoping that this year's couple will repeat last year's performance of stopping traffic while new ducklings are taken to Beacon Hill Park.

JUST FAR

Crassly commercial in the midst of Spring poesy, hotel proprietors said that tourist traffic was "pretty much on a par" with other years.

But in sample rooms all over the city, Spring hats blossomed. And this year most of them are genuine Spring bonnets, adorned by roses, sweet peas and pansies.

A new Spring color from England, to be called darcia, was much in evidence, as well as the good old "California sun," "sunnibiu" and "boating green."

CATALOGUES, TOO

Spring catalogues were making an appearance too, forecasting a flood of Spring merchandise.

And faint in the distance came the sound of pipes—the musical accompaniment to Spring.

The trail led to the top of a dusty old office building where a former wartime pipe major was playing on the bagpipes for his wife's dancing pupils.

They said it was a reel, but actually the pipes were the pipes of Spring and the dance was that of the Spring dryads.

St. John's Hit By Snowstorm

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 19 (CP).—A gale-driven snowstorm struck this Newfoundland capital today and Newfoundlanders sloshed to work through several inches of slush. The snowfall later turned to rain. The southern half of New Brunswick also was blanketed.

Strike Definitely On Truck Drivers Say

Unless their demands are met at the "11th hour," the strike is definitely on, a spokesman for 55 Island Freight Service drivers in five Island communities announced last night.

"We are determined to bring our pay up to the level of the established wage locally," he said.

The strike was called last week to start Monday at 1 a.m.

But threat of a strike-caused milk shortage in Victoria this week, "has been averted," N. H. Ingledew, manager of Island Farms Co-operative Association, said last night.

Local milk distributors had previously expressed fears that milk would be in short supply in Victoria, "at least for a few days."

Mr. Ingledew said arrangements had been completed to bring in milk using E. & N. Railway facilities, and that fears of a shortage were probably unfounded.

The trucking company has been bringing 2,500 gallons of milk into Victoria daily from Up-Island.

MADE PLEA

John M. Scoular, managing director of the Island Freight Service, said last night he had "pleaded" with union representatives to allow operation of the milk trucks.

"'No milk will be hauled,' was the answer I received," he declared.

Robert E. Smeal, Vancouver Island representative of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and Other Transport Workers, Division 234 (C.C.L.), to which the Island Freight Service drivers belong, had stated in announcing the strike:

"Picket lines will be established around depots in Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Courtenay."

PAY BOOST

The drivers are seeking a 12-cent hourly increase in wages, two weeks' annual vacation with pay, and a contributory medical hospitalization plan.

Mr. Scoular said that he had offered the drivers' committee an increase of 5 cents an hour from the company "in an effort to prevent loss and hardship."

Other company offers included "a complete medical and hospital plan as from May 1" and an extra one day holiday each year over the regulation holiday period, after two years, "until two weeks' holiday with pay becomes effective."

CAUSE LOSS

He said a 12-cent increase in wages would cause a loss of over $5,300 a year to the company.

The strike is in defiance of recommendations of a board of conciliators, Mr. Scoular claimed.

C. W. Wilkinson, president of the Victoria local of the drivers' union, said that Island Freight Service drivers were receiving $1 an hour and $1.05 "on trailers."

"Virtually all other truck drivers in this area receive $1.12 and $1.17 an hour, respectively, for the same job."

Mr. Wilkinson said that the union was not satisfied with revenue and profit figures submitted by the company before the conciliation board.

Mayhew Due Next Month For Convention

Hon. R. W. Mayhew, Minister of Fisheries, will arrive in Victoria early in April to attend the nominating convention of the Victoria

FISHERIES MINISTER R. W. MAYHEW

Liberal Association on April 11, it was announced yesterday.

Unanimous nomination is expected for Mr. Mayhew at the meeting.

Mr. Mayhew was first elected to the House of Commons in the by-election of 1937, re-elected in 1940 and 1945. He was appointed Minister of Fisheries in 1948.

D. J. Proudfoot, president of Victoria Liberal Association, said he expected the convention to be one of the most enthusiastic held in Victoria.

The meeting will be held at Liberal headquarters.

Reverse Move Restores Blind Man's Missing $4

Last week Robert Dickson, blind operator of the kiosk near the Victoria Public Library, was cheated out of $4 when he gave change for $5 on a one-dollar bill.

Yesterday he got $4 back by reverse action of an anonymous Good Samaritan.

Constable Walter Calwell of the city police told this story:

"While on duty near the kiosk, the officer was approached by a man who asked him to help with a small plan. Having read about the blind man being cheated, he explained to the policeman he wanted to give the handicapped man a $5 bill and tell him it was a dollar, just the reverse of the former incident."

Constable said the man made a small purchase, told the blind man to make change for a one-dollar bill and left. When the constable approached the kiosk, Mr. Dickson was just putting the bill in the dollar compartment.

He told him what had happened so the bill wouldn't be given out by mistake.

Tracts Attack Atlantic Pact

TORONTO, March 19 (CP).—Five thousand leaflets attacking "warmongers" and the North Atlantic Security Pact, were distributed from door-to-door today in the Toronto suburb of North York by members of the National Federation of Labor Youth.

BULLETINS

Firemen Hurt

PORTLAND, Ore., March 19 (AP).—Twenty-five firemen were treated tonight at hospital after inhaling chlorine gas fumes while fighting a fire in the University of Portland gymnasium.

Four were held overnight. None were in serious condition. The others were sent home.

The city fire bureau said the chlorine fumes escaped from tanks used for treating water.

Broadcasts Pact

LONDON, March 20 (Sunday) (AP).—The Moscow radio today gave the Russian people word-by-word details of the North Atlantic Treaty in an unusually lengthy news broadcast.

Reliable informants here said it was the first time since the war the Moscow radio has broadcast the text of a treaty to which Russia is not a party.

Police Lose Jobs For Lumber Theft

PORT HURON, Mich., March 19 (AP).—Six Port Huron policemen were dismissed from the force today a few hours after their arrest on charges of stealing lumber in their squad cars.

Police Captain Daniel L. O'Leary said the lumber had been taken from two local lumber yards over a period of a year and a half. He said the wood was to be used to remodel the men's homes.

Eastern Germany Nears Soviet Satellite's Status

BERLIN, March 19 (AP).—Eastern Germany neared the status of a separate nation in the Soviet orbit today.

The Communist-led People's Council approved unanimously a constitution for the 20,000,000 Germans in the Soviet zone and in the Soviet sector of Berlin who are cut off from their Western brothers by the Iron Curtain.

The constitution still must go through the formality of approval by the 2,000-man people's congress, which ratifies decrees of the council.

The council's ratification of the constitution, which would set up a rival to the Western German Federation being formulated at Bonn for the United States, British and French occupation zones, came 24 hours after announcement of the terms of the North Atlantic Treaty.

The council adopted a resolution late today calling the Atlantic pact "an unholy alliance."

"Western Germany and Berlin," the resolution declared, "have become the advance positions of world aggression against the East in the military, political and economic spheres."

The council urged Germans to "resist this aggression on their existence, security and right of self-determination."

The Communist constitution says private property is guaranteed—but adds that property of "warmongers" can be expropriated without compensation.

It provides for compensated expropriation of property deemed necessary for the general welfare.

It says free speech is guaranteed—except for war propaganda "and similar matters."

The charter provides for elections every four years to a people's chamber, which will choose the Premier from the membership of the majority party. The People's Chamber and a second chamber, composed of representatives from the various states, will elect a President.

Holds Together So Far Diver Says of Own Bell

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—"It's held together so far, and I guess it's good for a few more trips," said John Pieters who might easily be a character out of something by Jules Verne.

Pieters, 32-year-old electrician, has made history in a home-made diving machine. He has plummeted 900 feet into Howe Sound waters—believed a record for Canada.

The dive may pay off in more than glory. In the creaking, overgrown hot-water boiler, Pieters, one of seven members of a newly-opened salvage firm, has located the hull of the tug F.M. Yorke.

Pieters is going down again to hook a cable to the salvage he believes will bring him a slice of the vessel's $100,000 value.

"IMPRACTICAL"

Two electricians, two loggers, a sailor, a cafe manager and a real estate salesman have hitherto tackled a job which established salvage companies declared impractical.

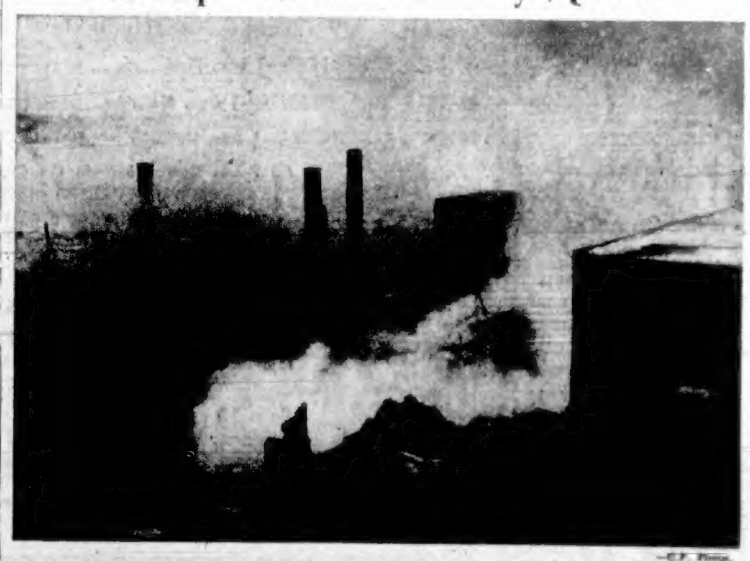

They've found the sunken vessel and they have snagged her with a grappling hook. They are certain they can fasten a cable to her hull, raise her between two barges and bring their treasure to the shore.

Pieters was the only one of the seven men with any knowledge of diving. In a home-made diving bell he had dropped 200 feet into a mountain lake to locate a lost bulldozer.

The bell he works in now is ten feet long, 21½ inches in diameter at its bottom and 24 inches in diameter at the top. It's a double hull of sheet metal welded at a Vancouver shop.

Inside Pieters stands atop the car batteries which light the lamps. "Sometimes the fish bump against the sides as I go down. They sound like a sledgehammer hitting."

Fire Wipes Out Section of Rouyn, Quebec

Loss was estimated at $2,000,000 and over 100 were made homeless by a disastrous fire which swept Rouyn, Northern Quebec mining centre, March 17. The blaze broke out early in the morning and before it was brought under control had swept through a large portion of the main business section. This photo shows part of the damage caused, with smoke still pouring from one of the buildings.

Ill Eskimos Rescued From Arctic

EDMONTON, March 19 (CP). — Four Eskimos who survived in a disease-ridden Arctic community deep inside the Arctic Circle are being treated in the Indian hospital here today after their rescue by the R.C.A.F.

The party of four—two boys, a woman and her baby—brings to six the number of Eskimos flown from the village on Cresswell Bay, 1,000 miles north of Churchill, Man. Nine of the 17 inhabitants died and two others will be flown here next week.

FEET FROZEN

Pauloosie, 16, is suffering from severely frozen feet and 12-year-old Tuktoo is believed to have tuberculosis. The woman, Ishmoiatook, losis. The woman, Ishwomoiatook.

Her son, Kayoomyk, 15, was one of the first Eskimos flown from Cresswell Bay. He lost both feet from gangrene. The two-year-old baby boy is suffering a paralyzed neck.

The group landed late last night accompanied by an R.C.M.P. constable. They were picked up at Fort Ross, about 40 miles south of Cresswell Bay, where Dr. J. P. Harvey of the Indian hospital here, is waiting to evacuate the other two survivors, both women.

SICKNESS SPREAD

Constable A. R. Wilvert of the R.C.M.P. said the Winter has been very bad in the Cresswell Bay area and sickness seems to have spread through most of the Eskimo population there and at Fort Ross.

F.O. Thomas Bensen of Vancouver who piloted the mercy plane said there is a shortage of food in the area and provisions will have to be flown in on the next trip.

F.O. Bensen said that on the next flight, the ski-equipped plane will land at Fort Ross for Dr. Harvey then go on to Cresswell Bay to pick up the Eskimos to be evacuated.

Oak Ridge Opened To Public View

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., March 19 (AP).—Oak Ridge, the war-born atomic city, today was formally opened to the public without passes. An atomic-generated electric impulse, the first ever transmitted by wire, burned a ribbon at one of the city's four gates—and the rush was on.

Thousands of visitors saw little evidence of the atomic developments for which Oak Ridge is famous. New security regulations have gone into effect for plants producing uranium-235 for atomic bombs. They are now guarded more closely than ever.

Advice Saves Boy in Pit With Bears

ST. LOUIS, March 19 (AP).—A Polar bear dragged 13-year-old Donald Carey into the bear's pit today, clawing and biting the boy seriously.

The boy had climbed a fence at the St. Louis zoo and was sitting on the edge of a moat surrounding the pit.

The bear, Snowball, weighing 1,000 to 1,200 pounds, grabbed Donald's leg. Four other children who were with young Carey ran for help.

Guards rushed to the pit with rifles and called to Donald to stop struggling. When he did that the bear and its mate, Frisky, began to lick the boy.

The keepers brought automobiles to the pit and began honking horns and shouting. The noise frightened the bears back into their den and young Carey was rescued.

He was reported in serious condition at city hospital with cuts and bruises on his thighs, chest, body and arms.

'World Peace' Talks Lose Sponsor, Gain Speaker

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP).—A "World Peace" conference that opens next week—with the United States State Department calling it a medium for Communist propaganda—today lost a sponsor and possibly gained a speaker.

The resigning sponsor is Sarah Gibson Blanding, president of Vassar College. The possible new speaker is Sidney Hook, philosophy professor at New York University.

The Vassar president said she was withdrawing because she felt there would not be a "fair balance of opinion" at the conference.

Hook said today he had been denied a place on the conference program. When told of Hook's statement Dr. Harlow Shapley, the conference head, said the professor had been invited to speak at a panel meeting. Hook replied:

CHARGES EVASION

"Let him tell me when and where to appear and read my paper. If he puts me on the program and gives me a time and place, I shall speak." Hook accused Shapley of "evasion" and said so far he had only been invited to speak from the floor.

The conference, called the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace, will open Friday night.

The meeting here is sponsored by the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Asserts Slavs Caused Loss

LONDON, March 19 (AP).—The Albanian newspaper Zeri I Populit said today that "Yugoslav Trotskyites" have sabotaged and pillaged Albania's copper and chrome mines.

The Albanian mines were worked by an Albanian-Yugoslav mining company, formed in 1947. Yugoslavia was to furnish technicians and machinery.

The newspaper's editorial, broadcast by the Tirana radio, said Albania had fulfilled her part of the bargain but Yugoslavia had not, resulting in a loss of production in copper and chrome ore.

Train Robber Suing Rail Company

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is being sued for $50,000 by one of two men who admit holding up its crack streamliner.

George L. Ashton, who says he is 20 and a minor, contends the railroad is to blame for the train robbery because a B. & O. employee angered him after selling him alcoholic drinks which made him drunk.

His companion in the holdup, Luman Ramsdell, 22, is still in a Washington hospital. He was shot when he and Ashton were arrested here. Both have been charged with the robbery.

Robbery charges were filed in Martinsburg, W.Va., near which the train holdup occurred.

Ashton's suit against the railroad was instituted by his mother, Mrs. Ruth Ungar.

Sees Price Spiral If Curbs Removed

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP).—The Senate Banking Committee said today that removal of rent controls now would boost rents 25 to 100 per cent generally in United States and perhaps touch off strikes and a new wage-price spiral.

Immediate rent decontrol would deal the entire economy "a severe blow," the committee told the Senate in a formal report recommending passage of its bill to extend controls 12 to 15 months.

The bill would allow some rent increases up to 100 per cent. In general there would be none before October 1, 1949.

Vishinsky, Gromyko May Lead Criticism

LAKE SUCCESS, March 19 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky and his Number One helper, Andrei A. Gromyko, are expected here to lead a Soviet fight on the North Atlantic Treaty in the United Nations Assembly next month.

The Soviet Union has not yet informed the U.N. who will make up the delegation. It never does until the delegation is on its way.

EXPECTED IN APRIL

But a high U.N. official said today it would be a fair guess that Vishinsky would come from Moscow for the session opening at Flushing Meadows, April 8.

Vishinsky was the top Russian at the Assembly in Paris last Fall. Since then he has been made Foreign Minister, succeeding V. M. Molotov.

Bitter Soviet opposition to the North Atlantic Treaty was taken by some U.N. delegates to mean the Russians will lose no chance to assail it in the Assembly. Vishinsky is their most experienced debater.

The opportunity may come when the Assembly takes up the fate of former Italian colonies in North Africa. This would open the way for Soviet delegates to go over the whole American policy in the Mediterranean and then to ring in the North Atlantic Pact.

United Nations delegates expect Vishinsky will be assisted by Gromyko, who has been away from United Nations halls since last July.

HIGH OFFICIALS

The Western powers will be represented by high officials also. The United Nations has received word that French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman will attend.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain will be in the United States at the time and may look in on the Assembly.

The Foreign Ministers of Belgium, Luxembourg and The Netherlands also are expected. These Western officials are coming over for the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty in Washington, April 4, the day before the Assembly convenes again to finish the job begun in Paris last September 21.

OUSTED LAST YEAR

One other Russian familiar to Americans may attend the Assembly. He is Yakov M. Lomakin, former Soviet Consul-General in New York City, and a close personal friend of Deputy Foreign Minister Gromyko.

The United States ordered Lomakin out of the country last August 20 on charges growing out of the case of Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, Russian school teacher who jumped from a window in the consulate.

Nothing was heard about Lomakin until Tuesday, when he appeared at a Vishinsky reception in Moscow as acting chief of the Russian Press Department.

Korean Hero In U.S. Army Fights Ban

SEATTLE, March 19 (AP).—Chung K. Lee, 49-year-old Korean, served as a civilian scout behind Japanese lines at Guadalcanal.

He has letters from high-ranking military leaders commending him for "outstanding service" to the United States forces during those early days of the war.

But letters notwithstanding, he will have to put up a fight to remain in the United States.

Lt.-Col. Evans F. Carlson, leader of the famed "Carlson's Raiders," indorsed to Lee a unit citation which was issued by Maj.-Gen. A. A. Vandergrift of the Marine Corps December 7, 1942, to the 2nd Raider Battalion.

The United States immigration service tried to bar Lee from re-entering this country when he returned to the United States last December from military Government service.

Immigration officials said Lee first entered this country in 1931 and then in 1942 was ordered deported because he overstayed his visa. Before being deported he entered the service of the army and navy.

He has letters, too, from Lt.-Col. James Roosevelt and Lt.-Gen. T. Holcomb of the Marine Corps—both expressing "sincere admiration" for Lee's service.

Attack Wounds Two U.N. Men

BATAVIA, Java, March 19 (AP).—A Netherlands military spokesman said tonight a Dutch Army lieutenant fought off an Indonesian guerrilla attack Friday in which two United Nations military observers were wounded.

The ambush occurred in Northern Sumatra.

The observers are Major John Albert Simmons, an American, and Lt.-Col. H. D. Chaplin, a Briton. Chaplin's condition was reported as serious but not critical. He suffered six bullet wounds. Simmons was wounded once.

The two are among 45 United Nations field observers in Java and Sumatra. All are attached to the Dutch Army units. The observers report to the United Nations Security Council.

First of family to seek elective office, he will be candidate to succeed late Representative Sol Bloom, who died recently. Now 35 years old, F. D. Asks Canada Be Made Republic

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP).—A new constitution that would set Canada up as a republic outside the Commonwealth is sought by Wilfrid Lacroix, Independent Liberal member of the Commons for Quebec-Montmorency.

Mr. Lacroix gave notice today that he will move a House resolution Monday calling on the Dominion to seek the co-operation of the provinces with this in view.

There is little likelihood the Quebec member's motion will even get to a vote at this session of Parliament. It will have to take its place at the foot of a list of 45 other private members' resolutions. Most of these die from inaction at the end of a session.

Large Appropriations Sought For Road Projects in North

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP). — The sum of $250,000 for construction of a road from Northwestern British Columbia to the Alaska Highway has been included in Federal estimates, Resources Minister MacKinnon said today.

The road, from Atlin, B.C., northward to Jake's Corners in the Yukon, would revive mining in the Atlin district and open a scenic area to motor traffic, the minister said. The route was surveyed two years ago and the Government planned to go ahead with construction this year.

MORE SOUGHT

Mr. MacKinnon noted that increased appropriations are being asked this year for the Northwest Territories and Yukon services of the lands and development branch of his department.

The increase totaled $933,916—from $3,773,464 in 1948-49 to $4,707,380 this year.

Chief project in the Yukon would be continuation of the Mayo-Minto road to Carmacks and Tantalus Butte where coal deposits were being developed. The road would be an important link in the Whitehorse-Dawson route. Additional surveys were scheduled for the balance of the road in 1949-50.

Mr. MacKinnon said construction of this section was given precedence to facilitate re-establishment and further development of the base metal mines at Mayo and Keno.

FOR SURVEY

Funds were also being provided for survey of hydro-electric development possibilities in the Mayo district.

In the Mackenzie district of the Northwest Territories, unspecified funds were being asked for completion of a water and sewer installation at Yellowknife, and for a building program to house Government officers at various centres where administration activities had increased.

Included were suitable quarters for the R.C.M.P., erection of public schools and opening of a welfare institution at Fort Smith to provide care for aged and infirm, neglected children and juvenile delinquents.

An increase was also asked for improvement and maintenance of the Mackenzie Highway from Northern Alberta to Hay River on Great Slave Lake.

Quebec Oleo Ban Now in Effect

MONTREAL, March 19 (CP).—It is now illegal to sell or buy oleomargarine in Quebec. However, the new provincial law, effective today, does not make it unlawful to possess the butter substitute. It is therefore permissible to cross into another province and take margarine back into Quebec.

SHOWS PROFIT

TORONTO, March 19 (CP).—Canada Wire & Cable Company, Ltd., shows net profit of $1,364,771 in the annual report for 1948 issued today. This compares with a net of $1,474,516 for the year ended December 31, 1947. Working capital increased to $7,078,095 from $5,707,590.

Treasure House Antique Shop Sold to Danish Art Collectors

Sale of the Treasure House on Fort Street was announced yesterday by Harold Currie, veteran Victoria antique dealer, who has operated the business for the past 25 years.

New owners are J. Juels Berg and B. R. Finiger, Danish art collectors, who came to Canada a year ago.

Price involved in the transaction was not disclosed.

Mr. Currie said that he was "only reluctantly retiring because of age."

He will be 80 on April 4.

He has been in Victoria since 1891. At one time he worked for David Spencer's Ltd. here, and later was associated with Weiler Bros. furniture firm.

In announcing his retirement, Mr. Currie recalled that his firm "had enjoyed the patronage of people from every part of Canada and from every state in the Union."

The new owners said official opening of the Treasure House under new management would not be made until June when they would report on the works of art brought over from Europe for display.

Mr. Finiger said the Catterall Building on Fort Street had been bought previous to the Treasure House transaction, as a proposed site for their collections.

"But we are glad to have been able to get the Treasure House instead," he stated.

Communism Must Prove Ability To Solve Problems, Group Told

"The world will look to the future with a great deal of misgiving until the issue of Communism and Democracy is settled, Dr. John McGilvery Maki said here last night.

He addressed a public meeting at Victoria College held under the joint auspices of the evening division of Victoria branch, United Nations Association, and Victoria College.

"Communism can argue that it has a solution to the future, but it cannot yet prove that it can solve the problems of societies it is attempting to control."

There is probably a solution where Communism can work hand in hand with Democracy, said Mr. Maki, but not with the type of men now ruling Russia.

PROFESSOR

Dr. Maki is professor of Japanese government and politics at the University of Washington.

Of Japanese parentage, he was adopted and raised by an American family, as a United States citizen. Through an extensive study of Oriental history and culture, he became a recognized authority on the Far East.

He outlined in his address the advance of Communism through China and the different small states in Asia.

"Communism will no doubt end up in control of China but whether it can solve China's economic problems is another story."

In all areas, Communism attempts to associate itself with a mass grievance, he said, and that makes people feel that the Communist Party has the feelings of the people at heart.

Growth of Hi-Y Outlined By Conference Speaker

Hi-Y Clubs of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada have increased nearly 600 per cent in the past ten years, Leslie Vipond, Toronto, national Y.M.C.A. boys' work secretary for Canada, said here last night.

He addressed more than 150 delegates from Washington and British Columbia at the closing dinner of the three-day 1949 Boys' Annual Pacific Northwest Hi-Y Conference.

Mr. Vipond traced the short but active history of the club from a group formed in 1889 in Kansas until today when the movement is established in 34 countries.

First Canadian club was formed at Calgary in 1915 and by 1937, it had increased to 37 Canadian groups. Present number now is 212 clubs with a membership of 4,000.

SUCCESS REASON

Mr. Vipond told the delegates they should realize the Y.M.C.A. was the heart of the organization. Methods and varied program of the clubs themselves, he added, was the reason for their success.

He said he had visited many clubs during a two-month tour and had found young Hi-Y members earnestly discussing current social, economic, and international problems.

"The clubs have an important function to fulfill in being interested, helpful, sympathetic, and understanding of persons persecuted for racial or financial reasons," he stressed.

Clubs should be ever watchful of domineering leaders, petty club critics and differences that might cause dissension, he stressed.

The conference concludes today with the morning service at Metropolitan United Church, a general meeting, and a summary of the conference by Mr. Vipond.

Traffic Safety Is Everyone's Concern

IT has been evident for some time that if Greater Victoria is to bring order out of comparative chaos in its traffic management something more than regulations, traffic lights and the law will need to be employed. The punishment of offenders may be a deterrent to others, but for every motorist or pedestrian brought to book there are hundreds guilty of the same type of traffic breach. It is the general public that must be reached before traffic and traffic safety is likely to result. For that reason a safe-driving campaign in positive terms might accomplish a great deal of good here. The local organizations now considering the formation of a Traffic Safety Council will find plenty of public backing.

A few years ago Toronto instituted such a campaign through the co-operation of its service clubs and other organizations. The emphasis was not placed on breaches of the law, but on sound driving—and walking—and some courtesy towards others on the road. Innumerable volunteer spotters became observers for the campaign, and what was actually happening on Toronto thoroughfares became learned fully for the first time. It was bad enough. Taking the positive stand, however, the campaign pressed for sound driving, and sent "thank you" cards to all drivers or pedestrians who were found to be observing to the full the correct rules of the game. The result was the mass education of Toronto citizens in safe traffic habits.

Something of the same kind would work in the Greater Victoria area if it were attempted with co-ordinated effort and full public support. Something has to be done, or the abnormal increase in vehicular traffic will continue to take all too high, and completely unnecessary, a toll of life and property. The accident record for the new year is already a bad one, so that the need speaks for itself. The new Safety Council scheme appears to provide a remedy.

Front Door Barred—But What of the Back?

WHILE Canada's participation in a North Atlantic defence pact awaits only parliamentary ratification, already assured in principle, this Dominion's attitude towards security in the Pacific remains obscure. It is natural that attention during the past week should have been focused on the Atlantic treaty, but at least some members of the Commons felt impelled to ask what if anything was contemplated for the maintenance of peace to Canada's westward. The answers were vague.

Reports quoting high diplomatic sources in the Commonwealth created confusion as to who was proposing what; but one point was made clear: that Canada, for the present at least, is doing nothing. The Commons was informed that the Government had "received no information concerning the discussions in Australia regarding the formation of a Pacific pact."

The House was further told that the Canadian Government had "not been invited" to participate in any such discussions. It is that statement more than the other that suggests a peculiar philosophy towards a matter concerning the North American Continent as much as it does the Dominions to the south. Must Canada wait to be invited to participate in measures for her own protection? Australia apparently did not. Surely this Dominion, as the most influential unit of the Commonwealth next to the United Kingdom and as a nation in its own right, should be ready to display a little more initiative.

In the light of upheavals in the Orient—the virtual overrunning of China by Communist hordes, the upsurge of Communism in Japan, and growing unrest in other lands bordering the Pacific—Canada can ill afford to tag behind, waiting for someone else to make all the moves. The Pacific is Canada's ocean as well as Australia's, New Zealand's and America's, and few will deny that the threat there is as real as it is in Western Europe.

Mr. King's Memoirs Would Be Gain to Canada

THERE is a report from Ottawa which suggests that the memoirs of Mr. Mackenzie King, expected to occupy the former Prime Minister's leisure hours once he had given up office, might never be written. A start has been made, but apparently no great progress achieved in reviewing the immense accumulation of data concerned. From the Canadian historical standpoint it will be unfortunate if Mr. King finds himself unable to complete what admittedly is a formidable task.

Not all Prime Ministers write their memoirs, which is a good thing, but no man can stay in office for more than 20 years without having much of value to pass into the national archives. He becomes of necessity the repository of knowledge which he alone can interpret, yet which is part of the warp and woof of a nation's life. There is no question but that from this standpoint Canadian history would gain immeasurably were Mr. King to leave behind him an account of the momentous events in which he played a leading part as this country's Prime Minister.

It is reported that Mr. King is enjoying the ease denied him by the cares of office over a long period, to which no exception could be taken. Unexpectedly, also, he has withdrawn from the hurly-burly of partisan politics, attending the House seldom and the Liberal caucuses not at all. The new Prime Minister is free of influence on his part. Mr. King is also free of any mandatory injunction concerning his life story, of course, but a gap not to be otherwise filled will remain should he not find it possible to write an account of his long and unusually successful political career.

Letters and Excerpts

Letters to the editor on any topic of genuine public interest are welcome if they are brief, accurate and fair. No letter will be inserted, in whole or in part, except over the proper signature and address of the writer. Unsolicited correspondence cannot be returned.

THE LAST WORD

Sir,—Just one more word about the one-sided trade balance between Canada and Britain to which Capt. R. S. Johnson refers. It is not merely unfair, that is often thought to be smart. It is suicidal for Canada. It is a standing disgrace that unemployment exists in Canada at all. We have good men and some of the finest products in the world, which everyone else wants. Labor and produce are only unsaleable abroad because of a stupid fiscal policy of refusing trade in exchange.

This ought to be the No. 1 problem of any sensible Government. Labor is barking up the wrong tree in prohibiting imports and putting its own people out of work. That only makes high prices, strikes and no increase in wealth.

R. HOOD,

1325 Douglas Street, Victoria, B.C.

NIGHT DRIVING

Sir,—Attorney-General Gordon S. Wismer has wisely called attention to the "lack of traffic consciousness by drivers as one of the major reasons for British Columbia's mounting accident toll." May I congratulate Constable Aldon Appleton on his successful prosecution against a motorist who failed to dim his headlights. Many of us know the reputation of Victoria as a city of the world's worst drivers. My experience has well confirmed this; but that is not all. The odd careful driver does, perhaps, stand some chance in daylight; but the "non-dimmers" have turned night driving into a nightmare.

In law the innocent driver who has dimmed his lights receives no sympathy if he is involved in an accident through being "blinded" by oncoming lights, unless he has pulled up to a stop; the legal argument being that if his vision is impaired by blinding lights he must stop. By that time, of course, the careless culprit has sped on his suicidal way. Occasionally I am compelled, in course of business, to make a night journey over the East Saanich Road and it has come to this, that I now travel at a very slow speed with lights permanently dimmed. Carrying a clean licence for 35 years, I am not normally a nervous driver; but so flagrantly do night drivers flout the law by not dimming, that the winding roads of British Columbia have become death-traps after dark.

More power, then, to Constable Appleton and his confreres. And if he can accept, I could offer to drive him from Sidney to Victoria and back, any night, and show him a hundred cases where the dimming law is disregarded; and, indeed, many instances of full headlights on the brilliantly-lit main streets of the city.

The $10 fine fully applied in every case would, no doubt, prove a sharp reminder to these night-hogs, and so perhaps prevent the loss of life which will inevitably result if the practice of non-dimming is allowed to increase the risk of accidents.

C. S. GOODE,
S/Ldr., R.A.F. (Retd.)

Sidney, B.C.

All Is Well

What'er you dream, with doubt possessed,
Keep, keep it snug within your breast,
And lay you down and take your rest;
Forget in sleep the doubt and pain,
And when you wake, to work again.
The wind it blows, the vessel goes,
And where and whither, no one knows.
'Twill all be well: no need to care;
Though how it will, and when, and where,
We cannot see, and can't declare.
In spite of dreams, in spite of thought,
'Tis not in vain, and not for nought,
The wind it blows, the ship it goes,
Though where and whither, no one knows.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IT was interesting to learn that Scottish policemen are about to follow the example of Victoria's blue-coated officers of the law and get themselves "a new look."

Someone must have tipped them off about our cops—perhaps it was Chief McLellan, anxious to pass along the advantages of civilization to the land of his forebears. Or perhaps they read about our bobbies in The Colonist—the Old Lady travels far afield, you know.

Maybe I shouldn't call our chaps cops, even though that's been the tag name for policemen for a hundred years, all on account of an old English verb "to cop," meaning to nab. After all, "cop" isn't dignified and Victoria policemen have other things to do beside nabbing burglars. They have to stand at intersections of a busy Saturday afternoon, for instance, and grow berserk at the antics of pedestrians.

Anyway, the 1949 policeman is an up-and-coming fellow.

That's why he wanted to ditch his old-style uniform in the first place, and get a collar and tie and a snappy peaked cap—and be comfortable. It's hard on the esophagus blowing a whistle when you're half-choked.

THEY TAKE IT CALMLY

Scots policemen have come to the same conclusion, and so a sartorial transformation is to occur also in the land of heather, shipyards, and the tea kettle on the hob.

They're taking the change calmly in Auld Scotia, however. No tourist bureau director has arisen in protest to cry aloud for retention of two officers guyed in outmoded dress so that foreigners might gawk at them. Seemingly the Scots draw the line at following our example that far. They're passing up a bet, though. Edinburgh's now famous International Festival will soon be in progress again, with visitors and artists present from various parts of the world. Two old-style bobbies propped up in Edinburgh Castle, perhaps draped over its ramparts, would be a wonderful tourist attraction.

Although I fancy the unfortunate twain would feel as silly as must our luckless human symbols of "Old England."

EASY TO SPOT

The local lady who said recently that it's now hard to tell a policeman from half-a-dozen other uniformed blokes—postmen, maybe, or bandsmen, bank messengers, customs officers, etc.—made a good point. The thin white trouser piping isn't nearly so identifying as an old-fashioned bobby helmet lofting its apex into easy view.

The canny (meaning cute) Scots have solved that one, though. Their new cap will have a diced band round it, in blue and white—Scotland's international soccer colors. Mischievous small boys will be glad of this concession; they'll still be able to spot a cop in time to duck out of sight.

There's an idea here for Chief McLellan and his merry men—unless they prefer to be able to sneak up on us while we think they're somebody else.

One Scots commentator is wondering what's going to be done with all the cast-off helmets. The odd few will go into theatrical storage as stage "props," but otherwise he fears they'll be a drag on the market. He suggests that turned upside down they would make good hanging flower baskets.

Victoria ideas certainly have legs.

BLEAK HOUSE

We didn't need to improvise flower pots out of our old bobby helmets, a stunt the parks superintendent would scorn anyway, but the reason behind the suggestion could apply here just the same. The commentator thinks the flowers would give a decorative touch sadly lacking around most police stations. In point of fact the Fisgard Street station is equally bleak externally; apparently the parks and the police departments are not on chummy terms.

Or are hanging baskets incongruous for Fisgard Street?

All the Scottish constabulary won't be sporting the "new look" this year. It'll take time, maybe a couple of years, before the old uniforms are worn out or the export quotas eased enough to supply all the new outfits that are needed.

Once that's fixed up, though, an Edinburgh cop will be the twin of his Victoria colleague, except for the checker cap band. So if then you take a trip over to Scotland and some proud Jock tells you about the new-fangled uniform his bobbies now wear, you'll be able to reply, as tourists everywhere like to do: "Oh, that's old stuff where I come from. We've had them for years."

The Agile Cow

Recently the front pages of newspapers were full of the antics of an Oklahoma cow that got into a silo through a passage narrower than the cow's width.

Today, from another Oklahoma town comes word of another cow that can do marvellous climbing feats. She climbs a 45-degree ladder into a hayloft and scares the wits out of her offspring by looking down from the second-story window.

We are not impressed by this bovine agility. When we were very young we knew a cow that regularly jumped over the moon.—Montreal Star.

James Bay Jottings . . .

By FRED McNEIL

EACH year the British Columbia Legislature appoints a committee of representatives from both sides of the House. Its job is to examine Government expenditures over the previous fiscal year as reflected in public accounts, a book which, for the year ended March, 1948, runs to 330-odd pages.

With expenditures three times what they were a decade ago, it might be expected that this volume would get some careful scrutiny. The committee this year, however, dealt in the main with only two major items, one involving an accounting technicality, the principle of which was established three or four years ago, the second with the placing of Government advertising.

It wasn't always thus. In the days of straight Liberal Governments and Conservative Opposition, or vice versa, the public accounts committee played a part each year only second in attention and importance to the Legislature itself.

It has been suggested that one of the reasons for this situation is that the C.C.F., now the official opposition, is made up largely of workingmen whose knowledge of acounting and finance is not extensive. It has been suggested, also, that in times past those contending for government business and contracts were quick to tip off either Liberals or Conservatives when they came across something out of line, while the C.C.F., regarded as beyond the pale, doesn't get the same information.

Whatever the real reason, booming Government expenditures are getting an examination nowadays which can be moderately termed as cursory.

Perhaps few people in British Columbia would wish to see duplicated here some of the flamboyant investigations conducted by legislative committees in the various governments of our neighbor to the south. With expenditures here trebling in a decade, however, it seems only healthy democratic practice to give the accounts a little more than the casual glance they have been receiving lately.

Next year they are estimated at $92,000,000.

Estimates of Lands and Forests Minister E. T. Kenney and Works Minister E. C. Carson, two of the Government's most capable administrators, were examined by the House during the past week.

Mr. Kenney, as usual, was forced to deal mostly with forest management. He spent most of his time defending the policy against attacks by Government supporters and a certain section of the logging industry. He found some of his best support in the Opposition benches.

Mr. Carson, who many say is working himself to death, displayed his amazing grasp of departmental detail and knowledge of the condition of virtually any road, bridge or intersection in this far-flung Province.

There was hardly a member, during a two-hour afternoon session, who didn't have some question about a favorite project in his own district. Without exception, the minister knew the details and had an answer ready.

Forecasts continue to place the provincial election early this year, probably early in June. Government members are confidently predicting the Coalition will sweep the country, cutting down the C.C.F. from 11 to 4 seats in the House.

Observers on the sidelines, however, think this is pretty optimistic.

During the present session nearly every member on the Government side has made it clear he wants the Coalition to continue, and it is reported that most of the difficulties have been ironed out so that it can present a united front.

An English book on etiquette advised guests to arrive at a dinner five minutes before the appointed time. It is a great help in guzzling an extra cocktail . . . An editor who ran a contest under the heading of "Books That Have Helped Me," received the following frank answer from a reader: "My father's cheque book and my mother's cook book" . . . From The Toronto Globe & Mail: "If business realized its responsibility, and informed the public on what part of the price of an item was tax, there would be fewer complaints about the high cost of living and more on the high cost of taxation. Only when the public realizes what part of every dollar spent is tax, will it become economy-minded with regard to the expense of Government, and exercise corresponding restraint" . . . The British Education Welfare Society offered the following revised nursery rhymes: "Ding, dong, bell, treat your pussy well. Who'll give her milk? Little Johnny Silk." Canadian Sports and the Profit Motive

INTENSIVE competition, the desire to win, and gate receipts are masking our vision as to the more important functions which sport and recreation should serve, it is stated by Dr. A. S. Lamb in an article, "Sanity in Sport," in the current issue of "Health," official magazine of the Health League of Canada. Dr. Lamb is director of the department of physical education and athletics, McGill University, Montreal.

"The attendant evils are apt to make very rapid inroads on our traditions of play, which may become so impregnated as to create a most serious situation for the rising generation," Dr. Lamb states. "It is unsound and unhealthy to think in terms of compensation every time an athlete steps on the field. It is our responsibility to see that the many thousands of boys and girls who want to play for love of it have the opportunity to do so. It is our obligation to see that participation receives its proper emphasis, rather than passive observation. That would be sanity in sport."

Dr. Lamb emphasizes that he is not opposed to professional sport which he termed a form of public entertainment, but states "What I am opposed to, however, is to be one thing and camouflage oneself as a chameleon."

Sport—recreation, the spirit of play—is essentially basic and fundamental, the writer says, and rightly directed instincts of play may exert important influences. Further, he says that if would be incorrect to look on recreation as assuming only a physical form, that there are equally important phases from the mental, moral and social aspects of our nature.

"Honesty, loyalty, or any other attribute of character cannot be imposed—they must grow from within as a result of guided situations which call forth the right responses," Dr. Lamb writes. "The values of sane sport vary with age and other conditions, but 'playing the game' has a depth and wealth of meaning which extends beyond the game itself into the activities of life.

"The values of sport are no longer values unless they live with us in all our relationships. The rules of the game are the rules of life."

"CAPT. Olmstead and seven seamen, late of the New Granadian bark Anna Barnard, bound from San Francisco to Sooke for a cargo of piles and lumber, arrived here last evening in Indian canoes from Cape Flattery, and report that the vessel to which they were attached was lost on the west coast of this island between 8 and 9 o'clock on the night of February 26th."

It was just another story about sailors in little ships who lost a battle with the sea. But there was something in its grim simplicity that tugged the heart.

"The vessel left San Francisco, in ballast, on the 19th ult., and had made a fine run to the Cape. The place where she went ashore is 15 miles below San Juan Harbor, and the weather was thick at the time. She broke in two amidships immediately after striking, and Capt. Olmstead, with two men—the cook and a seaman lowered the boat and attempted to reach the shore; but the boat was dashed against a rock and broken up, and the cook and seaman drowned. The captain succeeding in swimming ashore.

"The remainder of the crew . . . clung to the rigging for six hours, when they took advantage of low tide to clamber ashore over the rocks. The vessel went to pieces the next day, and the Indians possessed themselves of the ship's stores and furniture which floated ashore.

"The next day the sufferers started in canoes for Victoria. They are destitute, having barely escaped with enough clothes to cover them."

U.S. Plans Tests of Atomic Rockets On Vast Range in Australian Desert

SYDNEY, Australia, March 20 (Sunday) (Reuters). — The United States intends to test rockets with atomic warheads in the vast rocket range at Woomera, Central Australia, The Sydney Sunday Sun reports today.

In a report from its Canberra correspondent, which the paper splashed across its front page, the newspaper says the United States first asked for use of the range through the British Government, saying its own range at New Mexico is too small.

An agreement will soon be reached between the Australian, British and American Governments, the report said, making Woomera range the greatest rocket-testing centre in the world.

The report says:

"The United States will also use the range for the development and testing of other long-range weapons. Under the agreement, America will make available to Australian scientists its latest discoveries."

DENIES "LEAKS"

The report said it was believed John J. Dedman, Australian Defence Minister, had the rocket proposal in mind when, in Parliament last week, he denied Opposition charges that the United States and British Governments had excluded Australia from defence talks because of security leaks.

Military sources in Washington said last November that important new steps to increase Anglo-American co-operation in "developing guided missiles were imminent.

Widows Seek Increase In Allowance

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP).—A little group of veterans' widows will converge on Parliament Hill this week to plead with the Federal Government for more money.

This is the tenth successive year that the delegation, made up of members of the national executive of the Canadian Non-Pensioned Veterans' Widows Association, has met in Ottawa.

"This year we're hoping to meet the new Prime Minister and some members of his Cabinet," said Mrs. Margaret Wainford of Verdun, Que., president of the association, which speaks for 40,000 Great War widows across Canada.

ASK $10 BOOST

At the present time, Mrs. Wainford said her organization is seeking an increase of $10 in the $40-a-month allowance given the non-pensioned widows under the War Veterans' Allowance Act.

The women also are seeking free hospitalization. Mrs. Wainford said one of the association's members was faced with a $75- hospital bill following an illness.

"How can you pay a bill like that out of $40 a month," she asked.

Hotel Life For "Guest" All Changed

SPRING VALLEY, N.Y., March 19 (AP).—After two and a half months of using vegetable soup for shaving, Robert Palloy, 49, can switch back to soap.

His quarters are different too—a jail instead of a Summer resort hotel. Police said this is what happened.

Early last January, Palloy climbed in a cellar window of the Bader Hotel at nearby Clarkstown where he formerly was employed. The hotel was closed for the Winter.

KEPT SHAVED

Palloy settled down, supped on the stocks of canned goods, and though there was no heat, the ample hotel supply of whisky made up for that. He kept clean-shaven, using vegetable soup—strained. Seltzer water solved his bathing problem.

His hibernation lasted until yesterday when Harry Bader, the hotel owner, found him sleeping peacefully in a blanket roll in a compartment beneath the hotel stairs.

Bader said the hotel safe had been opened and $80 in cash taken. Palloy denied having anything to do with that, but police said he admitted he was responsible for two and a half cases of missing liquor. He was held on a burglary charge.

Scrolls Said To Contain Isaiah Text

JERUSALEM, March 19 (AP). — Dr. Oliver Sellers, director of the American School of Oriental Research here, says that ancient scrolls found in a cave near the Dead Sea apparently are the oldest known manuscripts of the Old Testament. Sellers said that excavation work around the cave "practically removes any doubt as to the genuineness of the manuscripts."

He said pottery found in the same cave would indicate the scrolls were placed there in the first or second century before Christ.

The documents contain the complete text of the Book of Isaiah.

Long Range Plane Lifts Five Tons From Carrier

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP).—A long-range bomber of a type which the United States Navy says can handle atom bombs took off from a carrier early this month, it was learned today. The plane was the heaviest ever launched in that fashion.

Navy officials, in answer to questions, said a Lockheed Neptune P2V-2C—Weighing with its bomb load and fuel approximately 37 tons — flew off the carrier Coral Sea March 7.

The bomber, after a 2,000-mile flight, dropped a load equivalent to 10,000 pounds of bombs, then landed at the Patuxent, Md., naval air base.

ROCKETS FOR TAKE-OFF

The plane carried standard combat equipment, with no special devices except rocket assistance for the takeoff from the flight deck. The previous weight record for a carrier takeoff was set a year ago when an earlier model of the P2V took off from the Coral Sea at a gross weight of about 55,000 pounds.

The experiment, described by Navy officials as another routine test in its program for expanding the reach of carrier-borne aviation, was conducted off the Virginia capes.

At San Bernardino, Calif., Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, told reporters that the Navy has launched planes with similar atom bomb-equivalent loads from carriers several times in highly successful tests. He did not say where or when these tests were conducted. His comments were in answer to questions.

NOT MAJOR MISSION

The admiral emphasized, as he has before, that while the Navy now has planes capable of carrying A-bombs, it is not the Navy's intention to make strategic bombing a major Navy mission. The Navy could do that type of bombing if requested, he explained.

This is in line with a decision of the National Military Establishment and the Joint Chiefs of Staff under which the Air Force is given primary responsibility for strategic bombing, with naval aviation to be called upon to join in such attacks when the occasion requires.

Asks System Of Toll Roads

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP).—A $12,000,000,000 system of super highways across the United States was proposed today by Senator Kilgore (D., W.V.A.). They would be toll roads. Six routes are listed in a bill.

They would connect Boston and San Francisco; Florida and the Great Lakes; Florida and New York; the Canadian-Minnesotan and the Mexican border at Laredo, Tex.; Jacksonville, Fla., and San Diego, Calif., San Diego and Puget Sound in Washington state.

Oddities

VANCOUVER, March 18 (CP).—Canadians may now buy insurance against dogs which bite and horses which kick.

These are among benefits available in an insurance plan offered for $6 a year by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Secretary-Manager David Ricardo said here today.

The insurance provides coverage to the limit of $10,000 against legal liability for any damage done by a domestic animal if the animal is at fault. The insurance company, Ricardo adds, does not consider crocodiles or alligators as domestic animals, whether kept as pets or not.

Nor may a dog bite victim receive damages if he prodded the dog with a walking cane before he was bitten.

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—The Provincial three per cent sales tax nearly sent a man "up the River" for a long stretch today.

Jack Blair, 34, charged with theft over $25 complained today to Magistrate Oscar Orr he should have been charged with theft under $25

(Theft under $25 carries a maximum sentence of six months' imprisonment while theft over $25 may be tried in a higher court and carries a maximum of seven years.)

Blair declared the sales tax had been added to the price of the ten pocket knives he pleaded guilty to stealing.

The court checked, ruled Blair was right. He'll do three months.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., March 19 (AP).—It was only an old key to the woman who picked it up last night from the sidewalk. She turned it over to Patrolman William Meres.

Meres tried the key in the nearest door and walked in—to a branch of the First National Bank. Nothing had been disturbed inside, so Meres left a note: Bank officials could find the key at police headquarters.

Discover Road Built in Egypt In 400 B.C.

CAIRO, March 20 (CP).—A broad avenue lined with sphinxes whose heads bear human likenesses has been discovered at Luxor beneath a pavement which hid it for some 1,750 years.

The find by M. Zakaria Goneim, chief inspector of antiquities for Upper Egypt, throws new light on the grandeur of the ancient Pharonic city of Thebes.

Thebes was built on the Nile south of here more than 3,000 years ago. It was the capital of a powerful line of Pharoahs whose ancestors liberated Egypt from northern invaders. Present-day Luxor, a Winter resort and storehouse of history, stands among the ruins. Just across the Nile is the "Valley of the Kings," where the tomb and treasures of Tutankhamen were found in 1922.

TWO GREAT TEMPLES

The remains of two great temples have attracted visitors to the site for centuries. One is the temple of Karnak, which was the earthly palace of the Theban god Amon. The other is the temple of Luxor, the god's "suburban home."

Three kilometres (about two miles) separate the temples. It is known, from hieroglyphs and sculpture, that they once were connected by a broad avenue lined on each side with stone sphinxes. The road was built orginally by the Pharoah Amenhotop III, father of King Akhnaton, ill-fated advocate of a single benevolent god. Its beginnings, bordered by ram-headed sphinxes, were discovered some time ago in front of the temple of Karnak. Most of its length remained buried beneath the debris of successive civilizations.

FOUND SPHINXES

Goneim undertook to find the lost section of the avenue near the temple of Luxor on January 18, 1949, his workers began to dig. On the second day, beneath a pavement laid when Egypt was ruled by the Romans, he found a headless sphinx. The head had been broken off in ancient times. On a stone pedestal, beneath the sphinx's lion-like body, was an inscription which Goneim translated roughly as follows:

"King Nechtanebis I made this road for the god Amon in order that he might make good navigation from the temple of Luxor. Never was such a beautiful road made before."

Up to now Goneim's excavations have brought to light four sphinxes —two headless and two with heads intact. The heads are likenesses of King Nechtanebis, who reigned at Sebennytos, on the Damietta branch of the Nile in Lower Egypt, about 400 B.C.

The excavations are continuing and he hopes to learn more.

Will Colonize Soviet Desert

MOSCOW, March 19 (Reuters)—A huge expanse of former desert and arid land—"the hungry steppe" —will be populated this Spring by 10,000 young Communist colonists who intend to grow cotton.

The young Russian Komsomols will leave their homes in the southern province of Uzbek, north of Afghanistan, to cultivate a vast area of Central Asia. This area was thought 30 years ago to be incapable of sustaining life.

Two major rivers, the Aum Darya and Sir Darya, flow through the steppe, but these waters flow narrowly through the baking expense of desert without nourishing it.

The task of the Soviet, started 30 years ago, is to harness the river waters in a far-reaching irrigation system.

Everybody Concerned About Weather But One Man Enjoys Explaining It

HALIFAX, march 19 (CP)—Reuben Hornstein, meteorologist in charge of the Dominion public weather office here, is wiping away much of the fog over weather forecasting from people's minds with a special weekly 15-minute maritime broadcast. It is the only one of its kind in Canada.

People as far back as Adam, he says, have been concerned about the weather, but the present generation would like to know more about how forecasters work.

EXPLAINS FROST

Listeners write in for information and Hornstein's Sunday program is chiefly concerned with their requests.

For instance, a recent broadcast concerned Jack Frost's window-pane artistry. Mr. Hornstein explained that people would first notice frost forming around an imperfection on the window itself—possibly a little dirt—as the result of the cold pane chilling indoor air below the temperature at which air can hold all its water vapor.

At the beginning of each year, Mr. Hornstein does a program on almanacs and their ability to forecast the weather for an entire year.

People were so interested in weather matters that he rounded up considerable information, and the meteorological division of the transport department put out his "Weather Facts and Fancies" in booklet form. In three weeks, more than 1,750 copies were distributed.

COMES IN HANDY

Weather information comes in handy in varied ways. Recently a Halifax insurance firm checked the weather office for conditions expected during shipping of seed potatoes from Prince Edward Island to Maine. On the word of the weather office, the firm underwrote insurance on the shipment.

One woman asked whether she could make a three-day trip with her husband because she would have to let the fire go out and she didn't wish to run the risk of frozen plumbing. The weather office checked back over 75 years' records, told her there was a strong possibility there would be a freeze. There was.

A graduate of the University of Western Ontario, Mr. Hornstein reentered college at Toronto during the depression years and there picked up his degree in meteorology.

Census Slated In June, 1951

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP).—A couple of years from now Canadians are going to have a chance to personally assist the United Nations.

The date will be around June 1, 1951, when some 18,000 enumerators start out on a door-to-door journey to gather the millions of words of vital statistics that make up a Canadian census.

Just where the United Nations comes in was explained by O. A. Lemieux, director of the census division at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, who returned to Ottawa from a conference in Rio De Janeiro on census arrangements for North and South America.

Mr. Demieux said in an interview the 23 countries represented agreed to co-operate by taking census during 1950 and 1951—with questions generally standardized to allow for easy comparison—providing the first comprehensive overall census ever taken for the Western Hemisphere.

The United Nations must have reliable statistics to carry on its work, Mr. Lemieux said.

Shooting War Can Only Be Avoided By Winning Cold War States Simonds

LONDON, March 19 (CP).—If the Western Allies are to avoid "a shooting war," they must win the "cold war" against Russia, says Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds.

The dark, lean, good-looking Simonds, who commanded the 2nd Canadian Corps in Northwest Europe and is shortly to take over command of the National Defence College at Kingston, Ont., told The Canadian Press in an interview:

"Peace can only be preserved if the Western Democracies take a strong, firm stand.

"Events of the past year have shown that the only way we can avoid a shooting war is to win the cold war, and the cold war involves economic, political and military factors.

AWAKE TO DANGERS

"The attitude adopted by our Eastern neighbors at the United Nations at least served to awaken the Western Nations to the dangers of weakness. And Canada is one of them."

Simonds came to England with the rank of major in 1939 and five years later, when only 42, was the youngest lieutenant-general in the British Commonwealth's forces. For his campaigns leading the 1st Canadian Division through Sicily and Italy and for his later exploits, the quiet, debonair soldier was hailed as one of Field Marshal Montgomery's brightest wartime "finds."

His ability to devise new and sometimes unorthodox methods to cope with tough situations was demonstrated in the Canadian breakthrough south of Caen, France, in August, 1944, and in the Scheldt campaign in The Netherlands in the Autumn of that year.

CAEN STRATEGY

For the Caen attack he thought up the idea of using armored infantry carriers to reduce infantry losses in attacking strong enemy positions. In planning the operation to clear the Scheldt Estuary so the Allies could use the port of Antwerp, Simonds insisted on a number of changes in the original plan and also insisted that the R.A.F. bomb the Walcheren Island dikes.

To his distinguished war record, Simonds has since added three years as senior instructor at the Imperial Defence College, London, where chiefs of the three services and high-ranking civil servants meet to study major defence problems.

"In many respects the Canadian National Defence College will operate on similar lines," Simonds said. "Senior staff officers and commanders of Canada's navy, army and air force, destined for high positions, will go there for their final training.

WELD THREE SERVICES

"The future trend of national defence in Canada will be towards closer and still closer co-operation among the three services, and my experience in London should prove useful to me in this respect."

Simonds, whose wife and two children have already returned to Canada, said he would leave his London post at the end of March with many regrets, "but I feel I have reached the limit to which I can make a useful contribution here."

He will tour France, Belgium and Holland before returning to Canada later via the Pacific Coast. He will spend a while with his family in Winnipeg before proceeding to Kingston.

Born at Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, he went to Canada early in life.

Allergies No Joke To Sufferers

NEW YORK, March 20 (AP).—Are you allergic to work? or to your wife or husband?

That's not just a joke, says Dr. Harry Swartz, allergist of New York City. People use the word "allergic" that way in fun, but it does have a scientific basis.

You can get asthma, skin troubles or other effects from things you touch or breathe on your job. A husband can get an allergic reaction from the feathers in his wife's hat. A wife may be allergic to her husband's shaving lotion.

ONE OUT OF TEN

One in every ten suffers from a major form of allergy. Half of us may sometime have a mild allergy. The rest of us could get one under the right conditions, Dr. Swartz writes in a new book, "Allergy, What it is, What to do about it." Allergies cause misery, even deaths, and should be tackled as a public health problem, he says.

Allergies can work in strange ways. Emotions may cause the reactions.

Dr. Swartz tells of one woman who gets sick when she eats watermelon. Now even just the sight of watermelon nauseates her.

A woman who suffers from rose fever has an allergic attack when she smelled an artificial rose, which she thought was a real one.

ASTHMA ATTACKS

One businessman was a tough case. Each April his attacks of asthma became worse and stayed bad until October. He would lose weight and be in bed for weeks.

The real trouble was deep anxiety. He manufactured clothes and had to decide in March on his seasonal "line." Not until September did he know if he had guessed right, making money or losing a fortune. He had never guessed wrong, but feared he might. His severe asthma disappeared when he changed to a business that brought a steady income each month.

Smallest Garrison Now on Gibraltar

NEW YORK, March 19—(NANA)—The world's most famous fortress, still astrategic keystone in the Allied military setup, the Rock of Gibraltar, now has only a skeleton garrison, according to a dispatch from the near-by town of La Linea to the Madrid daily, A.B.C. Just one battalion of British troops from a Lancashire regiment mans the rock today. This is the smallest garrison ever stationed there since Gib was captured by the British in 1704.

B.C. Resources Control Communism, Jukes Says

British Columbia Social Credit Associations' one-day convention went on record yesterday censoring the Provincial Government's "alienation" of B.C.'s natural resources for the development of an aluminum industry.

The bill, introduced Thursday by Lands and Forest Minister E. T. Kenney, gave the Government power, by order in council, over any present laws to the contrary, "to grant, sell, or lease upon any terms the Government decides, any Crown property or water resources necessary for the development of the industry."

The bill also provided that the Government may also include any other arrangements necessary for the future operation of the aluminum industry.

Major A. H. Jukes, president of the British Columbia Social Credit Association and vice-president of the National Association, declared last night, that the individual is being told to toe the line or else by those elected to represent the people.

"The term servants of the people as applied to members of Government today is a joke," he said.

"Instead of obeying the will of the people, for which it is elected, Government today tells the people, who elected it to office, what to do. The position is just reversed. The people are the servants of the Government," Major Jukes declared.

"This latest move by the British Columbia Government is nothing more or less than Communism," he declared.

"It is not the prerogative of Government to give away our natural resources. They belong to the people," Major Jukes firmly stated.

L. D. Byrnes, technical advisor, sent to Canada from England by Major C. H. Douglas, founder of Social Credit, charged that a clever, well-planned movement was on foot to sabotage the Social Credit Association of Canada.

"The purpose of the Social Credit Association," Mr. Byrnes declared, "is the Christian concept of life. It is a policy of ensuring that the individual shall have freedom of life and express his personality as he wishes and it embraces all fields of endeavor.

"The course of action today, however, is to enslave the individual from a centralized power," the speaker stated.

Alberta, the speaker said, has the first Social Credit Government in the world, but today is not living up to Social Credit principles as laid down by its founder.

"The Social Credit Government did not come into power in Alberta by accident. It was elected by an overwhelming majority of the people.

"We must attack the enemy both within and out of our ranks. Then we'll know by the fury of his counter-attack just who our enemies are," the speaker declared.

Major Jukes was re-elected president of the provincial association at yesterday afternoon's meeting. He was authorized to appoint his own officers and executive, to be announced at a later date.

Impound Car Said Involved In Accident

City police located a car on Fisgard Street last night 26 minutes after it allegedly left the scene of an accident—Skinner and Catherine Streets—at 8:15 p.m.

Police reported a car driven west on Skinner by John T. Harris, 1095 Lockley Road, had collided with another car which left the scene before the arrival of police.

The car was traced through its licence and impounded. Police said the car was driven by Paul E. Pepin, 947 Nicholson Street.

Leslie Bolithe, 434 Hillside Avenue, reported to police at 9:20 last night that his car was damaged while parked outside his home by an unknown car.

Has 20 Teeth; Baby Winner

Tooth title, juvenile division, goes to 14-months-old Ramona Chudy of Victoria.

Ramona's 20 teeth brought her home a winner at the unofficial international teeth Derby at Houston, Texas.

She defeated her rival Elizabeth Ann Dowd of Ottawa, who had the same number of teeth but took longer to grow them.

Ramona, a bouncing baby girl, had 20 teeth at 12 months.

The Derby is under way unofficially at Houston, Texas, where newspapers billed a local baby with the greatest number of teeth.

Since then claims have come in from all over the country.

Suspect Denies Making Threat; Case Adjourned Until Monday

Henry Taddie, 46, Industrial Reserve, charged with threatening Thomas Anderson, 56, same address, denied in city police court yesterday that he told the complainant "I will put a bullet through you."

Throughout the proceedings, the two men were friendly and even called each other by their Christian names.

Anderson replied in the affirmative when city prosecutor Claude L. Harrison asked him if he was afraid Taddie will carry out the threat. The complainant said he was working on his boat March 11 when the accused arrived and started to curse him. Anderson said Taddie claimed he was responsible for the police taking away his shotgun, and then made the threat.

Shirley Smith, 403 Dundas Street, told of hearing the threat, but on cross-examination Taddie denied making the statement.

The case was adjourned until Monday so the accused could obtain another witness.

Nicholas Procevlat, 69 Menzies Street, and Connie Hilda Wright, 2856 Quesnel Street, found guilty of having liquor in a Fisgard Street restaurant, each were fined $50 or in default one month in jail.

Charges were laid by Constables Keith Hollet and Brian Ferguson.

Nearing End Of Session Of Legislature

Members attending the fourth regular session of the 21st Legislative Assembly of British Columbia will work like beavers for the next two or three days.

The session, begun February 8, may be prorogued Wednesday night or Thursday morning. A morning sitting will be held Monday.

Legislators are expected to work about eight or ten hours a day up to the end of the session, which probably will be the last of the current Legislature.

There is a lot of work to be done before the lawmakers are sent home. Although a majority of budget estimates have been approved, members must still deal with those for the Attorney-General's department.

None of the 54 bills introduced to date have been through the full lawmaking process. Fourteen bills are awaiting consideration by the committee of the whole before the third reading, and 40 bills await second reading.

The bill to repeal the ban on margarine still has not been introduced. Eleven resolutions are also pending.

Union Asks Government Take Studios

LONDON, March 19 (AP). — The Movie Technicians' Union demanded today that the Government take over idle studios to end the film industry's slump.

Hundreds of technicians have been laid off in recent studio closings, brought about by high costs and declining profits.

The Government already is setting up a film finance corporation with a capital of £5,000,000 ($20,000,000) for loan to producers.

JUVENILES CAUGHT

Four juveniles driving a stolen car were arrested yesterday morning by Constable Thomas Matheson of the Saanich Police.

The constable chased the car along Burnside Road, finally bringing it to a stop at Irma Street. On questioning the occupants, he noticed the ignition wires had been tampered with.

Further investigation showed the car had been stolen, but the owner, who knew one of the boys, didn't want to press charges. However, they will appear in juvenile court Wednesday.

Plan Conciliation Board In Bus Drivers' Dispute

The B.C. Electric Railway Co. Ltd., and the Street Railwaymen's Union (A.F.L.) have been asked to name representatives to a conciliation board, it was announced yesterday by the Labor Relations Board.

The board will attempt to solve the current wages and hours dispute between the company and its 1,000 urban transit workers in Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster.

Decision to request a conciliation board followed the filing of a report with the board by R. G. Clements, Vancouver, conciliation officer, named earlier to settle the issue.

The union is seeking an over-all six-hour reduction in the work-week together with an increase in the hourly rate, to return the same take-home pay, plus a further increase to offset the rise in the cost of living since November, 1947.

This means a 40-hour work week and an hourly wage increase of 25 cents.

Negotiations will also cover changes in the wage rates of certain individual classifications and a large number of changes in the general working conditions of the bus, street car and trackless trolley operators and other transit workers.

The company has proposed some 54 changes in the recently-expired agreement which was signed in November, 1947, after a strike which tied up transportation in the three cities.

Macdonald's Open Ultra-Modern Cooking School and Home Service Dept.

Pictured above is the new Demonstration Kitchen in their new half-acre showroom on the lower floor of the Metropolis Hotel Building, 712 Yates St. It is from this Kitchen that all practical demonstrations on Electrical and Gas Appliances will be held. Special invitation extended to the people of Victoria to visit this Kitchen at any time where they may examine the many modern features.

Having built up one of the largest and most successful electrical appliance businesses in Western Canada, as a mark of appreciation to their many clients, Macdonald's are putting into operation what has been the dream of many electrical appliance dealers for a number of years.

This is the incorporation of a model kitchen in the business plans, enabling them to give better service and instruction in the use of electric and gas appliances. It makes it possible for Macdonald's new Home Service Department to test all recipes and give first-hand advice and information to the housewife.

Two qualified young women will be employed in this new department, and every Victoria housewife is invited to drop in at any time to discuss their problems with members of the Home Service Department. It is the intention of Macdonald's to hold monthly cooking demonstrations, both on electric and gas ranges using modern methods of roasting and baking, etc.

Many new uses for electric refrigeration, which plays an important part in all home-making today, will be discussed at these demonstrations, and all new recipes explained. The latest method of preserving is by quick-freezing, and many new ideas of meals prepared beforehand will be explained. The first demonstration class on electric and gas cooking and quick-freezing will be held on Thursday, March 24, from 2 to 4 p.m. This will be conducted by the courtesy and co-operation of the Home Service Centre of B.C. Electric.

Mr. Macdonald stated that these classes are open to all residents of Greater Victoria.

Sees Turkey Recognizing Israel Soon

ANKARA, March 19 (NANA).—"In a matter of a few days" Turkey will become the first Moslem nation to recognize newly-founded Israel, a Turkish Foreign Office spokesman said last week. This most powerful nation of the Middle East will become the 45th nation to establish relations with the Jewish state.

The spokesman's statement comes soon after the return here of Foreign Minister Nedjmaddin Sadak, who has been in London and Paris for the past month conferring with Western statesmen. Although it is understood that Sadak's conversations abroad centred mainly on the economic and security problems of his country, it is reliably reported that he also discussed Turkey's future relations with Israel.

CONCERNED NEUTRALITY

Despite Turkey's overwhelmingly Moslem population, she maintained a position of concerned neutrality throughout the Palestine dispute. This was primarily due to Ankara's desire for stability and peace in the Middle East. Her statesmen have been apprehensive lest some world power use the Arab-Jewish quarrel as a pretext for intervention.

Religious sentiment has not been a major factor in shaping the pending move since Turkey insists on separation of church and state. In fact, Deputy Prime Minister Nihat Erim, strongman of the Turkish Cabinet, recently emphasized his nation's firm attitude on this separation when he publicly warned that religious fanaticism could be a greater menace to internal stability than Communism.

GREAT INFLUENCE

Turkey has been master of the Arab world for centuries. Seasoned observers still consider the nation's influence over her neighbors to be considerable. Thus, her participation on the United Nations' Conciliation Commission for Palestine—France—has been regarded as important and significant. Fear by along with the United States and Arab leaders that they would lose face and prestige among their own people should they come to a working understanding with the Jews, was long regarded as a major obstacle to concluding peace in Palestine. It was hoped that through Turkish participation on the conciliation commission, the Arab regimes would be able to save face and thus make peace treaties more likely.

It is contended that it was largely for this reason that Turkey had previously withheld recognition of Israel. However, Israel's peace with Egypt and the rush of other countries, both in and out of the United Nations, to establish relations with the Jewish homeland, compelled Ankara to revise its attitude.

However, despite a Turkish recognition of Israel, observers here do not expect any prompt similar action by the rest of Islam.

Between The Book-Ends

By Jim O'Connor

A recent critical analysis of the state of American letters moved a magazine to ask just who of our contemporary writers would be remembered in the year 2,000.

Among others mentioned as prospective candidates for this advanced roll of honor were Sinclair Lewis, John P. Marquand and others. The writer also concluded that H. L. Mencken, if he were remembered at all, would go down in history as the author of "The American Language," and its supplement.

This department greets such a statement as pure baloney. For Mencken, aside from his efforts into the realm of criticism which drew the faithful undergraduate in the twenties, and his "American Language," is the author of probably the most delightful group of reminiscences ever written on this continent.

This department, which has just concluded this trilogy ("The Days of H. L. Mencken," Knopf) for the fifth time, would rank it with "Huckleberry Finn," as the epitome of reading for pure entertainment.

Of course it is to be acknowledged that his book wouldn't appeal to everyone. Mencken is a self-acknowledged author, and has nothing but good-natured contempt for organized religion, the Young Men's Christian Association and those adherents of a still-powerful movement known as "temperance," reformers of all kinds and those whom he contemptuously calls the mob.

He is a newspaperman of the old school and one upon whom the members of his craft look on with reverence. Above all he has the rare faculty all too seldom absent in the world today of not taking himself or anything else too seriously.

So if they are still reading books in the age of rocket ships, atomic breweries and Utopia, it is our bet that people will be still reading "The Days of H. L. Mencken."

Evelyn Waugh, Britain's top satirist ("Decline and Fall," "The Loved One," "Put Out More Flags," etc.) is creating mild havoc in the United States now with his latest "Scott-King's Modern Europe."

The book manages to take a rap at Europe the same way Mr. Waugh's "The Loved One" infuriated adherents of life in these United States. Oddly enough, it has been out for three years, but apparently is in its first American printing.

* * *

A surprise to no one is the book that has been leading the best-seller fiction poll in the United States since late last year—Lloyd C. Douglas' "The Big Fisherman."

In the non-fiction department, General Eisenhower is still staying way out front with his "Crusade in Europe."

* * *

The general, it should be noticed in passing, was quite upset by the treatment his book got last Autumn in England by The Sunday Times.

According to The New York Times, Gen. Eisenhower told friends that if he had thought it would have put any strain on British-American relations (as The Times review inferred) he wouldn't have written it.

However, subsequent reviews from such stalwart newspapers as The Manchester Guardian, The Times Literary Supplement and Time and Tide have apparently restored the author's calm.

Two excellent Pan Books (Macmillans, 45c) are just off the presses. These are O. Henry's famous epoch of life in the banana belt, "Cabbages and Kings," and Eric Ambler's "Epitaph for a Spy," from which the British movie, "Hotel Reserve," was taken.

Will R. Bird, Halifax novelist and short story writer, who recently visited Victoria, said the literary output of Canadian writers, as revealed to him on a cross-Canada tour, amazed him.

"Canadian writers are producing twice as much as I expected," Mr. Bird, president of the Canadian Authors' Association, told an interviewer in Toronto.

"Edmonton amazed me. They are active in three workshop groups. They have already produced four books."

Drama Missing in Novel About Wartime England

"The Heat of the Day," by Elizabeth Bowen (McClelland & Stewart, Ltd., $3.25).

This is a peculiar and not particularly satisfying novel. By the time the reader has digested Miss Bowen's mora involved phrases, the stilted unnatural dialogue and the complicated mental processes of the neurotic characters within, there is little left to provide the lift of enjoyment expected from reading.

If the reader seeks a series of introspective pictures of the minds of two or three human beings striving to solve personal problems amid the confusion and uncertainty of wartime London, plus a factual background, then the author certainly provides this. But to this reviewer the incentive to care whether Stella Rodney does anything drastic because a secret service operator named Harrison informs her the man she loves is selling information to the enemy, is lacking.

The characters are real enough, although some are completely unnecessary. The description of life in England and neutral Eire from the dark days of Dunkirk until D-Day is excellent. The lives of her minor characters are far more true to life and believable than those of Stella, Robert and Harrison who wade through 272 pages torturing themselves, and the reader, with disjointed conversations containing about as much drama as a dissertation on the pruning of shade trees.

There are a few highlights despite Miss Bowen's pedantic style. Some slight interest is aroused over the problems of the middle class Louise, a young wife with her husband overseas faced with the dilemma of being faithful in a time when "all London was in love."

The reader meets Roderick, Stella's young soldier son, Robert's sister and wishy-washy mother.

The simple plot drags in these people in an effort to explain why Robert, after being wounded in Dunkirk, should turn out to be a total loss.

Hailed by some as a magnificent piece of work, a novel to boost Miss Bowen to even greater heights in the literary world, this reviewer takes exception to this to the extent of wondering if the author isn't cashing in on fame attained ten years previous with "The Death of the Heart."—V.R.A.

"Pirate" Claims He Got Reputation Working in British Secret Service

NEW YORK, March 19 (CP).—Capt. Dod Orsborne says he was a British intelligence agent when he earned his reputation as a pirate and sailed the Girl Pat across the Atlantic.

The adventure-hunting soldier of fortune tells the story of his amazing voyage and other adventures in a book entitled "Master of the Girl Pat" (Doubleday), published here recently.

It is a description of espionage, sabotage, pearl-hunting, a safari to kill a man-eating tiger, warfare and escape from a Japanese prison camp through a river full of crocodiles.

But Orsborne's story of the Girl Pat is the highlight for Canadian readers who remember the epic voyage. It began, he says, as his second trip for British naval intelligence. The first had taken him through the Mediterranean before the Spanish civil war began. He tells of blowing up some Italian planes destined for France, which put him in wrong with both Italians and the Spanish Fascists. He says he got in wrong with the French by dumping overboard some rifles also headed for the Pesuoh forces. On the way home he was jailed by suspicious Spaniards at Corcubon, on the Atlantic coast, but broke jail and escaped.

"I was much too impulsive and much too inclined to get into trouble and to get well known to ever become a really good agent," Orsborne admits. He had to argue hard to get a new assignment. His orders were to go to Gibraltar, with no landings en route.

DISOBEYED ORDERS

Instead, he went back to Corcubion, tricked the Spanish count who had arrested him into giving him money and supplies to help Franco, then sailed south along the African coast. A Spanish consul opposing Franco paid him to blow up a railway bridge near Safi, in French Morocco. Orsborne says he was told the line was being built with German capital, so Franco's troops could be moved quickly from the Spanish Sahara to Morocco for an invasion of Spain.

A call at Dakar, just after the explosion, to meet another British agent was almost his undoing. One of his crew deserted and tipped the French authorities that Orsborne was "La Capitaine Solitaire," the nickname the French gave him. Only a storm saved the Girl Pat. She was hit by a French naval shell before the gale hid her from pursuing ships.

NO COMPASS

The crewman who deserted had left no compass or charts aboard. There was no fuel and little food. By the time the storm ended Orsborne and his mates—Hector Harris, Ginger Stephens, and his brother, Jimmie Orsborne—were 500 miles southwest of Dakar.

He sailed westward instead of back to Africa, he said, because the trade winds would speed him across the Atlantic. He estimated the trip at two weeks. Actually it took 16 days to Devil's Island. By that time Orsborne and the crew were too weak to stand and sailed the boat by crawling on hands and knees.

Sequel to the trip was a 12-month sentence at Wormwood Scrubs, the London prison. Orsborne infers he wouldn't have been tried if the Admiralty could have admitted it had any connection with him.

The yast few chapters of Orsborne's book is largely devoted to an unsuccessful effort he made after the World War to sail again across the Atlantic from east to west. He and a Spanish stowaway who sneaked aboard his little Lovely Lady while she was in La Coruna for supplies got only 1,200 miles off North America before being picked up, starving and battered, by a United States freighter.

Times Change In Britain

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., March 19 (AP).—Because of the paper shortage, many English butchers have had a sign posted: "Please bring your own paper."

Now, a Southampton butcher has blossomed out with this sign:

"We have plenty of paper. Bring your own meat."

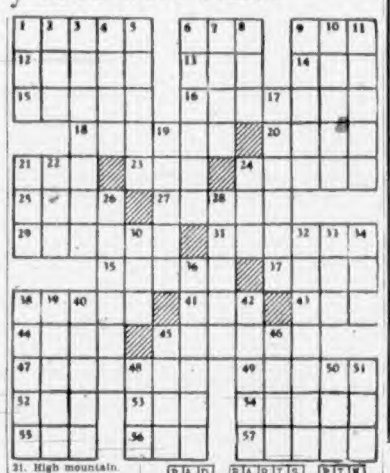

The Odd Corner

All good Baconians know it as a fact: it wasn't William Shakespeare who wrote "Hamlet," etc.; it was Francis Bacon. Recently convened at luncheon in London to celebrate their hero's 338th birthday, they learned that their brotherhood, now 66 years old, numbered a full 500 members, including 100 Americans.

Life in modern Britain is uncertain, though, even for Baconians. The official name of the brotherhood has been changed from the Bacon Society to the Francis Bacon Society. This is, the honorary secretary said, because his literary researches to discredit Shakespeare were being interrupted, day and night and intolerably, by telephone calls.

The callers were not irate scholars, but irate shoppers, vexed by the quality and quantity of that scarce and rationed commodity—Bacon.—New York Times.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

Priest Describes Religion Behind the Iron Curtain

"God's Underground," by Father George (Ryerson Press, Toronto, $3.75).

With the conviction of Cardinal Joseph Mindszenty and his colleagues in Hungary and the sentencing of 18 Protestant ministers in Bulgaria, this story of the church's fight against Communism behind the Iron Curtain couldn't be more timely.

Father George's experiences will provide an answer to any pondering as to the actual fight going on in Europe between the church and the Kremlin. This forthright priest tells his side of the story through Gretta Palmer, well-known magazine and newspaper writer.

For the sake of security, since he is back working in the Soviet satellite countries, the name Father George is fictitious.

MAIN POINT

Father George's main point is that religion, while fettered and almost wiped out in most of Soviet Europe, still carries on with the fervor of a resistance movement. Hence the book's title.

Religion has no place in the Comintern's ideology, and from the first the Kremlin made an all-out drive to eradicate it. When thrown into an alliance with the Western world when the Nazis invaded Russia, the Comintern, as a sop to the Allies, announced that the Russian people could worship as they pleased.

The end of the World War soon dispelled the rosy illusion of a kinder, more tolerant Russia. Events have proven that the original plan for world revolution had merely been shelved temporarily.

NOW BACK

The same applies to religion. Atheism is now back in its proper perspective, says the author. Once again priests are being persecuted, religion is relegated to dark cellars, secret meetings and masses held at the risk of torture, imprisonment and even death.

All this is ably described by Father George. He tells of his own experiences from the days of fighting the Nazis with the Partisan militia. He organized an anti-Fascist group, aided Jews escape persecution, and then set out to find out the number of practicing Christians in Russia. According to Father George, their numbers are legion. This is where the reader must make up his own mind.

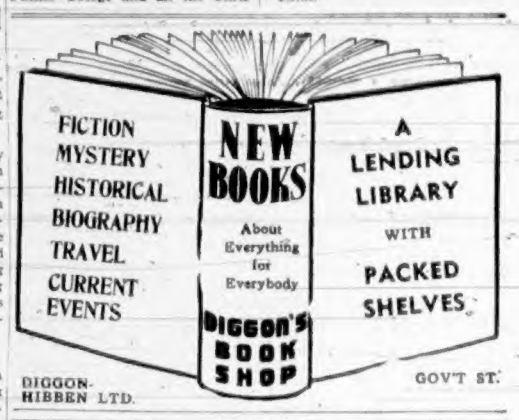

ONE CHURCH

True, there is a church in Russia under the Comintern, the Orthodox Russian Patriarch. But the underground clergy, within the Iron Curtain believes the appointed priests of the Kremlin will disappear when it suits the Politburo.

Father George toured Russia giving secret masses to Roman Catholics, talking to and comforting the Orthodox faithful, Jews, Protestants and Moslems. He converted and baptized seven members of the M.V.D.

He was imprisoned, tortured, and ordered to sign similar confessions to those already "signed" by Cardinal Mindszenty and his colleagues. The M.V.D. were not interested in which confession was signed. Not one charged Father George with the things he had been doing in Yugoslavia or Russia. Merely to be a priest and trying to aid Christians is to be an enemy of Communists. That is all they seek. In the Communist creed to love God is to be a traitor to Communism. Religion must go.

In just such a determined fashion Father George and all the Christian leaders throughout Europe are convinced that religion not only must stay, but is still very much in evidence and will eventually win. —J.R.A.

Boy Scouts Plan Day's Outing For Bronze Arrowhead Course

Fifty-four Boy Scouts, under Freeman King, Victoria district executive Boy Scout commissioner, will leave this morning for a one-day "exercise" at Blink Bonnie Farm on East Saanich Road.

Donald Hamer, assistant district commissioner, will be second-in-command.

The exercise is part of the training in the bronze arrowhead course.

The 54 Scouts will make up four troops. They will assemble in full Scout uniform, at Boy Scout Headquarters, 1034 Johnston Street, at 9.30 a.m., and will be conveyed to the farm in trucks.

Map reading, signalling, compass readings and various other subjects included in the course will be on the syllabus.

Each Scout will cook his own individual ration at lunch.

The troops will return to the city at 5 p.m.

Last night classes in the course were held at Scout Headquarters with Commissioner King instructing.

Rural Taverns In England Quiet Havens

LONDON, March 19 (CP).—Too often nowadays an English pub means an ornate modern building with parking lot, electric lighting, chromium seats, extensive whisky, watery beer, no cigarettes and a radio that renders conversation difficult.

But in ancient England there still are many ancient taverns with oil lamps, gnarled oak seats, beer as good as present regulations allow and aged villagers whose talk is considered cheap at a pint an hour.

SMALLEST PUB

Title of the smallest pub in England has for years been claimed by the Leathern Bottle, near the hamlet of Dunsmore in the Buckingham Chilterns. No roads leads to this pub—only a narrow pathway—and the nearest village of any size is a good hour's walk. The bar is also the living-room, where the customers sit alongside their 80-year-old host and his family.

A tavern with a proud tradition for hospitality is the Horse Shoe perched on the border of England and Wales in the village of Llanyblodwell. Mine host Arthur Lloyd says it has been in his family "without a break" since the days of Henry VII.

Historic in a different way is Saint Crispin's Inn situated on the fringe of Berkshire in Windsor Forest—the only pub in England that holds its own religious service. Once a year on Christmas Eve the local vicar comes into the bar, downs a pint and then invites the bar customers to join in a short service.

BELOW SEA LEVEL

The highest village pub in England topographically speaking is The Cat and Fiddle near Macclesfield Forest in Cheshire. The lowest is believed to be at Saint Mawes, a small harbor town in Cornwall. The house itself being on the shore is at sea level but the bar, being in the basement, is below it.

The Royal Standard of England, only inn of its name in the United Kingdom, stands in Buckinghamshire along a quiet country lane that branches off the main Oxford road a mile or two out of Beaconsfield.

Only inn to have a living inn-sign is The Beehive, standing on the Great North Road about 50 miles from London. The sign is a real hive and has real bees in it.

The Old Bell at Finedon, near Kettering, Northamptonshire, has a sign over its mantelpiece: "The Oldest Licenced House in England founded 1042."

New Premier Has Trouble

NANKING, March 19 (AP). — China's Nationalist Government, harassed by Communist rebellion in the South and reports of Red troop movements in the North, hit more snags today in its attempt to assemble a cabinet.

Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, the new Premier, was at least three days behind schedule in completing his slate of ministers — and possibly losing ground.

The time element was important. Ho's appointment was rushed through a week ago to hasten organization of a Government to deal with the Communists on the delicate question of peace or more civil war. In addition, internal stability has been declining steadily.

NATIVE SONS

Native Sons of British Columbia Post No. 1 will hold a meeting in the Diggon-Hibben Hall, Langley Street, on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Election of officers, to attend the Grand Post convention in Vancouver April 29 and 30, will take place.

Many Leave Hungary After Trials

HEIDELBERG, March 19 (NANA) —The Hungarian Communist regime has reinforced its border guards along the Austrian frontiers to halt the new wave of political fugitives westward, developed since the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, according to news from Vienna.

It is estimated that more than 1,000 persons are coming monthly from Hungary into the United States and British zones of Austria. Apparently they live on the Austrian black market, for there no longer is any provision to take care of them in D.P. camps.

NOT WORRIED

Formerly, the Hungarian Communist Government did not regard the flight of so-called Fascists as dangerous; in fact, they winked openly at underground escapes as a means of infiltrating Red agents westward and obtaining dollars, pounds, and marks for propaganda, as well as Austrian schillings. Budapest seems concerned about the new fugitives, mostly Roman Catholic workers and tradesmen or farmers anxious to escape a future collective farm system.

The Austrian frontier, about 300 miles long, has been manned with five battalions of police and special patrol units. A similar system is being created on the Czech frontier.

A new law decrees severe penalties for unauthorized border crossers. In one woodland area, beloved of runaways, all trees have been cut down and watch towers erected. The mobile detachments operate in ex-American jeeps, aided by police dogs for night work. All officers over captain are Russian specialists in frontier control, or Hungarian Reds trained at Moscow.

Tito Regime Using Priests In Demolition

NEW YORK, March 15 (NANA).—Priests in Yugoslavia, condemned to hard labor by Marshal Tito's regime, are being used to demolish churches, says a Rome dispatch to the leading Swiss daily, Tribune De Geneve.

Cited as source of this information was Francesco Durio, an Italian repatriated a short while ago from Yugoslavia where he had been detained in the same camp as Catholic Archbishop Stepinac of Zagreb, the Primate of Croatia, serving a sentence of 16 years at hard labor.

The informant said that in at least one case that he saw, priests were detailed to work on the partial demolition of a church at Stragradiska, which was being converted into a movie house. Those who appeared to be laggard in their work were kicked by guards.

Archbishop Stepinac and other higher church authorities, however, were merely required to work the camp's gardens and cabbage patches as their hard labor.

Ducks waddle because their legs are placed so far back on their bodies.

Eden Resigns Many Posts In Businesses

NEW YORK, March 19 (NANA). Anthony Eden, former British Foreign Minister and deputy leader of the Conservative party, is reported giving up a number of financial directorships in London in order to be able to take more of the burdens of Opposition Leader from the shoulders of aging wartime Premier Winston Churchill.

The newspaper Informaciones of Madrid says that Eden has resigned as "administrator" (chairman of the board usually; sometimes general manager) of the great Anglo-Spanish copper-mining concern, Rio Tinto, as well as from other "city" posts. Eden was a member of the boards of directors of the Westminster Bank, the Westminster Foreign Bank and the Phoenix Assurance Co.

The Rio Tinto resignation would, of course, have other significance. Eden is listed as foreign minister in the Conservative "shadow government" expected to be presented to the King for approval if his party wins the 1950 general elections. As such, his connection with a foreign business, even if British-financed, might be held undesirable. And any link with Spain would be ammunition for the Laborites in the fierce election campaign expected.

By Plane to New York on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Derek C. Todd are pictured following their wedding which took place at St. Matthias' Church yesterday afternoon.

Noreen Friker, Derek Todd Married at St. Matthias'

St. Matthias' Church was the scene of a wedding of wide interest Saturday afternoon when Noreen Lenten Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Friker, 3006 Chambers Street, exchanged vows with Derek Chatwin Todd, younger son of Mrs. William C. Todd, St. Charles Street, and the late Mr. Todd, and grandson of two prominent Victoria families, the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Todd and of Mrs. R. P. Butchart, 906 St. Charles Street and the late Mr. Butchart.

Reverend K. L. Sandercock read the nuptial service in a setting of plum blossoms, tulips and iris. The organ interludes were played by Mr. L. Partington.

CHAMPAGNE CREPE

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in an afternoon gown of champagne crepe fashioned with peplum front, full skirt, long sleeves, and bodice fastened with self covered buttons from high neck to waistline. Her chic hat of smoky-cocoa-brown fine straw was trimmed with champagne and cocoa-colored roses and finished with matching grosgrain ribbon bow and short streamers. A single strand of pearls was her only ornament and a cascade bouquet of pink roses, hyacinths and violets completed her ensemble.

Miss Teresa Todd, sister of the groom, wearing a turquoise crepe gown, the skirt featuring graceful gathering in the back with hat of natural-colored straw, the brim edged with deep red roses, was the bride's only attendant. A bouquet of pink roses and hyacinths arranged in a cascade, complemented her costume.

The bridegroom had Mr. Geoffrey Robbins as best man and his cousin Mr. Ian Ross and Mr. James McArthur as ushers.

OAK BAY RECEPTION

The reception was held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel where Mrs. Friker and Mrs. Todd assisted the young couple in receiving their guests. The table, artistically decorated, was centred with the three-tiered cake. The health of the bride was proposed by Mr. James McKenzie.

Mr. and Mrs. Todd are flying to New York for their honeymoon and will return to Victoria to make their home. For travelling, the bride chose a claret-red wool suit with matching topcoat, navy blue felt hat and accessories, and a corsage of white freesias.

Bride Wears Groom's Gift Of Pearls

At a double-ring ceremony Friday evening at Belmont United Church, Rev. C. R. McGillivray solemnized the marriage of Elsie Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Dudman, Keating, V.I., to Donald Laird, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Laird, 1639 Pembroke Street. Baskets of Spring flowers formed the background for the service and the guest pews were marked with white satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in white satin fashioned with net yoke, the off-shoulder neckline finished with a satin ruffle, lily point sleeves and pointed waistline over the full skirt. Her veil of illusion net was arranged under a tiara of seed pearls and billowed to the floor en train. A cascade bouquet of pink roses, and white and pink carnations completed her costume. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. Attending the bride were Miss Vida Wood, maid of honor, wearing pink moire taffeta with lace yoke and puff sleeves and carrying a bouquet of pale pink snapdragons, blue iris and white heather; and Miss Deanna Dudman, junior bridesmaid, sister of the bride, frocked in pale blue taffeta with sweetheart neck, puff sleeves and full skirt, and carrying yellow carnations, daffodils and white heather. Both wore long net mitts, and lace poke-brims trimmed with flowers, to match their gowns.

The best man was Mr. Tom Conlin and acting as ushers were Mr. John Furneston and Mr. Ted Bradley.

The reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, where plum blossoms and daffodils decorated the rooms. The parents of the newlyweds assisted them in receiving their guests. The table was centred by the three-tiered cake flanked by pale pink carnations. Mr. Fred Carrington gave the toast to the bride.

For a Mainland honeymoon, the bride wore a slate-blue gabardine suit with topcoat and accessories in navy blue, and a pink rosebud corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Laird will live in Vancouver.

Crime Comics Subject of Talk

On Friday night, Mrs. T. W. A. Gray, a member of the P.-T.A. national committee on comic magazines, and chairman of the Victoria committee, spoke to the Nursery School Association on the effect that these books are having on the rising generation.

She stressed the fact that all so-called comic magazines are not harmful—indeed, she showed some quite attractive books dealing with such subjects as the New Testament stories, children's classics and Walt Disneys—but she did emphasize the manifold dangers arising out of the books which deal exclusively with crime, sex and violence.

Mrs. Gray ended with some practical suggestions for overcoming this problem, chief of which, she felt, must be the influence of parents at home, in the provision of a cultured background, with attractive and suitable books for the children from an early age. Better school libraries should also help, but in the long run, she said, it is the influence of the home that really counts.

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. The "pain cry" should have instant attention. For the feverish distress due to gas on stomach or bowels or those common digestive upsets, give Baby's Own Tablets at once. Mrs. May Mundy, of Toronto, finds they work every time.

"I am the mother of nine children, three of them prim babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."

Equally effective for constipation, upset stomach, teething troubles and other minor ailments of babies.

Combines Successful Career With Marriage

By EILEEN LEAROYD

BETTIE Kerkham is sorry for the girl who feels she must sacrifice a career for the sake of marriage. She is even sorrier for the girl who renounces marriage to fulfill a career.

"It is so simple to have both," she says. And Mrs. Kerkham speaks from experience.

She has a husband, Roger, who is a busy commercial photographer; two children, [illegible] and Richard, and a very marketable talent for all types of design.

[illegible] things she has never designed are houses and ships.

She has designed everything from [illegible] lapel pins to embroidered tablecloths and illustrations for a book of poetry. She is also a free-lance writer and a pastel artist of [illegible] merit.

[illegible] Housekeeping magazine buys most of Mrs. Kerkham's designs for oil-cloth toys, house coats, hats, embroidered pillow cases and hand [illegible], table mats, needle weaving, doilies, baby bonnets, doll clothes, applique work, evening bags, Christmas decorations, painted screens and cover designs. She also sells to Vogue and McCall's Needlework and Mechanix Illustrated.

TREES AND GRASS

Born in Albany, N.Y., Bettie graduated from Skidmore College, where she studied art and design.

She met her [illegible] husband during the depression when they were both living in a co-operative [illegible] in Yonkers.

"The co-op idea was wonderful," Bettie said, "most of the people living there were students and artists. We helped with the housework and cooking and didn't pay much rent, and it saved our lives through the depression."

After Roger and Bettie were married they moved to Greenwich Village, and there they stayed for eight years. They thought it was heaven because they had a fish-pool, grass and some trees.

When war broke out, Roger Kerkham returned to Canada to join the R.C.A.F., and in 1943 Bettie and the children came to Victoria to live. Bettie never wants to go back to New York. Roger, who recently won two blue ribbons at the Northwest Photo Exhibit in Seattle, likes it here, too.

Bettie modestly writes off her productive ideas to a "flea mind" which just naturally jumps madly from one idea to another.

PINS AND PASTELS

Her latest idea is lapel pins made from fine veneer woods. She has already designed and made several [illegible]. She isn't interested in marketing the pins, just the designs.

Made from imported [illegible], like Padauk, Zebrano, Peroba and Amaranth, 1-28 [illegible] thick and backed by balsa wood, the finished article is sanded, lacquered and polished to a high lustre.

"Most of my designs were suggested to me by the grain and color of the wood," Mrs. Kerkham said. "The Australian Yuba suggested light striking water, so I made that into a fish-bowl and I made a monkey pin from walnut butt because it suggested [illegible]."

Although she sold [illegible] drawings before leaving New York, Bettie is working on a new collection and hopes to hold an exhibit soon.

Mrs. Kerkham is looking a little harassed these days. Recently her home seems to have shrunk. It just isn't big enough for herself, her husband, two lively children, hundreds of designs, Roger's photographic equipment, scores of pastel drawings and 35 recently-acquired oil paintings, willed to her by her late artist cousin, Alice Judson, of New York.

Bettie is frantically scheming schemes and undoubtedly with her talent for design will think of something.

Yugoslavs' Firm Stand Surprises Russia, West

BELGRADE, March 19 (Reuters).—Seven months of Cominform dispute have shown that Yugoslav Communists and the majority of the people are still firmly behind Marshal Tito—if anything, more so than before.

This has surprised not only the Russians, some of whom were predicting the downfall of Tito last Summer, but also some Western observers who doubted the unity of the Yugoslav Communist Party.

The question is considered to be Will Tito be able to continue his independent stand in face of Cominform economic sanctions, which the Yugoslavs say are aimed at wrecking their five-year industrialization program?

The answer may depend on the willingness of the West to supply Yugoslavia with the capital equipment and machinery which is needed to make the plan a success.

Failure of the plan would weaken Tito's position, although his popularity is so great that it would not necessarily lead to his fall.

TRADE NEEDS

Diplomatic opinion appears to be in favor of adopting a more positive attitude towards Yugoslavia's trade needs. This point of view now is understood to be under active consideration by the United States State Department.

The argument presumably is that an independent, though Communist Yugoslavia is to be preferred to one subservient to Russia and the Comin[illegible].

Britain is about to start negotiations with Yugoslavia for a long-term trade agreement. Britain, unlike the United States, also has important trade treaties with other East European states.

Cominform charges that the country is moving into the "imperialist camp" ring strangely in the ears of experienced observers who can see little diffence from the usual "Marx-Leninist" pattern of a Communist-[illegible] state.

DIFFERENT BRAND

Nevertheless, some observers profess to see more popular elements creeping into the Yugoslav brand of Communism, which differs from the others only in its self-conscious independence.

The Government is probably least popular among more conservative and richer sections of the peasants, who resent its collectivization policy.

The existence of opposition to Tito in the Communist Party ranks has been freely admitted. No figures, however, have been published.

Young Readers Now Learn Whole Words

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—A little girl of seven in Grade II at a Vancouver school can already read faster and better than many [illegible].

She's one of hundreds throughout the city, doing just as well or better, and thinking nothing about it.

Reading has been quietly revolutionized within recent years in Vancouver primary schools. The 10,000 children in primary grades are trained from the outset to read with the eyes and the mind, not [illegible] the tongue and the ear.

They don't even learn to identify the letters of the alphabet until their second year at school. Instead, they learn to recognize whole words, phrases and sentences and to picture in their minds the objects referred to.

The result was summed up by Miss Elsie Roy, primary supervisor for the Vancouver School Board. "Reading, the passkey to every subject, used to be a dead thing. Now we vitalize it for the children, through reality, through socialized self-expression. The results are gratifying."

Judge Denies New Trial To Professor

SEATTLE, March 19 (AP).—Dr Ralph Gundlach, convicted Wednesday on charges of contempt of the State Un-American Activities Committee, was denied a new trial by Superior Court Judge William J. Wilkins today.

Judge Wilkins tentatively set April 2 for sentencing of the ousted University of Washington professor. The charge is a misdemeanor punishable by one year in the county jail, a $1,000 fine or both.

The charges against Gundlach grew out of committee hearings into alleged Communist infiltration into the university. Gundlach refused to answer whether he was or ever had been a member of the Communist party. He has since denied being a Communist.

Four other Canwell witnesses are scheduled to go on trial on similar charges. Dr Herbert J. Phillips was acquitted of contempt charges by a Superior Court jury a little more than a week ago.

Germans Flock To Become World Citizens

NEW YORK, March 11.—(NANA).—Garry Davis's "World Citizens' Movement" is spreading like wildfire in Germany, it appears from a survey in the Hanover weekly, Die [illegible].

A host of associations and political organizations have taken up Davis's ideas and slogans, [illegible] of the groups in keen competition with others. As a result, a combining [illegible] has begun [illegible] some prominent would-be "world citizens" have already been purged. Among these is Frau Gisela Schlueter Von Mach, who had operated one of the most active registration centres in Germany and had assumed the title of "Weltbuergerin No. 1" (female world citizens, No. 1).

According to the Hanover paper, Garry Davis has sent his personal representative, a Frenchman named Louis Clappier, to Germany to repudiate Frau Schlueter Von [illegible] and appoint a new director of registrations in Germany. He is Stephan Zickler of Frankfort where headquarters of the German World Citizens movement now are located. Other "authorized" registration centres exist at Hamburg, Hanover, Stuttgart, [illegible], Dortmund and Coblenz.

The movement's appeal in Germany is not surprising since German citizenship is not valued very highly today.

Kitchenware Provides Clue To Hard Metal

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP).—A manufacturer credits muffin pans with pointing the way to aluminum construction, as strong as steel.

John M. Meyers, president of United Aircraft [illegible], Incorporated, has developed a way of fabricating aluminum products designed for holding the loads and taking the knocks of the harder metal.

He has his mind particularly on freight car and motor truck bodies.

This is not entirely new, since aluminum has been used in the past for truck and freight car bodies. Meyers says, however, his new process lends a rigidity and durability comparable to steel.

HONEYCOMB EFFECT

He has developed a three-ply construction of two flat outside sheets sandwiching a spun aluminum centre section. The centre section is capped like a muffin pan. A cross section of such aluminum ply has a honeycomb effect.

Likening this type of construction to the cantilever bridge, Meyers says it has as much structural strength.

One fly in the ointment is that aluminum currently is scarce. Manufacturers probably will have to wait some time before turning to aluminum for large products.

Meanwhile, United is concentrating on kitchenware, a business it got into in an unusual way. The 30-year-old company, with factories in Dayton and Los Angeles and offices in New York, formerly produced only aircraft equipment. Two years ago it changed hands and Meyers became president.

IDLE MACHINE

One day he was browsing through the Dayton factory and discovered a dust covered machine standing idle in a corner.

He learned it was built on a Swedish patent, which the company had acquired, and was the first automatic multiple application of the age-old process of spinning metal by hand.

In this process, a rapidly spinning part—cylindrical or conical—presses against a flat sheet of metal and fashions a cup in it. A multiple spinning machine will make a number of cups in a single piece of metal. The result looks like a muffin pan.

So Meyers started making muffin pans this way from a single piece of [illegible].

BRANCHED OUT

The company branched out and now makes more than a dozen types of aluminum kitchenware.

Meyers says the kitchenware line has boomed to such an extent in the last 18 months that it currently is pulling most of United's financial load.

"It is a case of the tail wagging the dog," he says.

MOSTLY WATER

Three-quarters of the world's area is water.

No Prize For Elly; In Doghouse

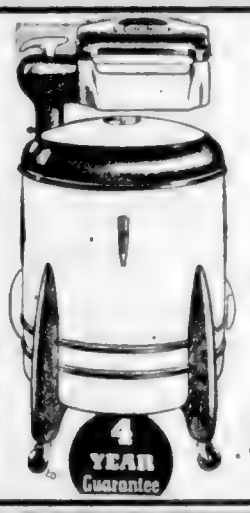

Elly didn't win any prizes last night at the Victoria City Kennel Club's championship show at the Bay Street Armoury.

In fact, says his owner, Thomas Waters of Seattle, she behaved like a mongrel.

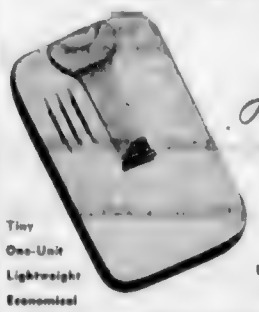

Elly, a red 23-pound female Irish terrier, lashed out at another dog during the show, snapped her leash, and bounded out the Armoury door.

Anyone finding the valuable canine is requested to communicate with the Victoria City Kennel Club.

Pressure on Independent Tito Seen As First Soviet Move Against Pact

LONDON, March 20 (Sunday) (Reuters).—The form and timing of any Russian counter-stroke to the Atlantic pact published last week has become a subject of discussion in diplomatic circles here.

A strong temptation exists to interpret the recent wholesale reshuffle in the Soviet Administration and persistent reports of troop movements by the Russian satellites around the Yugoslav frontiers as connected with some such impending move.

EAST'S DEMONSTRATION

The Atlantic pact represents the increased consolidation of the West. Russia may believe a corresponding demonstration of the ideological, economic and military solidarity of her own sphere is necessary. It is arguable that the first logical step would be an all-out effort to eliminate the Yugoslav "heresy" of Premier Tito by forcing Yugoslavia back into the Cominform fold.

The partition of Germany has been practically completed with the announcement Saturday of a constitution for the Russian zone of Germany and Berlin. Observers expect the next move will be an early treaty between Russia and Eastern Germany and the admission of Eastern Germany to full membership in the East European Economic Council.

To offset the blow which the revival of Germany would be to Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, it is suggested that simultaneous propaganda would be concentrated on intensified industrial development in those two countries to meet the needs traditionally filled by West Germany. With Germany halved, such an aim would in any case form a natural part of Moscow's economic planning for its sphere of influence.

HARDLY POSSIBLE

Such an achievement is hardly conceivable without the full exploitation of the mineral resources of Yugoslavia in the framework of the East European Economic Council.

Significantly, Yugoslavia, in spite of her unchanged attitude in foreign policy, has recently shown a marked tendency to turn to the West for export markets for some of her most important mineral resources, including antimony, copper and even iron ore.

If Moscow has decided that realization of an over-all economic plan depends upon a politically and economically submissive Yugoslav Government, the nerve war against Yugoslavia and the reported movements of Bulgarian and Hungarian and Romanian troops on her frontiers may really be the prelude to drastic action.

West Berlin Changes Funds

BERLIN, March 19 (Reuters).—West Berlin housewives crowded food stores today in a last rush to buy next week's rations in cheap Eastern (Soviet zone) marks before the currency change-over which is expected this week-end.

Unofficial reports from Allied and German sources agreed that the West mark would become sole legal tender in the Western sectors of Berlin tomorrow. That would mean that from Monday rations will have to be purchased in Western marks, which are at present four times as valuable as Eastern marks.

The announcement of the change-over, regarded as an indication that the Western allies no longer expect to reach an early compromise with the Russians on the Berlin question, is expected tonight.

MUSKIE PONDS

LACHINE, Que. (CP).—The city of Lachine will receive $2,000 for construction of muskellunge ponds for under a recent grant authorized the restocking of Lake St. Louis, by the Provincial Government.

Cuts in Income Tax Field Likely to Be Main Change

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP). — Your guess, Mr. Taxpayer, as to the contents of the 1949-50 budget, probably is as good as any—except the "chosen few."

The select include Finance Minister Abbott, advisers and some Cabinet colleagues. They have been working on the budget, to be brought down in the Commons Tuesday at 7.30 p.m. EST., but they are unanimously keeping their sworn oath of secrecy.

Around parliamentary corridors, the conjecture is that the main lift will come in the income tax field.

EXEMPTION BOOST

Some believe the basic personal income-tax exemptions of $750 for single persons and $1,500 for married persons will be increased. Others believe the lift will come in the form of an across-the-board reduction, retroactive to January 1.

Outside the personal income-tax field, members feel there may be some reduction of the 8 per cent sales tax, removed almost entirely last year from foods, but left on articles that add to the cost of living.

There has been a demand for removal of the taxes on soft drinks, chocolate bars and similar items, and the speculation is that they will be dropped. Many are willing to wager that the 25 per cent tax on jewelry will be abolished, or reduced.

Some members believe there will be substantial changes in the tariffs. And Mr. Abbott, possibly unintentionally, added fuel to their argument, Friday.

EXCHANGE CONTROL

He told the Commons during a discussion on foreign-exchange control he would later "on a more appropriate occasion" have a "good deal" to say about Government efforts to encourage imports from sterling areas.

Ross Thatcher (CCF, Moose Jaw) asked Mr. Abbott pointedly if he meant the budget, but the minister declined to answer.

The Government is cited by some for speculation tax cuts will be heavy.

At the opening of the session, the Throne Speech made this unprecedented reference to possible tax cuts.

"Prosperous conditions now prevailing are being reflected in the buoyant level of national revenue, a condition to which due consideration is being given by my ministers in the preparation of the forthcoming budgetary proposals."

Prominent Merchant Returns From Europe

Mr. George Carr, owner of the Piccadilly Shoppes, Government Street, has just returned by air after visiting England, Scotland, France and Switzerland.

Whilst on the Continent, Mr. Carr made large purchases of fine suits, coats, Scotch woolens and accessories for his Victoria Stores.

The British still maintain their excellent workmanship in the making of fine clothes, and style and quality of their products are recognized the world over, Mr. Carr stated.

More Members Teamsters' Plan

SEATTLE, March 19 (AP).—A spokesman for the A.F.L. teamsters said today a continent-wide check of over-the-road truck drivers was one phase of a program to raise the organization's membership to between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000.

The union now claims a 1,000,000 membership, the largest of any labor group in the world, the spokesman said.

The driver check was planned by the teamsters April 1-15. The survey will be made to assure that all drivers are union members in good standing.

"The driver check is a part of the overall campaign to organize every man and woman employed in the teamster craft in every nook and corner of America," the spokesman said.

"We estimate at the end of the campaign—if and when it's finished—that sometime in the future our membership will be between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000," he said.

The spokesman stressed the "activity will conform with all State and Federal laws."

VOTE MEMORIAL TO TOWN

WINDSOR, N.S. (CP).—Ratepayers here gave the town permission to take over the war memorial community centre in a recent plebiscite. The town will assume ownership as a result of a 353 to 84 vote.

B.C. Products '49 Fair Opens in City Tuesday

The British Columbia Products '49 Fair will open Tuesday at the Bay Street Armoury.

Last-minute plans for the five-day exhibition of British Columbia products have been completed, Jack Child, chairman of the fair, said yesterday. It is expected at least

JACK CHILD

36,000 persons will visit the Armoury to see the fair.

Doors will be open daily from 1 p.m. until 11 p.m., except the final day, when fair hours will be from 10 a.m. until 11 p.m.

A daily feature will be drawings for valuable door prizes to be given away each night, and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. A new combination radio and record player will be given away by the fair committee on the opening night.

Door prizes on other nights include beautiful rugs, cash awards, a mirrored glass serving tray, skirt-length material, a coffee table, and other merchandise. Winning tickets will be drawn each evening at 9:45. Mr. Child emphasizes that holders of winning tickets must be in the Armoury at the time the number is drawn in order to claim the prize.

In addition, more than 100 fine prizes have been selected for winners of nightly quiz contests, in which questions will be based on [illegible] products on display. Quizmaster will be Al Collins, [illegible] CJVI announcer.

B.C. Drive Illustrated By Home Oil

An outstanding example of British Columbia enterprise and industrial growth is seen in the development of Home Oil distributors Ltd., a 100-per cent British Columbia oil company.

From a small, Vancouver-based operation in 1926, the company has grown to province-wide proportions, with more than 1,000 families on its payroll. The firm maintains 37 modern distributing plants throughout British Columbia; it controls more than 300 service stations and 35 marine stations up and down the Coast, it operates its own fleet of trucks, tank cars and coastal supply ships.

TWO POLICIES

Two policies have contributed largely to the company's growth: First, determination to supply the finest-quality petroleum products to British Columbia motorists and industry, second, service at all stations and depots must be modern, friendly and complete.

The independent dealer organization is one of the most interesting phases of company operations. Each dealer is an independent businessman, working within his own neighborhood and maintaing his staff and station facilities under the company's general direction.

To help this dealer, and to maintain uniformity of service, the company provides merchandising ideas and sales aids which improve his business without infringing on his individual initiative and rights.

Finally, the company has always supported its own province, by purchasing British Columbia material whenever possible, and by "selling" British Columbia to its customers as a place for a home—and for a vacation.

Mattress Plant Remains Family Affair

Twenty-one years and four addresses after its founding, Victoria's Capitol Mattress Factory remains busier than ever today, working on the basis of its slogan: "Your Comfort is our Business."

The company's story is largely a family affair.

The late Frederick Cawsey started the firm in 1928 at 828 Pisgard Street, bringing to it an experience which began with an apprenticeship served with the Great Western Railroad of England. Subsequently the plant moved to 720 Pisgard Street, then to 641 Pembroke Street, and finally to its present location at 2905 Douglas Street.

J. R. Cawsey, eldest son of the founder, worked with the company for a time, then left for other employment.

SAW WAR SERVICE

Soon afterwards S. T. Cawsey, present manager, joined the company, his work being interrupted by almost six years' war service with the army, mostly in England, the Mediterranean and Europe.

R. H. W. Cawsey worked with the firm from 1930 until his death in 1939. Miss D. Cawsey joined the company in 1935, and Miss J. Cawsey in 1939.

After the founder's death in April, 1948, the company closed for a time, but was reopened in 1946 by S. T. Cawsey. In March, 1947, J. F. Lamport, a veteran of the P.P.C.L.I., came in as a partner with one-third interest.

The plant is busy manufacturing most kinds of mattresses, tents and awnings, and operating a repair service for all these lines.

Company Lists New Chemical

Greatest advancement in boiler water chemicals that has been developed to date is claimed by Goddard & Co. of Sidney, manufacturers of boiler water treatments for many years.

It is claimed that this new chemical will hold the salt from sea water in suspension in a boiler.

The chemical will react in the same manner in any water, holding the impurities and solids in suspension in the form of a flocculant non-adhering mass.

This action takes place when the new chemical is incorporated into a correctly compounded treatment for the analysis of the water.

Not All Manufacturing Carried Out in Plants

Not all of Victoria's manufacturing is done in plants. Some of the most interesting — particularly to the gift-seeker or souvenir hunter — is done by individuals, many of them physically handicapped, in their homes or in hospitals.

Outlet for these attractive and useful articles is one of Victoria's newest stores, the B.C. Craft House. Through this shop the province's craftworkers—veterans and civilians, men and women—can sell their wares, thereby adding to their often meagre incomes.

There is infinite variety to be found at the Craft House. Among leathergoods of all kinds (most of which can be customm ade to suit the buyer) are life-lasting tooled and carved handbags, many from patients in D.V.A. hospitals. The proprietor himself is a paralysed leatherworker.

There is individualized pottery created in Victoria; Nootka baskets, totems, moccasins, handmade by West Coast Indians. The old English are of coppersmithing is represented by warm, hand-beaten trays and bracelets. There is a variety of shellcraft and miniature tea sets, perfect in detail and so small that a complete seven-piece set is arranged on a tray only two and a half inches long.

In addition, there are hooked rugs, handwoven goods, collectors' pieces hand-woven goods, collectors pieces paintings, figurines, ceramics, felt-craft, toys, fancywork and novelties.

Circle Design Identifies Fine Products

For more than half a century the "Malkin's Best" circle has identified a line of high-quality food products produced and paced in British Columbia for discriminating housewives throughout Western Canada.

With more than 300 employees at the Vancouver head office and 11 main distribution points through the province, the W. H. Malkin Co. has become a leading producer and payroll builder in British Columbia's growing food industry.

Through Pacific Coast Packers, Ltd., the company-owned cannery at New Westminster, the firm annually purchases large quantities of high-grade Fraser Valley beans, strawberries, raspberries and other small fruits and vegetables, which appear later on grocers' shelves as canned goods or preserves.

WIDE RANGE

Years of development have seen the well-known circle, once identified exclusively with teas and coffees, appear on containers of a wide range of canned goods, jams, baking powder, spices, extracts, and jelly powders.

Consistently the company has pioneered in the development of new and better methods of blending

Decade of Progress Marked in Province

The last ten years have constituted a decade of great progress for British Columbia. Population, basic industry production, manufacturing and agriculture have all been affected.

Within those ten years, British Columbia's population has increased more than 30 per cent. In 1948 alone, 6,672 families came into the province, most of them from the Prairie Provinces.

Production in the four basic industries has more than doubled, to an estimated annual total of $600,000,000. Of this, 80 per cent is exported to world markets, creating a problem to exercise the minds of both trade and Government officials.

In the field of manufacturing, or secondary industries, the Provincial Department of Trade and Industry reports that about 2,500 firms' production for 1948 will exceed $400,000,000. Today, more than 100,000 people are employed in British Columbia manufacturing, with an average wage or salary of $46.03 weekly—highest in Canada.

This payroll, coupled with the population increase, is especially important to the farmer and rancher, since it represents a larger potential domestic market for farm and ranch products.

Working constantly for the support and development of the province's manufacturing industries is the British Columbia Products Bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade, whose efforts are emphasized in the slogan: "Buy B.C. Products—Build B.C. Payrolls."

Beekeeping Course Offered

Short course in bee-keeping will be held by the British Columbia Honey Producers' Association, at the Prince Robert House, Monday, at 8 p.m.

W. H. Turnbull and V. E. Thordarson, of the apiary section of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, will lecture and demonstrate equipment and methods of handling.

G. V. Wilkinson is secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Honey Producers' Association.

WATER RESEARCH

The Fisheries Research Board of Canada is gathering data on Canada's Pacific Coast, respecting temperature and salinity conditions of coastal areas.

New Showroom And Office Now in Use

Ironcraft Art Metal Products has been operating in Victoria since 1931. The owner, Harold F. Lord, took over the business in 1943 from the late Luther Holling; who had brought to this city many years of experience in England, Texas and California.

The firm recently opened a new showroom and office at the corner of Shelbourne Street and Cedar Hill Crossroad, adjacent to its spacious, well-equipped factory building. Here designs and samples are on display for the convenience of customers.

Many homes in Victoria and up-Island have been beautified by ornamental ironwork fabricated by this company, and a staff of experienced craftsmen is constantly supplying the "Particular Pieces for Particular People" featured by the firm, as well as commercial installations used by the building and contracting trade.

The B.C. PRODUCT

wherever it appears, is a very effective agent for the further development and expansion of the Province. Its quality, texture, price, and packaging all exercise a strong appeal. "Here," says the consumer, "is the product of a country which thinks well of itself and of what it produces."

That is very true. British Columbia has every reason to think well of itself. In a few decades it has thrust itself from a place of comparative obscurity into the very forefront of the industrial life of Canada, become a new industrial empire.

LOOK AT THE FIGURES:

	1946	1947	1948
Logging and Lumbering	$173,471,370	$282,000,000	$325,000,000
Agriculture	118,588,777	125,000,000	135,000,000
Mining	71,807,951	115,000,000	140,000,000
Fishing	43,817,147	60,000,000	70,000,000

In 1948, the estimated gross value of the primary and manufactured products of the Province totalled roughly $1,350,000,000, where in 1947 the total was $1,158,000,000.

Amazing figures indeed for a Province whose population is still just a little over 1,000,000. But strong as it is, rich as it is—a powerful magnet drawing to itself a steady influx from all other parts of Canada and of thousands of eager immigrants from abroad—British Columbia is still very largely what we, its people, make it.

The confidence which we express, the support which we extend to those enterprises which have done and are doing so much to build up our industrial structure, have a vital influence in encouraging new industries to establish themselves, give employment, and contribute to the industrial payroll which is the life-blood of the country.

Nalley's Plant Produces Fresh Foods

An important "transfer point" for British Columbia foods between the gardens and the consumers' tables is the modern plant of Nalley's Ltd., home of garden-fresh food products.

With a total area of 40,000 square feet, this plant has sections for the manufacture of salad dressing, pickles, mixed relishes, sweet pickles, syrup and potato chips.

In the pickle division are giant curing vats for the storage of raw products to ensure a plentiful supply at all times. Acres of cucumbers, cauliflower, cabbage and onions are raised in British Columbia for processing here, providing employment and income for British Columbia growers.

Laid out in endless rows in a special area surrounding the plant are barrels of cucumbers undergoing additional curing for the company's famous "dills." Intricate machines sort, select and scrub to spotless cleanliness all vegetables used in the pickles.

Manufacture of Nalley's fresh food products gives empoyment to nearly 100 British Columbia residents. Every jar packed is checked individually to ensure that its contents conform to the company's exacting standards of quality.

Heating Unit Inexpensive, Clean, Handy

Automatic heating at low cost is claimed by manufacturers of Coal-O-Matic, which they display this week at the annual British Columbia Products Fair at the Bay Street Armoury.

Coal-O Matics are built in six sizes, for the smallest house to the largest city building.

With its mechanical draft, automatically controlled, the furnace will generate 50 per cent more heat when necessary and will hold a steady, even temperature.

There is no over-heating, no ash-pit waste and the fuel consumption is automatically controlled and regulated. Cheapest fuels may be used with better, easier and cleaner heating results.

Coal-O-Matic is automatic with 70 degrees of warmth all the time regardless of outside weather. It starts and stops itself and automatically keeps any desired temperature.

The unit is clean, as there are no ashes, and convenient because smaller low-cost fuels are easier to handle, drafts eliminated and firings few.

IN TOUCH AGAIN

WINKLER, Man. (CP).—Bus service between this town and the outside world was re-established recently after a lapse of about one month. Farms with their own rotary snowploughs helped to clear the local roads.

Convert Rock to Wool Fibre

Picture above is slag rock and coke being fed by conveyors into cupola boiler of Western Insulation Company Ltd., manufacturers of new insulator Westroc Wool. This is just one of many processes which converts solid rock into wool fibres used in low-cost insulation. Plant, costing $250,000, built by B.C. business[illegible], provides most up-to-date facilities for producing top-quality insulation.

Victoria Firm Features Unusual Glass Process

Musical notes worked into a symmetrical pattern or in the form of sheet music constitute but one of the unusual designs cut into glass crystal and mirrored articles produced by the relatively new Victoria firm of Pat-Sali Glass Intaglio, Ltd.

"Intaglio" implies the design is cut into the material and is the opposite of "rilleto" (relief), in which the design is raised from the surface.

In answer to frequent requests for information concerning tools and processes used, the firm is making arrangements to show at the British Columbia Products Fair some of the equipment and actual techniques of the glass-cutter, as well as the finished products.

WIDE VARIETY

The particular phases of glass-work in which the company specializes is naturally the cutting of a wide variety of patterns, designed by its own craftsmen or to customers' specifications, and the manufacture of wall and table mirrors, photograph frames, serving trays, coffee tables. Repair of crystal and cut-glass also forms an important part of the work done at the factory.

Franziska Patsalle, who learned intaglio cutting in Europe, started doing this work in Victoria in 1944 originally as a hobby. By 1947 this had developed to the point where a limited company was formed, but the originator still supervises the workshop and is responsible for much of the designing and the more intricate types of cutting.

Four Varieties Of Salmon Confuse Some

There is much misunderstanding on the part of sales clerks and consumers when canned salmon is discussed, in the opinion of Angus Findlay, sales manager of Nelson Bros. Fisheries Ltd.

Mr. Findlay says there are four species of salmon canned in British Columbia, with sockeye the most popular especially for salads.

He believes most consumers seem to be somewhat vague as to the other three species, cohoe, pink and keta, which are just as wholesome and nutritious as sockeye, varying considerably as to color and oil content.

Sockeye is a comparatively small-sized variety, deep in color and rich in oil and flavor.

Cohoe is a distinctively separate variety, red in color and showing less oil than sockeye.

Pink is a small, delicate fish, colored pink, and trout-like in texture and flavor.

Keta salmon is the palest and is particularly adaptable to hot dishes and most economical.

Nelson Bros. Fisheries Ltd. are now able to offer fairly good supplies of all four varieties to Canadian consumers.

SCOTTISH SOURCE

The expression "between the devil and the deep blue sea" originated in 1637 when a Scottish regiment was trapped between the ocean and Swedish artillery fire.

Victoria Firm Operates Complete Home Service

During the World War a group of Victoria men acted upon the realization that war-improved products and methods could be utilized.

Thus was formed the B.C. Roofers and Agencies, with the object of building a business around the world of tomorrow.

J. N. Findlay, with 25 years' roofing experience, and Chris Dresser, with almost as many, formed the nucleus of the "Showroom of Tomorrow." Today, the company includes seven divisions, each under a partner-manager.

With roofing and insulating under the guidance of the two originals, an appliance division was organized under Reginald Wood, handling top lines of refrigerators, washing machines and other electrical goods and now including oil heating and radio service.

25 YEARS

The flooring department is managed by Bruce Irvine, who has also had 25 years of experience and includes experts on all types of floor laying and finishing.

A. A. Warren is head of the waterproofing department, equipped to waterproof with a guarantee roofs, basements, stucco, concrete and concrete block or any porous construction material.

In addition, to round out a complete service for the house, the company operates a paint department, and distributes many fine lines of tools and equipment for home construction and use.

Others of the partner-managers who share in the firm's personalized service to customers are A. Blowne, co-relation manager, and E. Baldwin, heating engineer.

COMPLICATED PROCESS

The manufacturing of Portland cement requires some 80 separate operations.

Young Firm Leads Field With Luggage

Though young in years, the Vancouver Trunk and Bag Ltd. of Vancouver has built an enviable reputation in the national luggage field.

The company first gained recognition with the well-known line of Travelgard luggage and more recently with the popular American Skyway luggage.

Both lines are manufactured in the company's new plant at Vancouver and will be on show at the British Columbia Products' Fair this week at the Bay Street Armoury.

The firm's products range from school cases to the lightest, most ultra-modern airplane sets. Each piece is designed to represent the best value in its price field.

Vancouver Trunk and Bag Ltd. completed its new plant at 1434 Charles Street, Vancouver, in 1946 and is now rated the most modern luggage plant in Canada. It employs more than 100 persons.

Sales manager is E. S. DeGrachy.

The story of the young company is an example of how planning, progress and good products are building British Columbia payrolls and an important place for British Columbia products in world markets.

For the second time, she plays opposite her husband, John Agar, whose film debut occured in "Fort Appache."

In the supporting cast are Johnny [illegible] who played Shirley's boy-friend in "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer"; Albert Sharpe, Irish stage and screen star and the original "Finlan" of the stage hit "Finnan's Rainbow"; and Josephine Hutchinson, stage actress brought

John Lund has been set by Hal Wallis to star opposite Marie Wilson in the forthcoming comedy, "My Friend [illegible]," which is scheduled for early production at Paramount.

In the film, which is based on Cy Howard's popular radio program of the same name, Lund will play the key role of "Al," Irma's over-ambitious but financially-strapped boy friend. It is a strong comedy part and follows Lund's performances in the [illegible] Paramount comedies, "A Foreign Affair" and "Miss Tatlock's Millions." The role is a complete change of pace from his recent assignment as the romantic hero of Ferrara in Paramount's "Bride of Vengence."

The history of the Nulite Venetian Blind Service dates back through years of experience of Mr. Leighton, as he perfected machines to do the specific work required in the delicate operation of making each portion of the blind perfect.

The standards of Nulite blinds were laid long before manufacture started due to the fact Mr. Leighton took years to build machines capable of doing the work he desired.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4 ♦	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	4 ♠	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South did not make his four-spade bid without "huddling," and (as he explained later) he fully realized that four diamonds might be defeated a trick, whereas four spades might also go down. However, the vulnerability conditions had convinced him that it was worth while trying for the game and rubber.

West opened the club king, and East, not wanting to discourage a continuation too emphatically, played the five-spot. West then cashed the club ace, but when East now played the seven, West shifted to his singleton queen of diamonds.

Dummy's diamond ace was put up, and the spade ace was cashed. When East could not follow suit, the bad news was out, and declarer saw that, at the very best, he would have to do down a trick, losing two spades in addition to the clubs already lost.

Greater dangers, however, lurked in the background. South would have to "find" the heart queen. If he led to his ace and finessed to the ten, and if East could win this trick, he would probably lay down a high diamond, raising the penalty to 800 points. If, however, declarer finessed hearts against East, even if this finesse lost to West it was almost sure that West would not have another diamond, and South would go down only two tricks.

On this sound reasoning, declarer let the heart jack ride through East, and when it held (East did not cover), declarer easily held his loss to 200 points.

City Orchestra Much Advanced From Pioneer Musical Groups

By DOROTHY CRIGHTON

Ever since 1859 there have been [illegible] and symphonic musical groups in Victoria, but the early ones were a far cry from the present Victoria Symphony Orchestra, whose concerts are among the highlights of the cultural life of the community.

The "Victoria Gazette" for May 8, 1859, suggested the addition of "[illegible]" King Croak to the repertoire of the newly-formed Philharmonic Society.

"The Society might also consider the substitution for 'Vi Ravisa' of an adaption in English commencing 'As I view now this town so blue now.' We have [illegible] the first line, but doubtless poets in a more cerulean (?) condition [illegible] the critic can be found to finish it, should the Society adopt our suggestion" the critic of that day remarked.

SAME ISSUE

In the same issue is the account of "the first public musical performance worthy of the name which has occurred in Victoria. The concert was opened with selections from [illegible] Padilla played by the band of H.M.S. Tribune. This was followed by a violin solo, of which the less said the better!"

The critic, however, was a little more charitable to the performers at the concert given on May 21 of that year, pointing out that: "The violin and piano numbers were loudly encored and gave immense satisfaction."

Small instrumental groups met at private homes, and came together for individual performances for charities such as the hospital, all through the years.

Aaron Parfitt had an orchestral group from the Sunday School of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, which played for church affairs around the turn of the century.

Then came the Victoria Amateur Orchestral Society. It had many conductors, among them Howard [illegible] and Drury Price, and gave concerts in the Institute Hall, on Fort Street near Vancouver Street.

Stanley Bulley conducted a string and woodwind ensemble known as "Christ Church Cathedral Orchestra," which under his leadership gave outstanding performances of Brahms' "Requiem," and "The Messiah" by Handel.

Gertrude Huntley Green, now Mrs. Jay Durand of Seattle, led an orchestra which played for many affairs during the Great War, principally for the Red Cross.

All this time, small groups of instrumentalists were continuing to meet in each other's homes for chamber music. Mrs. R. B. Bennett, Mrs. Forest Leeder, Mrs. Bouk, Mrs. Hebden Gillespie, Dr. Augustus Pemberton and Miss Jennie Wilkinson were among the enthusiasts who kept some sort of musical organization functioning all during the 1920's.

Jesse Longfield conducted the St. Andrew's Symphony Orchestra in the early 1930's, and Oak Bay had a pleciteral orchestra about the same time, under the direction of Percy Scott. Francis Gratton conducted the Victoria Little Symphony Orchestra in a concert on May 16, 1932.

In 1939 the Victoria Symphony Orchestra was reorganized under Alfred Prescott. Then in 1942 the Victoria Symphony Society was formed with Melvin Knudsen, and for the first time a group responsible for the business affairs of the orchestra was formed separately from instrumentalists.

This proved a very sound procedure, as Mr. Knudsen [illegible] able to give his whole attention to music. Under him consistent progress was made, and now the Victoria Symphony, directed by Hans Gruber, is a going concern.

This past season has been most satisfactory and the orchestra has received continued public support which undoubtedly will be shown at tomorrow night's concert at the Royal Theatre.

Once Lawyer, Newsman Victorian Is 97 Today

Memories that hark back through careers in law and newspaper work are among the treasured possessions of Henry W. C. [illegible] 454 Kingston Street, who today is celebrating his 97th birthday.

Mr. Boak, who recently spent five months in hospital with a broken hip, has vivid recollections of the birth of the Dominion of Canada.

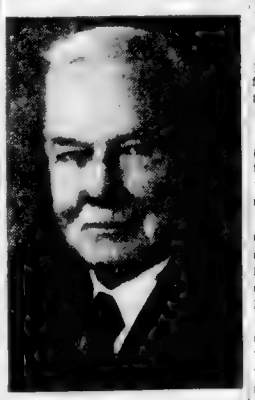

On that occasion July 1, 1867 – he as a boy of [illegible] marched in the grand parade at Halifax, his birthplace, and heard Sir Charles Tupper deliver the Confederation inaugural address.

CITY EDITOR

Mr. Boak worked for the old Halifax Citizen rising to the position of city editor while studying law. He practised law in Nova Scotia for 20 years, moved to Vancouver in 1[illegible] and retired in 1933. An LL.B., he is a retired member of the B.C. and Nova Scotia Law Societies.

His wife was formerly Miss [illegible] Lawson, daughter of the late Col. Charles Fairbanks Lawson, formerly of the British Army, and Mrs. Lawson.

Mr. Boak has two sons in Victoria, Brig. H. E. Boak, DSO, [illegible] tired, and Dr. E. W. Boak. Another son, Arthur, is head of the faculty of history at University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

UNC' BILLY GIVES HIMSELF AWAY

Never had Unc' Billy Possum played that old trick of his better than he was playing it now. Farmer Brown's Boy knew that Unc' Billy was only pretending to be dead yet so well did Unc' Billy pretend that it was hard work for Farmer Brown's Boy to believe what he was sure was so, that Unc' Billy was very much alive and only waiting for a chance to slip away.

They were half way from the hen yard to the house when Bowser the Hound came to meet his master. "Now we shall see what we shall see," said Farmer Brown's Boy as Bowser came trotting up. "If Unc' Billy can stand the test I'll take off my hat to him every time we meet thereafter."

He held Unc' Billy out to Bowser and Bowser sniffed him all over.

He held Unc' Billy out to Bowser and Bowser sniffed him all over.

Just imagine that! Just think of being nosed and sniffed at by one of whom you were terribly afraid and not so much as twitching an ear. Farmer Brown's Boy dropped Unc' Billy on the ground and Bowser rolled him over and sniffed at him and then looked up at him as much as to say: "This fellow doesn't interest me. He's dead. He must be the fellow I saw go under the henhouse last night. How did you kill him?"

Farmer Brown's Boy laughed and picked Unc' Billy up by the tail again. "He's fooled you all right old fellow and you don't know it," said he to Bowser as the latter pranced on ahead to the house. The mother of Farmer Brown's Boy was in the doorway watching them approach.

"What have you there?" she demanded. "I declare, if it isn't a Possum! Where did you kill him? Was he the cause of all that racket among the chickens?"

Farmer Brown's Boy took Unc' Billy into the kitchen and dropped him on a chair. Mrs. Brown came over to look at him closer.

Farmer Brown's Boy took Unc' Billy into the kitchen and dropped him on a chair. Mrs. Brown came over to look at him closer.

"Poor little fellow," said she. "Poor little fellow. It was too bad he got into mischief and had to be killed. I don't suppose he knew better. Somehow, it always seems wrong to me to kill these little creatures just because they get into mischief when all the time they don't know that they are in mischief." She stroked Unc' Billy gently.

The eyes of Farmer Brown's Boy twinkled. He went over to a corner and pulled a straw from his mother's broom. Then he returned to Unc' Billy and began to tickle Unc' Billy's nose. Mrs. Brown looked puzzled. She was puzzled.

"What are you doing that for?" she asked.

"Just for fun," replied Farmer Brown's Boy and kept on tickling Unc' Billy's nose. Now Unc' Billy could stand having his tail pinched and [illegible] carried head down and being dropped on the ground, but this was too much for him. He wanted to sneeze. He had to sneeze. He did sneeze. He couldn't help it, though it were to cost him his life.

"Land of love!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown, jumping back and clutching her skirts in both hands as if she expected Unc' Billy would try to take refuge behind them. "Do you mean to say that that Possum is alive?"

"Seems that way," replied Farmer Brown's Boy, as Unc' Billy sneezed again, for that straw was still tickling his nose. "I should certainly say it seems that way. The old sinner is no more dead than I am. He's just pretending. He fooled you all right, mother, but he didn't fool me. I haven't hurt a hair on him. You ought to know me well enough by this time to know that I wouldn't hurt him."

He looked at his mother reproachfully and she hastened to apologize. "But what could I think?" she demanded. "If he isn't a dead looking critter I never have seen one. What are you going to do with him, son?"

"Take him over to the Green Forest after breakfast and let him go," replied Farmer Brown's Boy. And that is just what he did do.

Chain Buying Men's Suits Said Unsound

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—A "chain letter" system of buying men's suits is operating here and the Better Business Bureau doesn't like it.

The bargain at the end of a chain is a suit valued up to $100 for as little as $25. Catch is nobody gets a suit until the tailor collects $100 for each suit before he releases it.

Here's how the plan works.

Citizen number one goes to the tailor shop, pays $25 and gets three certificates. He finds three friends who will use the certificates. Friends number two, three and four go to the tailor shop and each pays his $25 and takes three certificates.

When friends two, three and four pay their $25 citizen number one gets the $100 suit without paying any more than the original $25.

The catch, the bureau says, is that in 13 progressions of these multiples of threes, theoretically 14,000,000 suits would be sold.

On the face of it, the end would come when the saturation point in suit buying for this district is reached. At that time those who have paid their $25 and are unable to dispose of their three certificates would either lose their deposits or else be obliged to pay more money out of their pocket to get the suit.

"A basically unsound idea," says the bureau. "If the epidemic continues business life is going to be seriously disrupted. The craze may spread to cost dozens of other types of goods."

CASTOR, Alta. (CP).—It took more than 20-below-zero weather and blocked roads to keep John Wakefield from attending a meeting of the municipal council. He walked 10 miles from his farm at Coronation and then took a train the rest of the way.

7th Battalion Veterans Stage Annual Banquet

Seventh Battalion, C.E.F., Great War, was known as one of "Fightin'est" units in 1914-18 hostilities. And you could still have a fight on your hands if you want to argue the point with 7th veterans. Battalion also has pretty good record on banquets—an unbroken string since the end of "the" war, they say. Friday night's version of annual affair wrote another chapter in their annals of good fellowship. Seated at head table, above, are, left to right, Sidney Holdridge; D. G. Holmes, association secretary; Guest Speaker M. B. D. Green; President Henry Jarvis; F. L. Shaw; F. Dawson; retiring secretary, J. McIlree.

Jug Again Features Veterans' Reunion

—Colonist Photo

FRIEND with warm spot in his heart for 7th Battalion, C.E.F., sent along spot of warmth to help festivities at last week's annual banquet of 7th veterans. Historic jug held by "grogmaster," Captain C. F. Dawson, has featured 7th reunions each year for the past 20. Veterans lined up solemnly for rum issue, thought of men who liked tot at night and who were killed "over there." Equally ceremonial was observance of two minutes silence.

Policeman Makes Arrest Too Soon

PHILADELPHIA, March 19 (NANA).—Theodore Mitchell of the police vice squad here, recently lost $125 by arresting a numbers-racket stooper one day too soon.

To land his man, Mitchell had tried his luck with the numbers with a marked one-dollar bill. Then he wrote his street and the number he played—610—was the following day's winner.

Final games, tonight: Montreal at Detroit, Toronto at Boston, Chicago at New York.

THREE FIGHTS

MAPLE LEAF GARDENS, Toronto, March 19 (CP)—The leading Detroit Red Wings whipped fourth-place Toronto Maple Leafs 5-2 tonight in just plain motions to wind up the local National Hockey League scheduled season. The result did not affect the standing.

Although there was nothing at stake the crowd of 13,629 fans witnessed a rough battle and saw three separate fights. The victory gave the Wings a wide edge on the world champions in the season's exchanges, with seven wins and two ties in 12 starts.

Detroit's scoring power was well divided, with Pat Lundy, Syd Abel, Gord Howe, Pete Horeck and Max McNab clicking in order.

Harry Watson and Bill Barilko counted for the Leafs.

The best of the three slugfests of the evening came with only 1½ minutes play remaining. Ted Lindsay, who had already taken two minor penalties in the last period, tangled with Toronto's Wild Bill Ezinicki and each of them drew majors.

SUMMARY

First Period—1, Detroit, Lundy (Horeck) 10.21. 2, Detroit, Abel (Kelly) 14.20. Penalties — Stewart, Barilko, Juzda, Reise.

Second Period—3, Detroit, Howe, 7.47. 4, Detroit, Horeck (Lundy, Fogolin) 13.15. 5, Toronto, Watson (Mortson) 15.48. Penalties—Thomson, Enio, Reise.

Third Period—6, Detroit, McNab (Couture) 12.35. 7, Toronto, Barilko (Metz) 19.18. Penalties — Lindsay (major and two minors), Ezinicki (major).

FORUM, Montreal, March 19 (CP)—Montreal Canadiens handily defeated Chicago Black Hawks, 6-1, tonight and moved into second place in the National Hockey League standing, but the runner-up position behind Detroit Red Wings won't be decided until tomorrow night.

Before a crowd of 11,225, Canadiens romped into a three-goal lead in the first period and were never threatened.

Of the 11 penalties, five went to the Hawks. All 11 were minors, but the Hawks, out of the play-off running, refused to play dead dog and were gunning for goals throughout.

SUMMARY

First Period—1, Montreal, Campeau (Leger, Riopelle), 7.15. 2, Montreal, Leger (Campeau, Gravell), 12.38. 3, Montreal, Carveth (Reay, Harmon), 14.37. Penalties: McCaig, Nattrass, Plamondon, Harvey.

Abel Seeks 30th Goal; Reay Gains

Detroit's Sid Abel retained a chance of reaching the 30-goal mark in his final game of the season tonight by scoring once against Toronto last night to boost his season's total to 28. The single point extended his third-place margin in the NHL individual scoring race to two points over Teammate Ted Lindsay, who was held pointless.

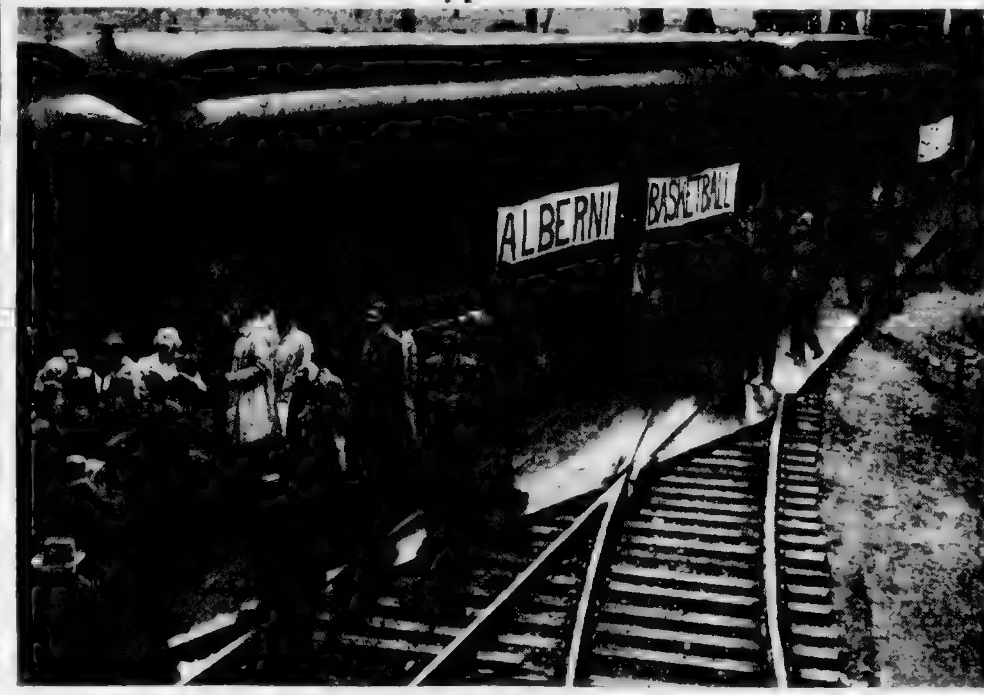

Roy Conacher and Doug Bentley of Chicago Black Hawks, far ahead in the race, failed to clear up their personal battle for the scoring title as they both went pointless at Montreal.

Billy Reay of Canadiens showed the biggest improvement, picking up two goals and an assist to move into a seventh-place tie with Toronto's Harry Watson, who scored once.

Ardent Alberni Supporters Arrive for Game

Colonist Photo

Alberni residents are proving ardent supporters of Athletics basketball team which is contesting Victoria senior "A" men's hoop supremacy on Island for first time. Part of large crowd of Alberni fans, who journeyed to Victoria by special train for game at Victoria High School gymnasium last night, are shown disembarking on arrival yesterday afternoon. Athletics captured first two games of best-of-five series at Alberni, but Y.M.C.A. rallied for 60-54 triumph to force fourth game at Victoria on Wednesday. Fifth game, if necessary, will be played on Thursday.

Aerie, Golds Capture Cup Games

Eagles and Victoria Golds scored victories in opening games of the Fred Oliver Memorial Cup intermediate soccer knockout competition yesterday.

The Aerie, although playing with only ten men after the first ten minutes, defeated Oak Bay, 4-1, at Heywood Avenue, while Golds edged Douglas Tire, 1-0, at Hampton Road.

Wilmer Michell put Eagles ahead in the early minutes of the game but Jimmy Rice equalized for Oak Bay before the interval. Eagles rearranged their line-up after the breather, moving Jim Burdge to centre and leaving only one man at fullback. The move paid dividends as Burdge counted twice, sandwiching a marker by Willie Turner.

Keith Pritchard, Aerie addition from Fairbridge, played an outstanding game for the winners.

There was little to choose between Golds and Tiremen in a hotly contested game. Charlie Constable netted the only goal midway through the second half.

Eagles will meet Saanich Indians in a semi-final match at Beacon Hill next Saturday, while Golds drew a bye into the finals against the winner the following week.

Question Mark

EWELL BLACKWELL

Ailing pitcher of Cincinnati Reds, who is big "if" in Reds' training camp. Blackwell reported to camp 20 pounds underweight following removal of kidney, but feels certain he can regain 1947 form when he won 22 games. Reds' hopes of improving their seventh-place finish of last year depend on Blackwell's complete recovery.

TILLICUMS TRIUMPH

Tillicum Athletic Club defeated Pacific Meat Co., 3-0, in a Division III juvenile soccer match yesterday. Goal scorers were George Wright, Jack Wren and Cliff Newman.

Collegians Wax Scottish To Win City Rugby Title

Victoria College Vikings ran roughshod over [illegible] Scottish yesterday afternoon at Macdonald Park to register a decisive 18-3 victory, which gave them the city first division Rugby championship and the Barnard Cup. Students will now meet the Vancouver champions in a sudden-death match on the Mainland for the Rounsfell Cup, symbolic of British Columbia club supremacy.

The Craigdarroch squad, with more youth and speed on its side, built up a commanding first-half lead of 13 points and added six more to offset Scots' only score in the final session. Coach Campbell Forbes donned strip to replace an injured Kiltv in the last half and spearheaded losers' attack effectively although too late to avert defeat.

EARLY SCORE

College lost no time in reaching the scoring column as Gerry Main cut through the opposing three-line on the second play of the game to score after only 30 seconds. Johnny Foote, who played a standout game at five-eighths, tallied the second try with a cutback after a set scrum at the 15-minute mark.

Pete Powell chalked up the first of his two tries about five minutes before halftime by scooping up a loose ball on the five-yard line and plunging the remaining distance. His second line-crossing effort culminated a 50-yard run which saw College forwards and backfielders combine on a neat passing combination.

60-YARD RUN

After the interval, speedy little John Campbell made the most spectacular run of the day, a 60-yard jaunt that saw him outrace Scottish threes, evade the fullback, and race to pay dirt. Captain Scott Kerr blocked an attempted clearance kick near Kilties' goaline enabling Bob Dunlop to pick up the loose ball and crash over for winners' final score.

Scots appeared to take new life when Forbes joined the pack and made one of their infrequent thrusts deep into Student territory. With less than two minutes remaining, losers had College with its back to the wall on the one-yard line. A series of scrums followed with Chuck Cripps finally forcing his way over the line to stave off a blanking for Scots.

Esquimalt Gains Final Of Jackson Cup Series

A second-half "hat trick" by peppery Art Young provided the margin of victory in Esquimalt's 4-1 Jackson Cup decision over Victoria West at Royal Athletic Park yesterday.

Oak Bay and Canadian Legion will meet in the other semi-final next Saturday, with Esquimalt meeting the winner for the trophy the following week.

Lacking the hustle and finesse of their performance of last week, Wests were no match for the winners and their attacks petered out against a strong Esquimalt defence.

The game lacked the usual cup-tie spirit and produced poor spectator football. Players took exception to the refereeing and constant bickering marked the ragged contest. Gordie Cooper, Wests' fullback, was banished in the second half for dangerous play when he dumped Denny Shubrooke. Cooper's vocal chords got a good workout when he cornered the referee on the field and under the stands after the game.

Alf Jenkins gave Esquimalt a 1-0 lead in the evenly fought first half, and Young completed his hat trick to boost the margin to 4-0 before Bill Hope netted the only Wests' marker direct from a free kick five minutes from time.

Line-ups follow:

Esquimalt—Hatcher; Bruce and Armitage; E. Young, Kennedy and Jenkins; Shubrooke, Webster, Musgrave, A. Young and Hayward. Subs—Holding and Walker.

Wests — Restell; Hudlin and Cooper; Scott, Hope and Bland. Elliott, Dovemaster, Gent, Hobson and Clarkson. Subs—Kidd and Bell.

Button Match Skedded Today

Considerable interest is being shown in today's match for possession of the city gold button at the Victoria Golf Club.

The lapel decorations were won two weeks ago by the strong Oak Bay combination of Alan Taylor and Dr. G. Bigelow and they face stiff task in their first defence. Opposing them are the two Colwood cuties, Bill McColl and Vic Painter. Shotmaking is scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m.

Royals Show New Punch; Scots, Reds in Deadlock

HOW THEY STAND

	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
New Westminster	4	0	0	10	5	8
North Shore	2	2	1	14	9	5
St. Andrews	2	2	1	13	10	5
Vancouver City	1	2	0	7	12	2
Victoria United	1	3	0	4	13	2

New Westminster Royals moved closer to capturing second-half laurels in Pacific Coast Soccer League play by downing Vancouver City, 5-3 at Queen's Park yesterday for their fourth straight victory. Meanwhile, North Shore Reds and St. Andrews, deadlocked in second place, played to a 2-2 tie at Callister Park to drop three points off the pace.

Sturdy John Winning performed the hat-trick to keep Royals on their winning ways as the Frasertowners dominated the weaker City XI with smooth ball on the rain-soaked field.

Although outclassed badly in the first half, Vancouver opened the scoring when Fred Whittaker kicked one home in the first minute of play. Bill Arthur took a pass from Winning to even the count shortly after.

WINNING TAKES OVER

Winning took over himself after that and scored three times in a row after being set up by Wallace Milligan and Pat Philley. Ted Crooks scored for Vancouver towards the end of the first half to leave the score at 4-2 for Royals at the interval.

City steadied in the last 45 minutes and threatened the lead several times. Royals extended the margin, however, with Bob Lewis hitting pay-dirt. Whittaker notched the final City goal, his second of the day, to complete the scoring.

The Scots-Reds tussle failed to live up to pre-game notices as the players appeared content to lay back and wait for the breaks. Scots dominated a majority of first-half play but could not produce a score.

GOOD COMBINATION

With [illegible] Philley, John Halley, Jimmy Grieg and George Steele putting on a fine passing demonstration, the ex-Dominion champs came through with a pair of quickies in the second half. Philley was credited with both markers, the first on a pass from Greig and Steele and the second on a header from Greig's well-placed corner-kick.

With 20 minutes remaining, Halley was lifted and Scots soon fell apart. Frank Ambler cut the margin five minutes later when he picked up a loose ball and scored from close in. With time running out, the Reds went all out after the equalizer and were finally rewarded when Jimmy Spencer's shot found the net after a three-way passing play with Trey Harvey, Brown and Ambler.

RELAXED CONTROL—Just before the final step-and-slide finish in your run to the foul line, the arm should be loose and totally relaxed. The approximate position of the ball at the top of the swing is shown in the sketch. This high point of the backswing comes just before the final step-and-slide, in either the three, four, or five step delivery.

Your arm being loose and relaxed at that position, the important thing to remember is to keep it that way — relaxed — and swing the ball all the way through the delivery. Make no effort to create speed in the swing by hurrying arm action because this will naturally speed footwork. And in your rush to the foul line, there won't be much time or room left for the slide.

The naturally increasing momentum of the ball during the relaxed, non-hurried swing, helps the slide to a smooth finish. That, of course is important. But even more important is the fact that it controls the ball and regulates the swing as it passes the hip. That also does away with quick, jerky arm action.

Body control depends pretty much on how you finish the stride at the foul line. In other words the slide. The body will be perfectly balanced only if there is a good slide, with the weight taken up firmly and comfortably by the left leg.

And it is at that time, when the ball comes to a stop in a straight line facing the pins—that the ball passes the left leg and the free swing goes on to a smooth and full swing-through for real accuracy. If you're still off-balance, try increasing the length of the slide.

Ryan Assessed For Violation Of Bonus Rule

COLUMBUS, O., March 19 (AP) — John Ryan, former manager and part owner of the Spokane club of the Western International League, has been fined $500 by the National Association of Professional Baseball for violation of the bonus rule.

George M. Trautman, association president, said today the fine was levied in connection with payment of $1,500 for the contract of Eugene Petraill in 1948. The contract called for $250 monthly salary. The bonus was paid to Mr. and Mrs. James Petraill, parents of the minor league player.

Trautman said the deal also included payment of 50 per cent "of any consideration which might be received for sale of the contract."

Ryan, who disposed of his interest in the Spokane club recently, said he was unaware of the bonus rule change which prohibits agreements outside the contract. Other members of the Spokane club's management were not aware of the deal, Trautman said.

The violation was reported by Mrs. Petraill, Trautman added. Ryan is barred for activity with other association clubs pending payment of the fine.

"Y" Stays in Fight On Stirring Win In Closing Minutes

Elimination from the British Columbia senior "A" play-offs was only two minutes away for Victoria Y.M.C.A. last night but the defending Island champions came roaring back in the waning seconds to snatch a 60-54 victory over Alberni Athletics and send the Island final into a fourth game.

It was like the good old days last night as Victoria High School gym bulged at the seams with enthusiastic cage fans, about half of them from Alberni. And most of them will be back Wednesday when the fourth game is scheduled. Last night's ding-dong battle was probably the best game here since the palmy days of the Dominoes.

SENSATIONAL COMEBACK

Trailing by three points with just over two minutes left and still a point behind when the clock said there was a minute and 20 seconds remaining, the city quintette, led by Johnny Clark, grabbed the lead and then built up a safe margin as the frantic Athletics were called for fouling as they attempted to get possession.

As matters turned out it was a gamble by Coach Doug Peden which fabled that turned the tide. Clark had just tied the count at 53-53 with a sensational lay-up when Porky Andrews was fouled by Wright. Andrews put his club ahead again by cashing the free shot and then Clark came through again in a wild scramble under the Alberni hoop, tipping in a rebound. Wright was fouled by Andrews and Peden ordered him to take the shot rather than the ball on the sidelines. Wright missed, but grabbed the rebound and rolled it through for the points which broke the back of the Alberni attack. Jackson added a free shot and Clark poured another rebound home in the last seconds to make the margin look bigger than it really was.

FIRST HALF DAZZLES

Up until then, it had been a see-saw affair with the teams taking turns at scoring points. The score was tied at 1, 3, 7, 15, 17, 19, 21, 29 and 31 in the first half and the lead changed hands with regularity. The second quarter was a little short of sensational as both teams connected on their shots for an amazing average.

Y.M.C.A. was ahead, 15-11, at the quarter but Alberni carried a two-point lead into the last half when Andrews hit a long one just as the buzzer sounded to make it 33-31.

It was after an uphill struggle for the "Y" in the last two quarters and it was never in front until Clark made it 55-54 with two minutes left. The Victorians tied it at 36, 38 and 48 but at several times were five points behind, the largest margin any team could get all night.

LONG SHOTS COUNT

While the winners probably had an edge on floor play, the Up-Island squad was hitting on its long shots. This applied particularly to big John Forrest and Coach Andrews. Forrest canned five long shots and made good on five shots in as many tries from the foul line to count a valuable 15 points. Andrews was the best player on the floor and came through time after time to rally his club when it seemed as if the "Y" was going to take over.

For the "Y" the feature was Clark's fourth-quarter performance. A marked man throughout, Clark picked up 12 of his 21 points in the last period. Lanky Ralph Baxter hit a streak in the second quarter and hooked in four valuable field goals just when no one else on the club was going well. Vince Clarkson shoved up three important hoops and Brother Rex also came through at crucial moments. Vic Dale played a good defensive game and every man on the club who saw action contributed.

Referees Wally Stipe and Carl Coates turned in a good job of a difficult game. They called 22 fouls against the "Y" and 18 against the Athletics. It was accuracy from the foul strip which kept Alberni in the game. The visitors cashed in 18 times out of 29 tries while the "Y" made good on ten of 26.

TITLE TO ALBERNI

Lost in the excitement of the finale was the victory of Alberni Rockettes in the women's Intermediate A finals. In taking the first Island title to escape Victoria so far this season, Porky Andrews' club defeated Eaglettes for the second straight time. Last night's score was 42-35, which gave Rockettes the series 91-78.

The game was a rough and tumble affair with neither club showing too much basketball. Eaglettes finished it out with only three players on the floor as Referees McMurchie and Malcolm called a total of 48 fouls, 26 against losers. Four Eaglettes and two Rockettes went out on personals.

Eaglettes could have won had they played basketball. They actually tied the series count at 61-61 in the second quarter and came close several other times only to wilt when it counted.

Arrow Furniture Island junior girls champion, played to an 18-18 deadlock with Hepeats in the exhibition opener.

How to Get Back 20,000 Fish Poser to Unfortunate Angler

MADISON, Wis., March 19 (AP)—Ray Morrissey has received a lot of suggestions about how to get back 20,000 fish which got away from him but he's still feeling mighty low.

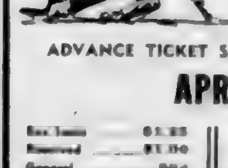

Morrissey stocked a private pond —Connors Lake with 20,000 fish last Fall. He neglected to ease pressure on the dikes when melting snows and unseasonable rain filled the basin to the danger point. Finally the dikes burst and the assorted game and pan fish escaped to nearby Turtle Creek.

Letters and cards from 22 states reached Morrissey, all telling him how to get his fish back.

One card said: "This is an Irish problem inasmuch as the pond was named Connors Lake. Get a harp and play it by moonlight. You'll find music-loving fish will return home."

Another suggestion was to sprinkle a ton of worms upstream into the lake bed. Other helpful folks sent boxes of salt for use on the tails, suggested using tenor cats to attract catfish, and movie queen fish to attract the males back home.

Morrissey plans to build a new dam but he's getting a little tired of the suggestions. He says: "If there are any bona fide fishermen with honest suggestions on how to get those fish back I'll be a willing listener, but I wish others would lay off."

By GRANTLAND RICE

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19—The addition of Red Rolfe, the distinguished Dartmouth alumnus, to the list of big league managers, increases considerably the influence of the college mind on our national game.

The list of college-trained managers now includes Lou Boudreau of Illinois, Eddie Dyer of Rice, Red Rolfe of Dartmouth and Eddie Sawyer of Ithaca. This is only four out of eastern, but it's at least a lift from the old days when Jake Stahl of Illinois and the Red Sox was about the only collegian in charge of a squad. Stahl's Red Sox beat the Giants in the 1912 world series.

It isn't beyond reason to see Boudreau's Indians and Dyer's Cardinals hook up in another world series. This, however, is no even-money bet.

In the American League the Indians still have the Red Sox, Yankees and Athletics to subdue. In the National League, the Cardinals still have the Dodgers, Braves, Pirates and Giants to lasso and hurdle.

The four college-trained managers must also overpower such notorious ex-collegians as Joe McCarthy, Casey Stengel, Burt Shotton, Leo Durocher, Bill Southworth, Billy Meyer and Connie Mack—rather a formidable troop.

PLAYERS' OPINIONS

What teams are going to win the two pennants anyway? With nothing better to do under a hot Florida sun we began interviewing ball-players—not the rookies—to get their angles. After all, they had played against these teams and ought to have some slant on the subject.

Their opinions were quite interesting. From American League camps, we found that about 65 per cent gave Cleveland the edge through a stronger balance in pitching, hitting, outfield, infield and catching.

There's no doubt that Boudreau's Indians are the best balanced outfit in either league.

They have what should be the best pitching staff, a fine outfield, a strong infield and competent catching.

The other 35 per cent went 25 for the Red Sox and 10 for the Yankees. I rate the Yankees much higher than this. They have the best outfield in the league, if Joe DiMaggio is O.K. They have the weakest infield of the three contenders, but powerful pitching possibilities. The Red Sox are only uncertain in the box, where pennants are won and lost.

NATIONAL LEAGUE VOTE

The National League vote was even more interesting. We only had the Cardinals, Reds, Phillies and Braves to talk to. The Giants and Pirates are too far away. So are the Dodgers in their madhouse at Vero Beach. All the Cardinals we talked to picked the Cardinals to win by some strange quirk.

The Phillies and the Reds were split among the Braves, Cardinals and Dodgers, with the Braves slightly in the lead because of Sain, Spahn, Dark and Pete Reiser's potential gifts. Also a fellow by the name of Billy Southworth, at least one of the great managers of all time.

AGE VS. YOUTH

The National League vote found the Braves in front with the Dodgers and Cardinals almost equal. The Cardinals were rated a better team than the Dodgers, with too much age against too much youth.

In a series of five games, the Cardinals would probably win four. But 154 games was a different story. Here is a 1940-1941 squad facing a 1947-1948 squad, younger, stronger, with stronger legs and stronger arms.

There is no such creaking and clashing of worn-out bones among the Dodgers that you hear from the Cardinal camp.

The Redbird team must be rebuilt quickly. It is almost through—although still powerful and dangerous.

LITTLE CHANGE

Oddly enough, few of the National Leaguers I talked to gave the Pirates or the Giants a chance. They liked the Pirates over the Giants. The National Leaguers thought Pittsburgh had too much age and the Giants had too much uncertain pitching. They also rated Mize and Cooper on the gambling side—maybe, and maybe not—certainly no added speed.

After gathering what assorted votes I could muster, the general idea was the National League race would be something of a whiz—one of the best baseball had known in years—with the Braves having a faint edge over the Dodgers and Cardinals. There should be a hot battle on for the first division between the Pirates and the Giants—the Pirates being favored.

In racing, I found that owners, trainers and jockeys furnish poor tips. Maybe ballplayers are worse.

Heavy Impost No Burden As Coaltown Equals Mark

MIAMI, Fla., March 19 (AP)—Coaltown, Calumet Farm's great four-year-old, today equaled the world's record for the mile and a quarter in winning Gulfstream Park's $20,000 handicap by seven lengths.

Under 128 pounds, Coaltown galloped under the wire in 1:59 4-5—the record time set nearly ten years ago in Brighton, England, by Saint Andrews II and equaled for the first time on the American turf by Shannon II at Golden Gate Fields on October 23, 1948.

Mrs. E. L. Hopkins' Three Rings was second and Coaltown's stablemate, Armed, was third, a head length behind Three Rings.

Although they will not be entered in the record books, Coaltown shattered two world's records in fractional times.

The bay speedster was timed at :45 flat for the half mile—two-fifths of a second faster than the world record set by Tie Score on April 1 1947, at Mexico City.

The mile time was clocked at 1:34 1-5, a fifth of a second faster than the record mark set by Equipoise on June 30 1932 at Arlington Park (1).

It was Coaltown's fifth win in as many starts this year and his 13th win in 18 starts. He has won $187,175.

Armed grand old man of the turf proved a worthy entry with Coaltown and was gaining on Three Rings at the wire. Armed earned $2,000 to run his earnings to $778,000.

The Calumet entry went postward at 1 to 10 and there was no show betting. Coaltown returned $2.20 and $2.10 in the $2 mutuels. Three Rings paid $2.80 to place.

Lincolnshire Won by Favorite; Only Eighth Time in 49 Years

LINCOLN, England, March 19 (Reuters).—Fair Judgment, owned by C. W. Gordon and ridden by Ephraim Smith, today won the Lincolnshire handicap, first major event of the British flat racing season.

Goldsborough was second and Yellow Idol third out of a field of 43 runners.

Fair Judgment, the favorite, won at six to one, by two lengths. Betting on the second and third horses was 66 to 1 and 33 to 1, respectively.

Goldsborough led most of the way.

The purse was £11,944, biggest in the history of the event.

Goldsborough, a dark horse in the colors of Mrs. L. B. Holliday, started at 40 to 1. Only three quarters of a length separated him from Yellow Idol, 33 to 1 chance owned by A. S. Duthie.

Under British betting rules, backers collect one-fourth the winning odds for place.

Bright sunshine brought a big crowd to the Carholme course for the 100th running of the Lincolnshire.

Fair judgment, only the eighth favorite to win the Lincolnshire since 1888, had been heavily backed in betting before post time and the majority of bookmakers had a "field race."

Alfred Cope, one leading London odds-layer, said Fair Judgment was the favorite throughout the future book-betting. Thus thousands of backers still have a chance to pull off the Spring double—the annual wagering feature where punters try to couple the winners of the Lincoln and the Grand National.

J.B.A.A. Forces Rugby Play-Off; Wanderers Snare Heyland Cup

A hard fighting J.B.A.A. team the convert kick but booted the ball forced a play-off for second division Rugby laurels by winning the second-half schedule with a 5-3 victory over Oak Bay Wanderers yesterday afternoon at Macdonald Park. Wanderers copped the first half and needed a win to automatically take the city crown, but the never-say-die Bays' outfit was not to be counted out like that.

Bays took the lead in the opening half when Bob Brown scored after a forward rush at the ten-minute mark. Warren Harrison's convert was good to give winners a 5-0 edge.

Norm Kowalyk, Russ Dempster, Clyde Porter and Tegid Jones turned in sterling performances for Bays and were instrumental in the victory. Oak Bay failed to measure up to its usual efficiency and couldn't manage its organized attack which marked previous engagements.

MISSED CHANCE

In spite of its lack of co-ordination, Oak Bay almost succeeded in pulling the game out of the fire. John Newton crossed the Bay line in the dying minute and planted the ball between the posts. John Olson could have squared the match with

Turf Club Head Resigns; May Transfer Privileges

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—W. Ronald Graham, wealthy Vancouver sportsman, today resigned as president of the B.C. Turf Club.

He said he had resigned due to pressure of other business, but he plans to hold his stock in the club.

The Turf Club, which operates Lansdowne Park Track, announced Friday that the 26-day 1949 race meet had been cancelled because of inability to operate under Government "tax burdens."

A. L. Simpson, one of the largest stockholders in the club, said today he had made application to Ottawa for permission to operate the track this year. The application was made on behalf of stockholders, he said.

"The B.C. Turf Club can operate at a profit. I believe if the large overhead is cut. I have communicated with Ottawa to see what can be done."

MORE FOR RANDALL?

The Vancouver Province said today that if the announced intention of the Turf Club not to race this Summer becomes a fact, the Provincial Government is expected to carry out its threat of last season and transfer their racing privileges to S. W. Randall.

Randall operates the Exhibition Park race track where it is present has a charter for four weeks of racing under the Ascot Jockey Club and Exhibition Breeders' Association.

He also has two weeks' available under the Colwood, Victoria charter and could also use the charter recently granted him for his new Sandown, Victoria, Park.

With the resignation of President Graham, a board of three directors has been appointed to handle the Turf Club affairs. The board includes G. L. Fraser, vice-president; George W. Morgan and George Martin.

Leafs Qualify To Engage Island Champs

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—Vancouver Clover Leafs, Dominion senior basketball champions, tonight won the intercity title as they defeated Eagle-Times 56-48 in the third game of their five-game series.

The Leafs now advance for the Provincial finals against the winners of the Vancouver Island series between Alberni and Victoria. Alberni leads the series 2-1.

Although suffering from water on the knee, Bob Pickell led Clover Leaf scorers with 11 points. Ollie Bakken was next with ten while Jerry Stevenson, Gordy Sykes, and Bill Anderson each scored nine points for the losers.

Things may not be too bright for Hunk Henderson's boys when they begin their Vancouver Island series.

DECIMATED SQUAD

Their sharp-shooting forward Bob Hall, will be out for a couple of weeks as a result of an injury in the first game. Sandy Robertson is still suffering from effects of glandular fever and is not expected to be of too much help except for service in tight spots.

Leafs have also lost the services of Harry Franklin who was put out for the season with a torn cartilage.

SCRATCHED FROM NATIONAL

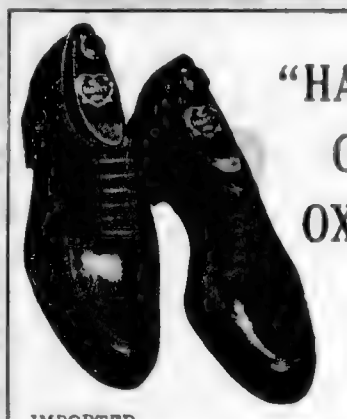

LONDON, March 19 (AP).—Cottage Rake, Ireland's champion steeplechaser, was scratched today from the Grand National at Aintree on March 26 by Trainer M. V. O'Brien.

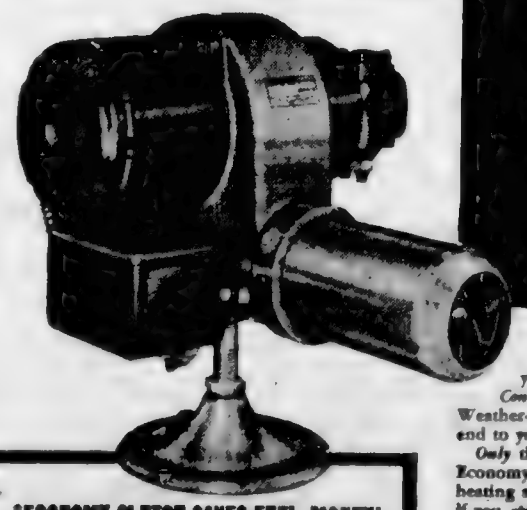

This cuts the field to 50 horses for the 4¾-mile jump classic. Lord Milday's Cromwell remains the 8-to-1 favorite.

Thunderbirds Down Lions To Clinch McKechnie Cup

HOW THEY STAND

	W.	L.	T.	F.	A.	Pts.
U.B.C.	3	0	0	52	6	6
Vancouver	1	1	1	25	25	3
Victoria	0	3	1	17	63	1

VANCOUVER, March 19 (CP).—Although short five regular players, all injured in California last week, Varsity Thunderbirds proved far too good for Vancouver Lions in the McKechnie Cup game at Varsity Stadium today before 800 spectators, and cinched the historic silverware by winning, 11-3. The winners scored a goal, a penalty goal and a try to a dropped goal.

Only one more game remains to be played in the series, the same two teams meeting at Brockton Point, April 2, but Varsity has a three-point lead over the Lions and cannot be overtaken or even tied.

Bob Croll, Frank Watt, Alex Carlyle, Doug Reid and Ron Grant were all off through injuries, but their substitutes, Russ Latham, Jack Nelson, Dave Story, Walt Ewing and Bill Allard played well and the whole team gave a grand exhibition of ball handling, straight running and tackling.

POOR TACTICS

Vancouver played right into Varsity's hands by repeatedly kicking the ball down the middle of the field instead of into touch.

Lionel Feeney was outstanding in the Vancouver three-quarter line, and was unlucky not to score a try. Sam Carle, Harvey Allen and Buzz Moore were best of a good forward line, but there was no connecting link between it and the backfield, Pete Moffatt and Bill Whyte, the halves, being weak.

Varsity dribbled the ball over Vancouver's line on a breakaway early on, but Eric Cardinall gave it an extra kick instead of falling on it for a certain try and it went behind the dead ball line. After 20 minutes' play Varsity's supremacy paid off when Nelson crossed for a try following a beautiful three-quarter run, and Hilary Wotherspoon kicked the convert to make it 5-0.

After the interval Latham boosted Varsity's margin to eight points when he finished off another three-quarter movement with a 20-yard run to go over near the posts. Harvey Allen dropped a field goal after a lineout to cut the deficit to 8-3.

Nelson clinched the game for Varsity with another brilliant 30-yard run and try to complete the scoring.

Vancouver showed its best form in the last ten minutes and came close to scoring twice but could not cross the line.

Comets Lead Courtenay In Cage Final

Bob Whyte's Comets gained a six-point margin in their total-point series with Courtenay Monarchs for the Island senior "B" women's crown by handing the Northerners a 32-26 defeat in the first game at Courtenay on Friday. Second game will be played here Wednesday.

The Bradshaw sisters, Joyce and Dorothy, sparked Comets to a half-time 23-10 lead. Courtenay reduced the margin one point in the third canto and outscored the Victoria quintette 10-4 in the final stanza.

Line-ups follow:

Comets — McDonald 10, Mattison, J. Bradshaw 11, D. Bradshaw 8, Mair, Taylor 3, Williams. Total 32.

Courtenay — Hudson 8, Hollett 7, Baker 2, Taber 9, Morgan, Carwithen. Total 26.

Stubborn Coaches Get Suspensions For Sit-Down Act

EDMONTON, March 19 (CP).—Suspension of two junior hockey coaches were announced here today by Alberta Hockey Association officials.

Roy Bentley of Wetaskiwin Canadians and Clarence Moher of Edmonton Athletic Club have been suspended for the remainder of the series between the two teams for the Northern Alberta title.

The third game of the series at Wetaskiwin Thursday night was declared "no contest" after both teams failed to appear on the ice for the third period. Each wished to have the other return to the ice first.

E.A.C. leads the series with two straight wins. The series has been put on a four-game basis, with the next games at Edmonton tonight and Tuesday night.

If Wetaskiwin wins the next two to deadlock the series, there will be overtime immediately after the fourth game with the first team to score a goal being declared Northern Alberta champions.

Few O.C. Soccer Changes As Leaders Retain Edge

LONDON, March 19 (Reuters).—Top teams held sway in United Kingdom soccer today with the leaders in all four divisions gaining ground or maintaining their positions.

Portsmouth retained its five-point lead in the First Division by defeating Derby County, 1-0, while runner-up Newcastle United stopped Arsenal 3-2. The defeat left Derby County in a third-place tie with Arsenal and Manchester United. Manchester United lost 1-0 to Birmingham City.

Portsmouth now is in a strong position for the league championship although each team has ten or more games to play before the schedule ends.

Southampton is similarly situated at the top of the Second Division. Its 3-1 victory over Leicester left it still five points in front of Fulham. West Bromwich Albion is next, one point behind Fulham, with Tottenham Hotspur another point back in fourth place.

SWANSEA TOWN GAINS

In the Third Division Southern, Swansea Town moved one point farther ahead of its rivals by edging Norwich 2-1. Bristol Rovers and Brighton and Hove Albion tied for second place, each tied their engagements to remain seven points behind.

The four leading teams in the Third Division Northern all figured in drawn games. Rotherham United this going to a two-point lead over Hull City with Doncaster Rovers and Darlington tied for third, trailing by seven points.

Rotherham was held to a 1-1 draw by New Brighton. Hull City and Rochdale, Doncaster and Darlington, both wound up with the same 1-1 tie.

HIBERNIANS OUSTED

A new leader emerged in the Scottish League's Division "A." Dundee defeated the previous pacemakers, Hibernians, 4-3 and took over the lead, one point ahead of their defeated rivals. Rangers defeated Clyde 4-1 to move into a second-place tie with Hibernians.

Dunfermline Athletic and Stirling Albion, deadlocked in first place in Scottish Division "B," remained tied after a 3-3 draw in their leadership battle. The third-place Airdrieonians moved up to two points behind the leaders by trimming Dumbarton 3-1.

Sport Stadium Plan Launched For Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, March 19 (CP).—A campaign to build a $100,000 stadium in Winnipeg was launched today as a co-operative venture with 100,000 shares offered for sale at $5 each.

Starting with a small group of individuals last October, the Greater Winnipeg Co-operative Sports Society Limited now has 300 applications on file for membership. More than 5,000 shares already have been pledged.

The group formed by citizens aroused by the city's lack of modern sports facilities, hopes to build an outdoor stadium seating 14,000 persons and an arena with a capacity of 12,000. Cost of constructing the arena is estimated at $1,500,000.

The Provincial Department of Agriculture granted a charter to the company March 3.

Regina Defeats Flyers Again; Two Games Up

REGINA, March 19 (CP).—Regina Capitals tonight took a two-game lead in the best-of-seven Western Canada Senior Hockey League final, knocking Edmonton Flyers 7-3.

Thursday night Caps beat Edmonton in the series first game 6-3.

Toby Brown paced the Caps scoring three goals, the first time the young centre had turned the hat-trick in league play.

Veteran Sweeney Schriner racked up a brace of goals and singletons went to Chuck McCullough and Bill Kyle. Doug Lane, Andy Clovechok and Alex Pringle tallied Edmonton counters.

Middlecoff Bests Wind To Cop Lead

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 19 (AP).—Even a biting northeast wind couldn't slow down Cary Middlecoff today as he knocked four strokes off par for a 68 and the half-way lead in the $10,000 Jacksonville golf open at 134.

The 28-year-old Memphis dentist was about 30 degrees hotter than the weather and three strokes ahead of his nearest competitors, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Albuquerque, N.M., who shared the opening day lead with Middlecoff at 66 and the top money winner of the year, Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago.

Harrison was only one under par with 71 today while Mangrum shot a 69 that gave them each 137 for the 36 holes.

Bobby Locke of Johannesburg, South Africa, got the feel of things on the second nine today and pushed into the running for prize money. He shot 37-34—71 for 144. Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., withdrew after his first-round 74.

The field was trimmed to 63 players for the third round tomorrow and the final 18 holes Monday.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP).—About this time of year major league ball clubs realize their own deficiencies and begin looking around to see what the other clubs have. So trade talk begins stirring every time a scout or official appears in a camp. Usually nothing comes of it . . . Right now there's gossip about a Braves-Phillies deal and about dickering between the Dodgers and Indians based apparently on Branch Rickey Jr. dropping in to visit Bill Veeck and Leo Durocher in Phoenix . . . Says Rickey Jr.: "Rickey Sr. makes all the Dodgers deals." Says Rickey Sr., when asked if young Branch has the authority to make trades: "He has the tendency to assume that authority, and I have the tendency to back him up."

SQUARE SHOOTER

When someone asked Chick Walmsley of the Albany, Ga., Cardinals the other day how he was coming along in a salary dispute with an athlete named Dave Cyrus, Chick protested: "It's unfair. Every time he comes around to talk terms, he puts on his policeman's uniform and straps on a couple of guns. How can I compete with that?" . . . The next day Cyrus appeared without his "equalizers" and signed, so Chick chuckled: "Guess I caught him with his holsters down."

Crews Tune Up

LONDON, March 19 (AP).—Oxford University's crew, tuning up for the annual race with Cambridge March 26, yesterday rowed the full 4¼ mile course on the Thames in 19 minutes, 24 seconds.

Cambridge took 20 minutes 16 seconds in slightly rougher water Thursday.

Last year the Cambridge crew won in the record time of 17 minutes, 50 seconds.

Wins Darcus Cup

Mrs. J. R. Hibberson captured the Darcus Cup at the Uplands Golf Club yesterday with a net card of 228 for 54 holes.

Mrs. J. Straning and Mrs. J. D. Ferguson tied for runner-up honors with 229's.

Mrs. J. D. Ferguson won the Semple Cup with a card of 100-32—68.

Win Invitation Meet

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP).—The University of San Francisco won the National Invitation Basketball Tournament tonight in the final 58 seconds with a 48-47 decision over Loyola of Chicago.

A free throw by Ross Guidice gave the Dons the victory. Loyola, which had never led, knotted the count with less than a minute to play.

Reds Use Peroxide To Run Subs

WASHINGTON, March 19 (NANA).—A United States naval expert said today that Soviet Russia is believed to have added 30 new-type Schnorkel submarines to her fleet last year and that the Reds are expected to have production up to 200 a year by 1950.

Lieut.-Cmdr. Burke Wilkinson, writing in the magazine Ordnance, declared that more serious than the stepped-up output of these Nazi-designed submarines are the persistent reports of Russian interest in hydrogen peroxide as a propellant fuel.

He explained that through a German innovation, hydrogen peroxide is used to supply the engines with oxygen and make possible under-water speeds up to 25 knots without use of the Schnorkel breathing device.

It has been reported in other quarters that in 1945 just prior to the end of the war, the Germans had near completion a U-boat with a proposed under-water speed of 30 knots, using hydrogen peroxide.

In concluding his summary of Russian naval activity, the commander said it might be a mistake "to think of the Big Bear as a long-distance swimmer yet awhile; but he's learning a lot of new tricks."

German Unity Eventual Aim Of Trizonia

BONN, March 19 (NANA) — Napoleon's dream of a powerful Rhine federation is being carried daily nearer reality as delegates from all the western German states prepare for approval of the military governors the final draft of the basic law for a Federal Trizonia.

The constitution draft is expected to have its third and final reading by the congress of delegates here this month.

The 65 German political leaders who have been meeting in this university city on the banks of the Rhine for the last five months have been in mental jams trying to reconcile the ideals of Bismarck for a united Germany with the Napoleonic ideals of bringing a coalition of free German states into alliance with the West.

Political Zionists Blamed For World "Conspiracy"

The party political system, as operated at present, is a deadly menace to the survival of democracy.

L. D. Byrne, technical advisor, brought to Canada from England to advise the Alberta Government said this yesterday in an interview here.

Mr. Byrne attended the one-day convention of the B.C. Social Credit Association at Lougheeds.

Major A. H. Jukes, association president, was chairman.

"At the present time the elector is given an opportunity every four or five years of voting for two, three or four candidates, the choice of which he has absolutely no say and standing for policies to which he has not consented," Mr. Byrne declared.

SAID CONTRARY

"Oppressive taxation, growing bureaucracy, economic uncertainty, and general anxiety in regard to the future, are contrary to what people desire," Mr. Myrne stated.

"Until the elected representatives become truly representative of the wishes of their constituents and are subject to continuous control by constituents, we shall not achieve a democratic representative government," Mr. Byrne asserted.

The present ineffective electoral system did not develope accidentally, he said.

TOO PLAIN

"It is now all too plain," Mr. Byrne said, "that we are confronted with a deliberate and deep-seated world conspiracy directed against Christianity, Democracy and human freedom in favor of a world tyranny modelled on the U.S.S.R."

There is no essential difference between the policy of Communism, Socialism, Fascism, or financial or industrial monopoly, Mr. Byrne related.

"Those who realize the significance of recent world events will have no difficulty in recognizing these policies. They all stem from a small group of international political Zionists," Mr. Byrne charged.

only moved as far as they have by mental gymnastics to convert a basic law as a temporary expedient to fit Western policy. We should be fooling ourselves to think otherwise.

Dr. Carlo Schmid, professor of political science at Tubingen University in the French zone, the leading Social-Democrat present, says:

"The so-called constitution we are trying to work out is a useful temporary arrangement. But it would be stupid to talk of it lasting for 50 or 100 years. We need a policy to meet the needs of the moment and we can do no more than build a framework for the future."

However, many of his fellow delegates believe in dotting every I and crossing every T with a legalistic exactitude that may protect them from future labels as Quislings, collaborators, or traitors to the nationalist ideal of German unity.

Students To Enter Contest

Victoria school children have the opportunity to win a music scholarship of $100 during the British Columbia School Teachers' annual Easter convention in Vancouver.

The program will be held in Victoria High School auditorium at 8 p.m. The public is invited.

No admission will be charged but a silver offering will be taken to cover traveling expenses of the selected student.

The contest is open to all vocalists and instrumentalists attending British Columbia public schools.

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation is combing the province for talent in order to promote music ability among students.

The winner in each area will be sent by the federation to Vancouver for the finals.

The time used is Pacific Standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

5 IN MEMORIAM

GRAY—In loving memory of our dear mother, Louisa Gray, who fell asleep March 21, 1936. Also our dad, John F. Gray, who fell asleep November 2, 1939.

One by one they go before us,
They are fading like the dew,
But we know they're watching o'er us,
They the good, the fair, the true.
They are waiting for us only
Where no pain can ever mar;
Dear ones who left us lonely
Watch us through the gates ajar;
There a father, there a mother,
Gone within those gates ajar.

—Sadly missed by their daughters, Mrs. Rose H. Rosene and Mrs. Nellie Scott.

MATHISON—Margaret Bain Mathison, who passed to rest March 20, 1946.

There is a sad but sweet remembrance,
There is a memory fond and true,
There is a token of affection, mother,
And a heartache still for you.

—Lovingly remembered by Jean and Bob, San Francisco, Calif.

MATHISON—In loving memory of a dear mother and nanna, Margaret Bain Mathison, who passed to rest March 20, 1946.

And while she lies in peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.

—Ever remembered by Nan, Bill, Margaret and Glens.

U.S. Industry Expanding In Scotland

GLASGOW, March 19 (AP).—More than a dozen United States firms have set up factories in Scotland since the war.

The factories were established on sites developed by the Government as "nurseries of fresh enterprise," and American industry now holds a big stake in Scotland's economic recovery drive.

Among the factors figuring in the trend is skilled labor, which is a third cheaper here than in the United States. And Scotland has had no major labor-management trouble for years.

FAVORABLE POSITION

American experts say the influx is due even more to Government help in making it relatively easy and inexpensive for an approved firm to open a plant, and also to a highly favorable position for exports, especially to the sterling areas.

Elsewhere in the British Isles, other American companies, most of them long resident, have embarked on extensions for similar reasons.

They are making now, or will soon, typewriters, adding machines and other office equipment, electric razors, safety razor blades, paring knives, mining machinery, clocks and watches, dress patterns, pumps, dehydrating machinery, high vacuum apparatus used in connection with atomic research, farm machinery and soft drinks.

"It will be a long time before the foreign exchange situation is cleared up," said one industrialist, "and the companies naturally find it easier meanwhile to sell their products in the sterling area for pounds sterling rather than for dollars."

SIMPLEST MEANS

A big attraction to American firms are the Government's "industrial estates," which afford the outsider and in many instances local companies with the simplest means for starting a factory. Here modern machinery with light, heat, power, water and transportation are leased to approved tenants without any capital expenditure.

First they must show they have an export potential or are making esential goods for the home market, and they must show they are likely to employ additional labor. They often get priority for materials.

The estates project was started in the late '30's to help correct maldistribution of industry throughout Britain. There now are 23 in Scotland.

School Teachers Compare Notes

LONDON, March 19 (Reuters).—More than 100 exchange school teachers from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Rhodesia met in London today to exchange accounts of their experiences since they arrived here early this year.

Altogether 128 teachers from these Dominions are here for a one-year exchange with British teachers who have gone overseas.

The purpose of the two-day conference was to study British administrative methods—"to explain to the teachers some of the problems which may be puzzling them now they have been in this country for a few months," the Ministry of Education put it.

Canadian visitors said they had found it a "bit disturbing" to adjust themselves to the British system whereby school children are graded for higher education at 11 years of age.

But Miss Jessie Johns of Vancouver was enthusiastic about British willingness to experiment in education. "I think it is admirable that you are willing to experiment so boldly, to risk a failure in the attempt to improve educational methods," she said. "In Canada we are apt to sit back and to await results obtained elsewhere."

Miss Johns has been teaching in schools in Southeast England.

Miss Margaret Carter of Creston, B.C., who is teaching at Ilkeston, Derbyshire, agreed. But her strongest impression was of the desire of everyone here to be helpful and to enable them to make the most of their visit.

Pushed Too Hard; Lands in Hospital

Perry Irving of Sooke was in Royal Jubilee Hospital last night in "good" condition after a freak accident that resulted in a fractured ankle, [redacted] lacerations and a cut eye.

He told authorities that he fell while pushing a car, and men helping tumbled on him.

To Seek Plane

TORONTO, March 19 (CP). — R.C.A.F. planes will take to the air at dawn tomorrow to aid in the search for a private American plane, missing for four days.

The aircraft took off from Buffalo, N.Y., Wednesday. Two American businessmen aboard said they were flying to Montreal to visit a friend in hospital.

Uranium Fever Spreading Through Sault

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., March 20 (AP).—A strange and ultra-modern disease is spreading like wildfire through this excited border town.

They call it uranium fever.

Its symptoms are well known: A wild glint in the eye at the mention of an ore called pitchblende, an unusual interest in prospecting tools, a craving for quick wealth.

This exciting disease first struck this border city last Fall when tales of a rich uranium strike began seeping down from the Canadian shore of Lake Superior.

MINERS' EQUIPMENT

[redacted] in the vicinity began doing a brisk business in miners' glasses, streak plates and geologists' hammers. And the rush toward desolate Theano Point, in Ontario's lonely rock-and-pine country was on.

Today the excitement is unabated. Prospecting is the number one topic for street-corner conversation.

A special prospectors' course was organized at the [redacted] branch of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology. The class was formed by Ernest Kemp, an instructor in geology, who figured on a small enrolment.

But 88 persons paid the $12 fee and signed up. Enthusiasm in the class, of course, runs high. But Kemp soberly tries to hold their hopes to earth.

WRONG SIDE OF RIVER

"There is little hope of anyone becoming rich from a pitchblende strike on the American side of the Sault River," he warns. He says the river is the dividing line between two geological ages, with the United States on the wrong side.

But in Canada fortunes are already being made. Some time early this Summer the first pitchblende shaft will be sunk at Theano Point.

And somewhere in the nearby forests will be Professor and Mrs. Kemp and their amateur uranium hunters, Geiger counters in hand. Even as the rest of the Sault, the professor admits he's caught the bug, too.

Russia Makes Further Claim For Scientists

LONDON, March 19 (AP).—Russia claimed today that it was a Russian who first learned about the atmosphere on the planet Venus.

Following up recent claims that Russians invented the telephone, radio, electric light, airplane and sundry other items, the Soviet news agency Tass let it out that Astronomer Mikhail Lomonosov "discovered the atmosphere" of Venus back in 1761, from Petersburg.

"Certain foreign authors," the agency said, "are ascribing the honor of this discovery to German scientists."

Quoting Soviet authorities, Tass credited several other astronomical "firsts" to Russians.

BIG CROWD

More than 175 teen-agers turned out for last night's Mid-Town Teen Club dance at Newstead Hall, according to club officials. Master of ceremonies Dick Lloyd was feature vocalist.

DOWNHAM, Norfolk, England (CP).—Farmers debated cows' musical tastes on market day. Verdict: They hate jazz and despise the rumba. But they like classical music.

Seeks Lost Ship

HALIFAX, March 19 (CP).—The R.C.M.P. cutter French left from Halifax tonight to search for the fishing vessel Mathilda, reported missing off Sable Island with three persons aboard.

Foreign Firms In India Not Satisfied

NEW DELHI, March 19 (AP).—Recent Indian Government efforts to attract foreign capital investment have led some foreign businessmen here to observe that there are easier ways to make a living."

Most foreign firms here are making money, and few if any businessmen have gone home in disgust. But nearly all have their complaints.

LABOR TROUBLE

Certain difficulties are common to all business here, domestic and foreign. Skilled labor is hard to find and labor strife is prevalent. Inadequate transportation holds up supplies and hampers distribution. A shortage of building materials delays plant expansion and erection. The communications system is poor, telegrams are delayed, sometimes for days, telephones are temperamental and mail goes astray. Customs are not helpful, and obtaining import licences calls for a great deal of patience.

Foreigners complain that the administration of Government departments concerned with foreign business enterprise suffers two great handicaps.

UNTRAINED WORKERS

1. A super-bureaucratic attitude of employees.

2. Inefficiency of untrained new employees it has been necessary to add since British personnel retired from the civil service.

Indian law requires a certain amount of Indian participation in some types of business, and this is not always easy to obtain. Indian capitalists have been cautious, and some of them chauvinistic, taking the attitude that Indian capital alone can do anything the foreign investor might do.

DISCRIMINATION

Also unhelpful is the feeling of a great many Indians that there is racial discrimination against Indians in the Western world.

A businessman who has spent 25 years in India says the lack of skilled labor is the greatest problem for anyone establishing a plant here.

A Western diplomat expresses the belief that it would pay foreign business to come to India. He says foreign firms here are making money and points out that a World Bank delegation was told by foreigners in Bombay recently that they were "guardedly optimistic" about India's future.

Irrigation Plan Will Help Area

KAMLOOPS, B.C., March 19 (CP).—Settlement of a 36-mile stretch of rich but currently arid land in the South Thompson Valley has taken a long step forward, it was learned here today.

E. Davie Fulton (P.C., Kamloops) has advised constituents that a gravity water irrigation system for the 1,633-acre Niskonlith settlement project is included in $917,500 earmarked by the Federal Government for land reclamation and irrigation in British Columbia this year.

This and three other land projects along with a 10,000-volt transmission line planned by the British Columbia Power Commission between Kamloops and Chase is expected to bring the South Thompson Valley into new and wider activity.

Russian Gold Tumbles Price

NEW YORK, March 11.—(NANA)—Russia, one of the world's leading gold producers, is dumping large quantities of bullion on West European markets, reports the Frankfort newspaper Rundschau.

In a recent instance, a shipment of 80 tons of gold received at a Swiss "free port" on the Mediterranean has been identified "beyond a shadow of doubt" as being of Soviet origin, the German paper claims.

In European financial circles, the Russian gold shipments are considered one of a series of manipulations designed to wreck the Marshall Plan. In France and other European countries, the price of bullion recently has tumbled sharply, causing near panic among hoarders of gold.

Alaska Passes Fish Tax Bill

JUNEAU, Alaska, March 19 (AP).—By an 11-5 vote, the Territorial Senate late today passed a fish tax bill which its author estimated would double the tax on Alaska's valuable salmon pack.

Rep. Marcus Jensen who introduced the bill, estimated the take at around $2,000,000 yearly on present values.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP).—Interest in stocks dwindled to the vanishing point in the market today.

Price changes were inconclusive for the most part and gains and losses in almost exact balance. Trading volume was the smallest for any two-hour session in the past month.

The market, in short, was still caught fast in the grip of stagnant speculative interest.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks remained at 63.2. The rail group dipped slightly, utilities were a trifle higher, and the industrial section unchanged. Of the 618 stocks which appeared on the ticker tape, 214 advanced and 198 declined.

Turnover amounted to a slim 260,000 shares, well under last Saturday's 300,000 and the smallest since 250,000 shares changed hands on February 19.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, March 19 (AP).—Grains made modest gains in slow dealings on the Board of Trade today. The market opened fractionally higher and held around opening level for the rest of the session. May contracts had a little more strength than later months.

Soybeans and lard were a bit higher at the start, but lard showed a sinking tendency as the day wore on. The March delivery dropped below $12.00 at times. Outside interest in all commodities was light with dealings limited mostly to local traders.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO, March 19 (CP).—Prices weakened slightly in very light trading in today's two-hour session on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Volume was about 300,000 shares.

Key base metals showed a weaker tone while the majority of smaller issues managed to stay ahead. Golds and industrials were mixed in dull action and Western oils continued yesterday's easier tone.

Winnipeg Grain

WINNIPEG, March 19 (CP).—Oats and barley futures prices showed a firm trend to close at or near the highs for today's session on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Rye scored fairly broad advances.

Local and commission house demand was supplemented by shipper support in oats and barley. Offerings were light.

Rye saw a fairly active trade and followed a stronger trend in this commodity on American grain markets. American houses as well as locals and commission houses were on the buying side. Offerings were not very liberal.

The United Kingdom was allocated 300,000 bushels of wheat under the Anglo-Canadian wheat agreement.

Prices of class two wheat advanced two cents.

Norwegians Skip Lunch To Shorten Working Day

OSLO, March 19 (AP).—Regardless of the clock, afternoon doesn't exist in Norway—any more than lunch time.

Both have been written off in favor of a short, continuous working day, an early dinner and a long sociable evening.

The "morning" a Norwegian's business day, begins about 10 a.m. and lasts just long enough for dinner at home by four. Lunch is almost unheard of—it's the vanishing meal.

STOP FOR COFFEE

Norwegians, in their amiable, leisurely way, work through the customary North American lunch interval although callers then may be invited to a neighboring cafe for coffee and a "smoerbrod," the national open-topped sandwich, today dressed with disguised herring or under a salad.

Service is poor and Norwegians good-naturedly refer to their waiters as the slowest and most impolite in the world. Both are under-statements.

Waiters, paid by a compulsory service charge varying between 10 and 15 per cent, expect an additional 10 per cent gratuity from patrons.

But street car and bus conductors are polite to a fault. Conductors descend to help passengers in and out.

Oslo, with one-sixth of Norway's 3,000,000 population, is a city whose abundant neon signs and bright store windows lend a deceptive air of gaiety.

LITTLE NIGHT LIFE

It has little night life apart from a vigorous theatre—eight stock companies—and a good weekly symphony concert. There are no night clubs. Movie theatres show films at 5, 7 and 9 o'clock and customers may not enter after a performance begins.

"Good" eating places abound, if you like fish, but most Norwegians entertain at home.

Family celebrations are second nature. Each family has at least one large flag which goes up to mark births, marriages and deaths, anniversaries personal and national, and on the slightest suggestion of the Government. Neighbors share joys and sorrows and whole streets' flags droop at half-mast or exult together.

The Norse are keen athletes, who say "half our life is spent on skis and the other half in walking." The short business day leaves them free for evening hikes into the mountains around Oslo, for ski trips in Winter, and for walks in Summer when offices close at three and don't open on Saturdays.

Steal 2,550 Pounds Of Manhole Covers

DETROIT, March 19 (NANA).—What would you do with a not-very-new manhole cover? Thieves here must have had some idea—because they've stolen 17 of them, weighing a total of 2,550 pounds. In one instance, after taking the cover from the street, the thieves covered the open hole with a newspaper held down by bricks. The covers cost $9.90 each. The city soon replaced them. But whatever did the thieves do with those they stole?

Buyers' Mart Returns In U.K. Stores

LONDON, March 19 (NANA).—The buyers' market is here again. You can judge it in an instant in the stores. Instead of looking their customers up and down, British clerks now smile cheerfully and ask politely, "what can I do for you."

Customers have stopped cringing at store counters. The boldly ask if articles are in stock, and how much they cost. Often as not they reply firmly: "Too expensive." The former standard of how many coupons or points no longer counts.

PILE UP

In warehouses, stocks of unwanted goods are piling up. The British public is buying only what it wants. This seems to apply particularly to clothes, shoes, furniture, and household furnishings.

Listening in on store conversations is illuminating. Two women were fingering upholstery damask today. "How much a yard" they asked the assistant. He told them $12. The women dropped the damask. "Show us some cretonne," they demanded. That was nearly $4 a yard.

"Thanks," they said. "We'll wait till the price comes down."

Mrs. A. K. Jackson, head of the Board of Trade's consumer needs department, reports that "drugs on the market" are imitation jewelry, expensive furnishing fabrics, imported silks and rayons, leather goods, especially women's handbags, fancy goods generally, and plastic ware. The entertainment world is suffering. Theatre prices are too high and, though there are a few shows always packed, the volume of theatre-goers is dwindling.

The movie situation is the same. Night clubs present a sorry spectacle of near emptiness.

So far, there is no slump in sight but there is a definite shutting of buyers' purses.

BORDERLINE ANEMIA*

a drain on energy—a damper on charm!

How do you appear to others? Are you tired-looking and listless? Is your face pale? Have you lost charm along with the vitality you once had?

Such effects often come from a blood condition. You may have a Borderline Anemia, a mild anemia due to a nutritional deficiency of iron. Your red blood cells may be too faded and weak to transmit full energy to your body. Many women, men and children drag their weary way through life with this Borderline Anemia.

How Ironized Yeast Tablets build up your blood and vigor

When your color is fading—and your energy is too low—due to this common blood condition, take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help build up faded red blood cells to healthy color and size—to help restore your usual vigor.

Of course, continuing tiredness and pallor may be due to other conditions—so consult your doctor regularly.

But in this Borderline Anemia, take Ironized Yeast Tablets to help build up your blood. Take them to start your energy shifting back into "high", to help restore your natural color. Take them so you can enjoy life again!

*A mild anemia due to a nutritional deficiency of iron.

Veterans Allowance Act Benefits To Be Augmented in Some Cases

War veterans receiving allowances under the War Veterans' Act are to receive more money, according to a recent statement by Hon. Milton Gregg, V.C., Minister of Veterans' Affairs, which has been released here.

"It has become desirable to augment the benefits payable in certain cases to beneficiaries under the War Veterans' Allowance Act and steps are being taken to do so," the minister announced.

In most cases, the minister pointed out, the beneficiaries will be the now aging veterans of the Great War.

LIST BOOSTS

In May, 1930, the act provided only $20 per month to single veterans and $40 a month to married. In 1940 these sums were raised to $30 and $60 respectively, and last year they were again raised to $40 and $70 a month respectively, Mr. Gregg explained.

It was pointed out by the minister that evidence before the veterans committee of the Commons last year was to the effect that these rates were too low to meet the needs of veterans who had no other source of income.

To meet this problem, Mr. Gregg said, a substantial sum has been included in the main estimates, now tabled, to alleviate these conditions of hardship.

Only those who are in receipt of the maximum war veterans' allowance and without other means of support will share in this fund.

Mr. Gregg explained help may be given for a temporary emergency or on a monthly basis while the special need exists.

Close co-operation between D.V.A. regional offices and local welfare agencies will ensure prompt service to needy veterans after their case has been investigated.

SET MAXIMUM

In no instance, Mr. Gregg declared, will the supplementary grant exceed $120 per annum single and $180 per annum married. This means an increase of $10 per month for single veterans and $15 a month for married men.

"Regulations governing the administration of the fund are now being prepared," Mr. Gregg declared. When completed, the minister said, they will be submitted to the governor-in-council and tabled when approved. It is planned to begin payments at an early date after the item in the estimates provided for this program shall have been approved by Parliament, he said.

It was suggested that veterans make inquiries at their local D.V.A. office to learn full particulars of this particular piece of legislation.

Library Offers Attic Choice For Tea Set

WASHINGTON, March 19 (NANA).—The Folger Library here needs a tea service.

The owner of the set the library had been using for its distinguished guests has left his job and taken his tea service with him.

Now the library is offering as trade bait "something from our attic." Included is a "broken down Jacobean chair used by some forgotten Hamlet or a curious walking stick made of cows' horns used by heaven knows who. We might even throw in a plaster bust of Shapespeare. Anyway, it's worth a tea service just to see our attic."

Barterers take note. The library presumably will have a dozen sets by the time you read this.

France to Get More Jet Planes

NEW YORK, March 19 (NANA).—The Western European Union signed at Brussels and the impending North Atlantic defence pact will rescue France from a "disastrous" air inferiority, it is reported in a Paris dispatch to the Madrid newspaper Informaciones, which explains that France has only five jet fighters to contribute to the "minimum interception force" of 1,500 predicted by military experts of the British - French - Belgian-Dutch-Luxembourgian alliance.

The situation is being remedied, says the Spanish correspondent, with the readying of the Hispano Suiza automobile and aircraft plant for production of Vampire jet fighters for the French Air Force under British licence. Initial output of 100 Vampires is planned for the current year, with considerably accelerated production in 1950.

Movies, Radio Heavily Hit By Television

WASHINGTON, March 19 (NANA).—Of those having television sets here only 49 per cent listen to A.M. (standard) radio, a new-type survey by a local radio station reveals.

Also, the survey discloses that, while 35 per cent of the capital's population goes to a movie during a typical week, only 22 per cent of those with television sets are weekly movie-goers.

The survey, conducted under a new plan whereby those interviewed kept diaries of their radio listening and television viewing, found that, of an estimated 1,300,000 persons in the Washington metropolitan area, 97% have radios in their homes and 8.5 per cent have television sets.

Do Frequent Washings Harm Your Hair?

Actual facts prove your hair gets far dirtier than your body

Should you wash your hair only every 3 or 4 weeks?

"Ridiculous," say hair experts. "Your hair picks up more dirt than any other part of the body. It traps dust, soot and grime from the air. You wash your hands several times a day — you should wash your hair at least once a week."

But when you wash your hair, make sure all dirt and dandruff are completely removed from your scalp. Dandruff warns you that dirt, dried skin, etc. have combined with scalp oil and perspiration to form a waxy accumulation lying tightly over your scalp. This chokes off nourishment from your hair. It must be dissolved away if you want healthy, good-looking hair.

Fitch Dandruff Remover Shampoo is guaranteed to remove dandruff. After it dissolves all dirt and dandruff, Fitch washes them away in a creamy, stimulating lather. Your scalp is left antiseptically clean because Fitch Dandruff Remover Shampoo gets right down into the tiny hair openings in the scalp and cleans them out, so your hair can grow lustrous, healthy, and alive-looking.

Band Exemplifies "Spirit of '49"

IT takes more than broken arm to quell enthusiasm of Victoria Boys' Band members. Shown above is Lloyd Evans, 171 Bushby Street, still knocking out beat on two on snare drum despite fact his arm is still in cast. Bandmaster C. A Rowles matches spirit of his boys, is capable of standing on his head and conducting with his feet, if musical education of Victoria youth can be forwarded thereby. Band has concert coming up April 1.

Golden Age Not Reached by City Clubs for Elderly Badly Needed

The golden age has not yet dawned in Victoria.

Dr. Marian N. Sherman, president of the Victoria Community Welfare Service, told a joint meeting of Victoria welfare associations and agencies, this week, that Victoria is in need of clubs for the elderly—under the name "Golden Age"—"or any other name."

Such clubs can render a great service to the community by making those "who are to seem liabilities" into persons who are "inspiring examples to all."

Dr Sherman said there is also an "urgent need" for more community centres to provide creative leisure time activities for all. The two centres associated with the council, one at James Bay and the other at Esquimalt, are doing "excellent work," she stated.

LATEST VENTURE

Latest venture linked with the Welfare Council is the Victoria Committee for Mental Hygiene, Dr. Sherman reported.

"There is a great need for this new committee," she said.

"It will speed up mental health locally as well as keeping in touch with the work being done by the newest branch of U.N.E.S.C.O.—the World Federation for Mental Health."

The Community Welfare Council received $2,067.90 from Community Chest Funds, according to a recent report.

This is about one tenth of the amount ($21,375) received by the Family Welfare and Children's Aid Society, the same report signifies. By these figures 4 cents per capita per capita to the society's welfare contribution from Victorians goes to work

American Teen-Agers Cause Raised Eyebrows in Germany

FRANKFORT, March 19 (NANA)

Are American teen-agers overseas going to the dogs? That's the main topic of conversation these days over the teacups and in the sewing circles of this biscuit capital of British-American military government.

British mamas here aren't, with a toss of the head, that American mothers could know little about it because they are too busy playing bridge and drinking cocktails, leaving their children in charge of German maids from morn 'till night.

WEEK-END PARTIES

American mothers indignantly deny the charge, though one wife of an infantry colonel admitted the United States teen-agers might be going too far in their week-end parties, she said.

"I don't know what I'm going to do about letting my girls have their bunch out at the house another time. Last time, the kids threw darts at our newly-painted walls, ate two dozen eggs, drank all the milk in the house and every single blessed bottle of coke—and then some smart aleck dropped eggs on the kitchen floor to see how they would splash.

"It was a job to get them to go home at 1 a.m."

The children are 14-to-18-year-old offspring of United States military and civil personnel in Germany. Here in Frankfort they attend an army-supervised high school. Younger children go to an elementary school or to none at all.

As for the younger ones, British women here call these "regular dead-end kids." One said:

"Why, it's awful! Those children are out in the street from 8 in the morning till late at night, sometimes 10 o'clock. When a woman passes by, they hoot at you and throw sticks and snowballs. They hop rides on army trucks and steal whatever's hanging out the back just as bad children do."

MERELY FUN

Replying to this attack most American mothers smile and say, "those stuffy Britishers don't realise our children know how to use their freedom. They have fun."

A first-hand inquiry at the high school disclosed a normal American atmosphere with some of the boys and girls practising jitterbugging in the hall during the noon recess.

One 16-year-old girl student admitted, "Kids will be kids. They're the same as back home. The girls do smoke more than the boys, though," Margaret Keller added thoughtfully.

The favorite dance of the moment, according to this Cleveland girl, is the hoky-poky, an English step. Everybody likes the European polka, too. The favorite American hit tune is "Lavender Blue."

School slang for top approval of anything is "prima," which Germans use. Disparagement is expressed also by the German "macht's nichts," implying sophisticated indifference.

RANK CONSCIOUS

A few of the boys and girls are sort of rank conscious. That is, they tend to pull rank fathers' rank on their fellows at times. But, generally speaking, it's one big family at the school. The children do a lot of traveling to go to parties, sometimes 100 miles for a week-end. Those with cars offer lifts to the less lucky ones.

Life at the school has been rather dull lately, Margaret said. Recently, however, there was a tense moment. The girls showed up en masse one day with knee-length wool socks. The boys threatened a strike if the girls did not revert at once to nylons. The girls did. Besides, the wool socks itched.

CROSS-COUNTRY TRUCKING

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP)—Huge yellow 18-wheel trucks operated by an Alaska trucking line roll through here weekly carrying an average 22,000 pound load from the United States to Alaska each month. The 3,200-mile route from Seattle Wash. to Fairbanks requires 8½ days travel.

Play 'To Beat the Band'; City Youths Plan Concert

It's the band that plays to beat the band.

Why C. A. Rowles, who has been leading juvenile orchestras and bands in Victoria for at least 20 years, should need introduction, is a bit of a mystery.

Mr. Rowles says that a story is needed so that his boys can sell more tickets.

Latest version of the Victoria Boys' Band will present a concert on April 1 at Brittania Branch of the Canadian Legion Hall at 1816 Blanshard Street, he announces.

FIVE INSTRUMENTS

Featured will be musical prodigy, 12-year-old John Smith, who will play no less than five musical instruments in the course of the night's entertainment.

Instruments young Smith will play are slide clarinet, octarina, violin, piano and bugle.

He will also play on a tin whistle, which Mr. Rowles picked up in England for 2s 6d.

At present young Mr. Smith is concentrating on marimba lessons.

According to Mr. Rowles, a marimba is a xylophone, "mellowed off."

MELLOW XYLOPHONE

Highlights on the band selections for the April 1 concert include selections on this "mellow" xylophone and a musical sketch.

The musical sketch, according to advance notice, concerns an old retired theatre manager who advertises for servants. It develops in the simple plot that what he really wants are people who can play music to entertain him, what time they are not dusting furniture or laying out the master's clothes.

The musical possibilities are obvious, says Mr. Rowles, who plays one of the job applicants.

Assisting Artist, Sylvia Slusarenko, will present a number of accordion selections at the concert.

Mayor Percy George, a long-time supporter of the band, will be on hand to open the concert program, Mr. Rowles says.

More for Cattle

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP).—Cattle demand was keen this week, with Eastern markets 25 to 50 cents higher, and Western markets up to $1 better on most grades, the Dominion Agriculture Department reported in its weekly livestock review.

Export demand improved, and was mainly responsible for the second successive week's upturn in prices.

At Toronto, choice weighty steers brought $20-$21.25; good light steers, $19.50-$20, and good cows, $16-$17. Montreal sold good light steers at $19.50-$20.50. Good cows were traded at $15-$16. Winnipeg had choice light steers at $21, and good cows, $15-$16; Calgary, $21.50; Edmonton, $20; Saskatoon, $18-$19; Prince Albert, $18.50; Moose Jaw, $19-$19.50, and Regina, $18.50-$19.

60 YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

In early days the "horse power", operated by teams of horses hitched to its arms and walking in a circle, supplied the power to operate the threshing machine and other farm machines. Today tractors and engines supply the power to operate most farm machines. Nickel Steel and Nickel Cast Iron are used for important parts of tractors and other farm machines to give extra strength, toughness and wear resistance, and to eliminate breakdowns.

Canadian Nickel sold Abroad brings in U.S. Dollars

Since more than ninety per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is sold to the United States and other countries, it brings a constant flow of dollars back to Canada. In fact, Canada's Nickel industry is one of our chief sources of U.S. dollars so essential at the present time to maintain our foreign trade and make available products not produced in this country.

These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees, and help provide the dollars which make it possible to pay millions in freight to Canadian railways, to buy timber, steel, coal, machinery and supplies amounting to many millions each year.

These millions, flowing into all industries through the length and breadth of Canada, help create jobs for Canadians.

It chanced there were no other customers in the bank as Andre made his leisurely exit. The young teller stood motionless and tense, staring down at the two green cheques in a species of fascination. Strangely enough it had not yet occurred to him to wonder how Andy Delaine might have garnered that fortune from the plane company.

Twenty-five thousand dollars! More than half of it Carol's. But it might as well all be hers. That deposit cut him off from his greatest hope like shears severing a strand of twine. His world had crashed leaving a sickening void.

"I say, Lennon! What the devil ails you?" asked a low rasping voice that made him start. Silas Higgins had entered the cage noiselessly.

"Nothing at all, sir. I was just a little surprised . . ."

Silas edged up and peered down at the two cheques on the counter. He made a quer little noise in his throat, snatched at the nearest slip and looked at the endorsement as if to assure himself that his eyes were not deceiving him.

"You mean to tell me Delaine deposited these?"

"Just now, sir. One . . . ten thousand . . . for himself. The other one to the credit of Miss Delaine."

"Hm. Drawn by the Lawhead Corporation . . . certified, too. Good God! Did want worthless shrimp own any of that factory land, Lennon?"

"I didn't suppose so, Mr. Higgins. But I . . ."

"But what?"

"I happened to be calling at the Delaines' one evening when Mr. Dennison came to see Andy. I remember it was the first day Mr. Dennison was in town." Perhaps he should not have mentioned that, but it was too late now.

"I'm going to look into that. I suppose you realize that deposit makes one of our best accounts. Never supposed I'd have to be civil to that fellow. Humph! There's one good thing. It won't be long in getting into circulation. He'll spend it like water."

Wige drew a deep sigh, picked up the cheques and laid them in a drawer with other receipts.

Meanwhile the "worthless shrimp" lingered in the sunshine that bathed the bank steps. His hands were thrust in his pockets as he stared thoughtfully in the distance. For the first time in his life he felt a sensation of complete security. There was no particular elation, but the world seemed different. It was different.

"I don't get it," he murmured in near bewilderment. He touched his small mustache as if to reassure himself of that one reality. "My faith, I don't get it. I should be going to Tip Gordon's and order that car for ducklet. Instead, I'm going to get a hamburger at the Greek's then go back and press ——."

CHAPTER IX

Carol Delain had a dim recollection that she had seen her name on the cover of the first bank book she took from Andy's hand. But it was the single entry glimpsed in each one that stunned her, sent her senses reeling. Fifteen thousand dollars. Two fifteen thousand dollars made thirty thousand dollars. Thirty thousand dollars! Then Andy's voice penetrated her dazed consciousness. It seemed to be coming from a great distance.

"THEN it easy, ducklet. If you're going to swoon, try for the bed. You're too heavy for me to handle."

"I . . . I'm all right . . ." Nevertheless, she sank down on a chair and looked up helplessly into her father's face. "I don't understand," she told him in a small voice.

"You don't have to. If it's going to do that for you. Oh, I forgot." He went to the dresser, rummaged out a pair of cheque books which he tossed into Carol's lap. "You can start practicing any time you like. It's all yours."

"But . . . but Andy . . ." Large tears gathered in her eyes and rolled down her white cheeks.

"Come, now! It isn't so serious as all that. Darned if you aren't making me feel foolish!" Andy's voice was slightly husky. "If you must know, your old man turned a deal a while back. That's your share of the profits." He thrust a handkerchief at her.

"My share?" she said, and used the big square of linen thankfully.

"That's right. I kept a bit for myself."

"Where did you get it, Andy? I want to know." Carol was more composed but there was no doubt, something almost like fright, in her brown eyes.

"Oh, I sold a tract of land. I didn't need it and that plane company thought they could use it for a flying field. That's all there is to it. I let them off cheap, at that."

"Andy! You didn't own any land!"

"I did so. At least I owned an option on it. Same thing."

"I don't know what you mean." Somewhere in the back of her mind she was beginning to connect this with Mr. Dennison's visit. But it didn't yet make sense. She tried to concentrate on Andy's airy explanation.

"It's done every day. Take . . . well, take a new oil field for instance. Somebody brings in a gusher. Right away people buy options on adjoining land where there could be more oil. An option is merely the privilege of buying the land later if one wants to. They're usually cheap. . . . If one's quick enough. That's what I did. Struck oil. See?"

"Ye . . . es." It sounded all right. But there was that hateful suggestion Mr. Dennison had made about falling among thieves! She steadied her voice resolutely. "Andy, was it . . . was it perfectly honest?" Everything in the world hinged on his answer.

"My word for it," he answered simply. His eyes met hers without flinching.

"Then it's all right. I . . . I'd never hurt your feelings, Andy. But I had to know. It seems so . . ."

"Of course," he assured her. "You had the right to ask that, darling. I'm glad you did because . . . it was a shrewd move, if I do say it. There isn't a man in Jericho who wouldn't have done the same thing if he could and held out for a bigger profit. It wasn't such an original idea after all. But you can make up your mind that some people will be sore that I beat them to a good thing. They'll go so far as to hint . . . you know. You can afford to overlook it."

"But it means we're . . . we're rich!"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that. Just a little stake to comfort us in our old age. And it gives me a chance to do something for you. I never have, you know. That's all that matters. I'll enjoy my funeral more, now."

"Oh, Andy, please! Don't say that!" She drew a long quivering breath. Her eyes filled again, but she managed a smile. "I can't quite get used to it. Does Auntie know?"

"No. I had to tell you first. I suppose I'd better break the news to her before she picks it up from the neighbors. Do you suppose she'll up my rates here? Cassie has been having delusions of grandeur since Amos came to us, I think."

Carol laughed a little shakily at that. Amos was Mr. Davis, although his first name was George. He had taken a great fancy to Andy and the two played pinochle almost every evening. It was Carol who had christened the newcomer "Amos." Her father stood looking at her with a slightly worried expression.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THAT WORD "COPE" as in "TO COPE WITH"—To Bargain?

"I love to cope him in these sullen fits."

When Shakespeare wrote this he indicated the old usage of the verb "to cope." Not more than a century later, Joseph Addison, of the famous "Spectator Papers," said, just as we should today, "Their generals have not been able to cope with the troops of Athens."

To cope with a condition or a situation is to meet it, to strive to do one's best in the circumstances, to struggle against whatever the odds may be to accomplish one's objective. It means to contend with difficulties, but not in the sense of a contest fight. In the present usage of the expression no hostility is involved, such as existed in another instance in Shakespeare: "They say yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down." And again, almost 100 years after Shakespeare, the now almost forgotten English poet Philips wrote

"Host coped with host, dire was the din of war."

And now we come to the source of all this struggle, and find it is not in a military sense, but in the contention of bargaining! The word derives from the Old English "copen," or coupen," meaning "to buy" or "to bargain"! It is thought to come from the Dutch "koopen," to bargain. Its earliest significance was to exchange or barter, then to contend with, to match, to enter into a hostile contest with, and finally, as it is used in our every day speech, simply to meet difficulties, to cope with the situation in hand!

Wins Wealth —Continues Felling Trees

COMOX, B.C., March 19 (CP) — Tommy McQuillan, a logger at this Vancouver Island town, is $58,000 wealthier today.

McQuillan last night received a cable from a sister in Australia telling him he had won $58,000 in a state-sponsored hospital sweepstake.

He's happy—but says it's not going to make any difference in his way of life.

He's still felling trees.

B.C. Will Pay Highway Costs

LADYSMITH, March 19.—Sequel to a request by the city that Provincial Works Department remedy drainage problems on First Avenue, (main highway through here), arrangements have been completed whereby city crews will do the work and the Provincial Government foot the cost.

M. C. Nesbitt, assistant district engineer, was in the city recently consulting with local officials on the matter. His department will pay the account for labor and materials covering construction of three catch-basins on First Avenue south of Buller. A department surveyor will set the grades.

General works chairman, Ald. R. Battle, said the plan solves an urgent drainage problem, and work has already begun. Government crews are busy with extreme highway and sideroad conditions.

Surface drainage became acute here following reconstruction of First Avenue which raised street levels, flooding sidewalks, and, more recently, property.

Pearkes Says V.I. Poultrymen Suffer by Federal Legislation

By Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, March 19. — Poultry producers on Vancouver Island are greatly perturbed over the loss of foreign markets, Major-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., Progressive Conservative, Nanaimo, said last night in a Commons debate dealing with extension of the Agricultural Products Act for another year.

"We have heard that the loss of markets is due to the shortage of dollars, but I have heard many farmers on Vancouver Island ask whether it is shortage of dollars or a shortage of foresight," the member declared.

Gen. Pearkes questioned the desirability of continuing the legislation under discussion "because it has brought such difficulties to the poultry farmers of British Columbia."

Poultrymen stepped up production at the request of the Government, he pointed out. In 1946 Canada shipped 10,296 hundredweight of dressed poultry to Great Britain. At the request of the Government, poultrymen boosted production enormously and in 1947 exports of dressed poultry to the United Kingdom were increased to 107,452 hundredweight.

Last year the total amount shipped was only nine hundredweight, the member pointed out.

"Do not let it be said the price made any great difference and that Britain was not able to pay the price which Canada demanded," continued Major-Gen. Pearkes. In 1947 the price for poultry was $35.74 per hundredweight, while the price for other countries in that year was $48.05.

PRICES NOT DOWN

"In 1948 we had no appreciable exports to the United Kingdom. Other countries, however, had not kept their prices down. Oh, no, the price had gone up. It had risen from $48.05 in 1947 to $61.75 per hundredweight.

"Where are those imports into the United Kingdom coming from?" We find the imports in the United Kingdom from other countries had increased to the extent of about 300,000 hundredweight.

One country shipping poultry to Great Britain is Hungary, the member said. In 1948 that country exported 102,877 hundredweight to the British market, while Canada exported nine hundredweight.

"We have lost the British market for Canadian poultry and have lost it to Hungary," declared Gen. Pearkes.

DESTINATION UNKNOWN

Hungary has imported certain commodities in exchange for the poultry products she exported. The United Kingdom sent to Hungary in exchange for the poultry products she was receiving, iron and steel manufactures to a value of $596,242.

"We must remember, said Maj.-Gen. Pearkes, 'that Canada has been importing steel manufactured articles from the United States.'

Hungary is behind the Iron Curtain and "we do not know the ultimate destination of the goods shipped to that country," the member pointed out.

This cannot be "passed off lightly."

The fact is, concluded Gen. Pearkes, the United Kingdom market was lost because of policies followed under the legislation before the House for extension.

Queried yesterday, representative Vancouver Island poultrymen agreed with Gen. Pearkes that their industry had suffered under existing controls.

Two and three years ago, they said, producers had multiplied their output in a determined effort to fill the British contracts, both for dressed poultry and for eggs. Suddenly, last year, they found no orders.

While the position appeared that conditions on the Island were somewhat better than on the Mainland, they stated that some individuals suffered heavily last year, and this year only hoped to make a living.

Oppose Closing Of Ladysmith Insurance Unit

LADYSMITH, March 19 — President W. H. Bryant, Ladysmith Chamber of Commerce, will interview authorities regarding the proposed closure of the Provincial Hospital Insurance office here this month.

Opening discussion on the matter at last week's meeting of the local chamber, past president J. Cochrane, declared they "should do something about it."

With 850 applications on file at the local office, it was felt that a service, proportionate to the number involved, should be continued, since it would be costly to the individuals and inconvenient if all inquiries had to be made at Nanaimo.

A similar situation here was cited, when more than 600 residents were required to travel to Nanaimo to register for Unemployment Insurance, until establishment of a sub-office in the city.

An official communication from the chamber will follow the personal contact established by the president.

Frank Dockrill, committee chairman, told members that district president Brent Murdock, of the Victoria Junior Chamber, will visit here shortly to discuss organization of a Junior Chamber here. A number of applicants have stated their desire to join.

"I'm in business for myself"

CHARLES LITTLE, Independent Chevron Dealer of Qualicum

"When I opened up my Independent Chevron Gas Station at Qualicum in 1945, I fulfilled an old ambition—I was in business for myself. And in the three years I've been my own boss, I've managed to build my business to a point where I'm doing ten times the original volume. That's exciting and satisfying. I know I fill a need in the community I serve . . . I know I sell good products, and I'm dead set on giving good service. What's more, in British Columbia, I've got the opportunity to build an even better business for myself and my family. As an independent business man working for myself, I know that such freedom of opportunity is mighty important. Without it, I'd never have got started and without it my ambition would have stayed just a lot of wishful thinking."

Island Mural Depicts Magnitude of Logging, Lumber Industries

IMPORTANCE and magnitude of British Columbia's great logging and lumber industries is depicted in large 11 by 13-foot photographic mural which has been completed by Victoria photographer, Ken McAllister, for Mainland lumber export sales firm. Mural consists of 30 individual pictures, each 27 inches square.

Photographs tell lumber and logging story of province, and practically all pictures are "action shots."

Familiar scene to British Columbia residents, and particularly Victorians, is that shown at upper left, where millions of feet of fine-grade lumber are being loaded into freighters and destined for various parts of world. Ready for lumber mill are logs seen in upper right illustration, where boom is being broken up preparatory to entry into lumber mill by means of endless chain "log haul." Mostly Douglas fir, these logs were brought to local mill from heavily timbered region of Vancouver Island.

Plywood industry of province is becoming increasingly important, and several great mills for production of this article have been established on Vancouver Island and on Mainland. Bottom left picture shows method by which heavy lathes are employed to peel sheets of veneer from sections of logs from which bark has been removed. Thin sheets of wood are peeled off in continuous order, later being cut into desired lengths. Remaining "core," too small in diameter for further peeling, is pulverized and used in manufacture of wallboard. Making of plywood is speedy operation.

Wealth of B.C.'s vast lumber industry is dependent upon such giants of forests as Douglas fir shown in lower centre picture. This tree grows in Goldstream district. Three separate pictures, trunk, this centre portion, and top—of this fir have been arranged in mural to provide vertical unity to art-piece.

Lower right illustration shows important phase of plywood production, in which sheets of veneer are glued together in proper order, and then "hot pressed" in special unit of machinery. Large slotted press is seen at left in photograph.

Coal Production Shows Increase

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP).—Coal production in Canada increased 45 per cent last February over the corresponding month a year ago, the Bureau of Statistics said today.

Output for the month totaled 1,673,500 tons as compared with 1,155,000 a year ago. Imports dropped 25 per cent from 1,104,000 to 824,000 tons.

Substantial production increases in Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia were given by the bureau as chief reason for the increase in the February output of Canadian coal.

Mines in Alberta produced 798,200 tons, compared with 360,200 in February, 1948. Total for Nova Scotia was 498,300 tons compared with 521,400, Saskatchewan 209,000 (193,900); British Columbia and Yukon 150,000 (45,600), New Brunswick 38,000 (33,900).

TORONTO, March 19 (CP).—Traders Finance Corporation Ltd. reported net profit of $1,003,527 for 1948 in the annual report, compared with $709,711 in 1947. Gross income totaled $5,250,691, against $3,641,535, and net current assets were the highest in the company's history at $25,538,321.

Should Tonsils Be Removed?

By DR. J. R. WARREN

Large tonsils, not infected, do not need to be removed unless they are blocking the tube carrying air to middle ear. However, if inflamed (infected), all tonsils large or small should be removed. Where there are attacks of tonsilitis followed a few weeks later by rheumatic fever or rheumatism the tonsils should be removed. Infected teeth should be removed before removing infected tonsils. The infected teeth may be causing infection of tonsils.

Naval Reservists Here To Use Minesweeper

Marine News

H.M.C.S. Sault Ste. Marie, first Algerine minesweeper built for the Royal Canadian Navy, will be recommissioned early next month as a tender to the naval reserve division of H.M.C.S. Malahat, it was announced yesterday.

Now in the reserve fleet at Esquimalt, the ship will be the only one attached to a reserve division in Canada.

Organized week-end cruises will start soon after its commissioning and continue throughout the Summer.

Commissioning of the minesweeper was authorized in order to implement training of Malahat ships company recently selected for minesweeping and seaward defence duties. The ship will be equipped with all the latest navigational aids, minesweeping and other equipment.

NEW LIMIT

The new naval reserve minimum age limit of 17 means young Victoria reservists will now have the opportunity of serving aboard a ship of their own for training. Under the cruise schedule, they will visit many points along Puget Sound, Vancouver Island and Southern British Columbia coast lines.

Present members of Malahat ship's company will hold their first parade aboard the Sault Ste. Marie tomorrow evening at H.C.M. Dockyard where the minesweeper now is undergoing refit.

Sault Ste Marie was first launched at Port Arthur, Ont., in June, 1943, and a day later officially commissioned and christened at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., by the mayor.

HEADED CREW

Cmdr. Reginald Jackson of Calgary was the commissioning commanding officer, and Lieut.-Cmdr. James Golby of Victoria, executive officer.

Ratings now serving on the West Coast who served aboard her during the war are C.P.O. Arthur Nieman, coxswain of H.M.C.S. Rockcliffe; C.P.O. Thomas Williams, P.O. Peter McKeeven and P.O. Edward Carter, all of H.M.C.S. Naden, and P.O. William Buchanan, in H.M.C.S. Crescent in the Far East.

In November, 1943, the Sault Ste Marie took part in escort duties until 1945 when she left the East Coast for Esquimalt. Shortly after her arrival here she was decommissioned.

Seattle Yawl Enters Race

W. Helsell's 54-foot yawl Westward Ho will take part in a yacht race from San Pedro, Calif., to Honolulu, starting July 4.

Mr. Helsell, a member of the Seattle Yacht Club, is known to many Victoria yachtsmen including members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Great interest is being shown in the contest known to yachtsmen as "the Honolulu race." The course will cover 2,225 miles, the longest regularly scheduled yacht race in the world.

Scheduled to be held in alternate years, the 1947 race had 34 contestants.

Entries have already been received from widely scattered areas, including Australia, Puget Sound, Oregon, and California. At least two entries are expected from Hawaii, and there is a good possibility of two more from Australia, and one from Mexico.

FAVOR TAX

The Alaska Senate has voted 11 to 5 for the cold storage raw fish tax which provides a 1 per cent tax on raw halibut, salmon, bottom fish or shell fish.

The bill must now return to the House because it was removed from the all-inclusive Fish Industry Tax Bill for consideration apart from the Canned Fish Tax Bill which still is pending in the Senate.

Sault Ste. Marie to Be Reserve Training Ship

EARLY next month H.M.C.S. Sault Ste. Marie, now unit of reserve fleet at Esquimalt, will be recommissioned to serve as training ship for Naval Division H.M.C.S. Malahat. Vessel, pictured in top photograph, is now undergoing refit at H.M.C. Dockyard. Bottom picture shows Lieut. A. O. Gray, R.C.N., staff officer, at left, and Cmdr. R. Jackson, R.C.N. (R.), commanding officer, H.M.C.S. Malahat in course of inspecting Algerine minesweeper.

FUNERAL HELD

Funeral services for Svend Saubery Krag, 50, were held yesterday afternoon at Sands Memorial Chapel, with Rev. George Biddle officiating. He was buried at Royal Oak.

Mr. Krag, resident here for the past ten years, was a former training officer with the Rainbow Sea Cadet organization. He died in Vancouver Thursday.

A native of Copenhagen, Denmark, he came to Canada and settled in Winnipeg before moving to the Coast. During the World War he served with the Canadian Scottish Regiment.

DEFEND ATTACK

Units of the Canadian Navy rallied yesterday to intercept and engage a "rival" force moving in to bombard St. John, Antigua.

Naval headquarters said the six Canadian ships, three each from the Atlantic and Pacific Coast, would defend the Caribbean capital against a force of Royal Navy craft.

The mock battle is part of manoeuvers being held in the Caribbean.

Following the "action," the ships will enter St. John, discuss the results and head out to sea again to continue exercises.

SHIP FREE

Louis P. Blais, president of the St. Lawrence Sea Products of Quebec, said yesterday the Lady Cecile, a 500-ton motor vessel, was free of the ice in which it had been caught in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Mr. Blais said he had just received a cable that the ship was free and all danger to the vessel and crew had passed.

A report earlier from Halifax said the ice-breaker Saurel was en route to the Lady Cecile.

NOT OPTIMISTIC

Whaling interests of Norway are anything but optimistic about the future.

At an annual meeting of one of Norway's largest whaling company's recently, its president noted prices had dropped considerably, the Germans want to participate in the industry, Argentina is preparing a new expedition, the Russians are planning five expeditions, and the blue whale is getting shmaller both in size and in number each year.

Naval Veterans Oppose Dockyard Guard Switch

Security of naval property at H.M.C. Dockyard is the centre of controversy with the Corps of Commissionaires seeking the task currently being carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and civil service security guards, it was learned here.

R.C.M.P. officers on the gate at the Dockyard are being withdrawn March 31, and will be assigned to other duties.

Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P. for Nanaimo, intimated last week in a letter from Ottawa that the request of the Corps of Commissionaires was still being given consideration.

TWO YEARS

Two years ago, the Corps of Commissionaires made a bid for the security police posts, which was turned down in favor of the veterans then carrying out the job. On February 1, 1948, the civilian guard was given civil service classification with pay and benefits superior to that offered by the Corps. The Corps, it is reported, would welcome the present guards as members.

Latest voice in the controversy came from Naval Veterans' Branch No. 42, Canadian Legion, in a resolution opposing the Corps "invading the field of employment for giving security to naval property in this area, which is already provided for by civil service classifications."

WANTS VETERANS

The Legion resolution, approved at a general meeting last week, recommended that the R.C.M.P. be replaced by veterans with overseas service at the current civil service classifications.

Under the civil service, the men are under two classifications in a salary scale of $155-$180 a month and $[illegible]. They get 18 days annual leave with pay, 18 days sick leave cumulative from year to year, and special leave with pay.

In the past, the security guards have taken over from the R.C.M.P. at the magazine during day watches.

Disadvantages cited to the men joining the Corps included the fact that Commissionaires work a 48-hour week at an hourly wage, must buy their uniforms and pay dues.

Supervisor of civilian guards at the Dockyard is Lt.-Cmdr. R. Bourke, V.C.

EARTH GASES

The permanent gases near the surface of the earth are mainly nitrogen, oxygen and argon.

REJECTS REPORT

The Canadian Seamen's Union headquarters has announced that the crew of Canadian National Steamships Lady Rodney, in Halifax, has rejected the report of a conciliation board and requested strike sanction.

No immediate action was indicated by headquarters.

The board dealt with requests concerning working conditions and pay increases but the union announcement did not indicate what was unsatisfactory in the board's findings.

NO DESERTER

F. W. Taylor, director of immigration in Vancouver, said yesterday the British seaman who missed his ship recently at Port Alberni, is not a deserter.

He said the seaman P. L. Senior, became panic-stricken when immigration officers questioned him on the Ss. Rembrandt, and leaped into the water.

There was no explanation about the cause of his panic.

THIRD SECTION

NO. 84—NINETY-FIRST YEAR VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, MARCH 20, 1949

They're in the Money . . .

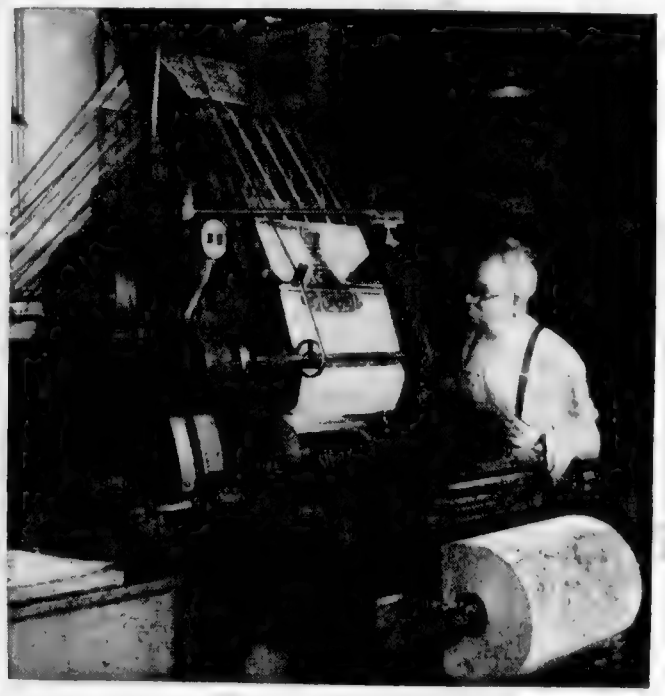

Those crisp new bills that you get from the bank look like small sheets of parchment with a lot of intricate curlycues, a couple of pictures and colored green, yellow and purple depending on the denomination of the bill. But there is more to it than meets the eye. It is a long and tedious process from the rolls of special paper to the finished currency.

In the Beginning—The steel plate carrying the impressions of 24 one-dollar impressions must be hardened before it is used on the press for printing. The hardening is done by immersing the steel plate in a hot solution of cyanide at 1,500 degrees F. for a certain period of time, then removed and dipped in oil. Later it is cooled in water. It is when the plate touches the water, due to the excessive heat, oxygen is separated from the water and the steel plate is covered with flames for a fraction of a second.

Engraver at Work—All designs that are to go on the Canadian currency are engraved on a steel plate. Here an engraver is engraving a plate with a small three-sided steel tool called a "graver."

The Printing Process—The pile of sheets of paper on the left side have already the first impression and are passed in the machine for a second impression to complete the face printing.

The Refrigeration Plant—In a large room with its walls covered with coils the temperature is kept about 50 degrees all the time. Printed dollar sheets just off the press are brought here to rest for several days before they are put to dry. It is necessary that all newly printed sheets come to the refrigerator as a certain amount of time is necessary for the paper to recondition itself or to go back to its normal condition.

Hot Off the Press—The armsfull of money in brand new dollar bills shown here and carried by two young ladies of the currency division represent the sum of $10,000.

Finishing Department—All notes, before they are shipped to the Bank of Canada, are checked and examined carefully. A small fortune here.

Out of Circulation—The life of one-dollar bills is eight or nine months. All old dollar bills are turned into the Bank of Canada and are later burned in an incinerator. Here's a truckful of old bank notes on their way to the incinerator.

Checking for Counterfeits—An assistant chemist examines with a microscope a dollar bill reported counterfeit. The microscope will reveal how the tissue of the paper is made. Since the paper used by the company is of special make, any foreign paper will be shown up immediately.

The Higher Bracket—With more than $600,000,000 in bank notes in circulation in Canada, and with the life of a dollar bill only about nine months, there is need for stacks of money like this at the Canadian Bank Note Company in Ottawa. It contains $1,500,000 in five bills.

There's Thousands Here—Twenty-dollar bills are carefully checked for flaws. This while full represents many thousands of dollars to be sent out to replace those old ones.

Rich Harvest From the Backwoods

FROM the forests of the northlands where the snow lies thick and loggers are known as woodsmen, thousands upon thousands of sticks of pulpwood to go into the making of newsprint or synthetic silk will soon clog rivers and streams on their way to the mills. Pulpwood camps are dotted all over wood limits in Northern Ontario and Northern Quebec, and each year the harvest of logs runs into millions of dollars.

The camps are in most cases company operated, although smaller groups go into the woods and later sell to companies. Three or four men will cut during the Winter and "water" their cut for the drive downstreams or haul to a lake where the wood is stacked onto the ice for rafting.

While tractor and truck form the mode of transportation in the larger operations now, it is not so long ago that horse-drawn sleighs transported pulpwood and timber over skid roads, the runner tracks being iced for easier hauling. From the pulpwood limit to the pulp and paper mills is a long series of operations which commences with the actual cutting of the wood into required lengths, haulage, watering, rafting and water transport. If for export to the United States pulpwood may be loaded from a raft into the holds of cargo vessels. If the mill is in Canada the rafts of pulpwood are towed from the nearest point to woods operations to the mill site.

Breakfast Gong—Donat Cagnon, cook for a camp of 43 woodsmen at Forbes Depot, 109 miles north of Ottawa, knows how hungry a logger can get. When he rings this triangular gong to start things rolling in camp, he and his assistants have to brace themselves for the breakfast-table onslaught

C.P. Photos

Off to Work—Typical of gangs in all parts of the pulpwood country, these woodsmen start off the day with a smile. Working at top speed to prepare for the log drives which come at the Spring break-up, they'll spend the day cutting pulp logs into four-foot lengths. Corps of foresters work on the same sites, ensuring perpetual forest growth and continuation of one of Canada's largest industries

Welcome Break—It's a rugged way of lunching, but still the most welcome part of the day to these husky pulpwood cutters. This midday meal is the principal social function of the woodcutters, who each cut as much as five cords of wood a day.

Traffic Cop—Such is the lonesomeness which comes from a long life in the open air is Joe Cote, a "dump boss" near Forbes Depot, Que. In the logging business for nearly a half century, Joe directs traffic on frozen Rapid Lake where logs are dumped to await the Spring thaw. By Spring the "dump" may amount to 115,000 cords.

Newsprint in the Raw—On the frozen surface of a Gatineau district lake north of Ottawa, these pulpwood logs are cut and waiting for the Spring break-up, when the log drive starts. They'll be swept down to the Ottawa district and become anything from newsprint to synthetic silk. Canada's pulpwood industry, which employs nearly 328,000 Canadians, is five times that of any other country.

Russia Making Siberia Stronghold

HONGKONG, China (UP). — The heart of Russian Siberia is undergoing a great industrial expansion that by 1950 will make the U.S.S.R. as much an Asiatic as a European power from the viewpoint of basic industries.

The Far Eastern Economic Review, in an analysis of the current five-year plan (1946-1950) at its half-way mark, found that production is running somewhat ahead of schedule. By the end of that time, 47.5 per cent of all coal is to come from the Urals and points east, and more than half the total steel output.

Coal output of the Urals is scheduled to rise 2.7 times by the end of the period to rival the leading eastern coal field. A 1,200-mile section of the Trans-Siberian Railway is being electrified to expediate transport and will become the world's longest electric railroad.

Completion is expected of the huge Novo-Tagil steel works and the Chelibinsk works, as well as substantial progress in four other unfinished plants in the Urals and Siberia.

A new plant will be built in Kazakhstan. Particular attention is being directed toward expanding the production of thin cold-rolled sheet steel, of which the Chelibinsk plant will be the principal producer in the U.S.S.R.

The Review said the five-year plan shows certain regional emphases. For example, expansion in the Urals is centred upon the iron and steel industry and electric power supply. Lumbering and woodworking also are receiving major attention.

Siberia proper (excluding the Urals, the Far East and Central Asia) will provide coal, gold and other metals, wheat, automobiles, tractors, harvester combines, locomotives, textiles and leather. In the Kuzbass coal region, resources of iron ore, manganese, zinc and bauxite are being developed. An aluminum plant transferred there during the war is expected to treble its output by 1950.

The Review said tillage in the Kuzbass is being increased 25 per cent to feed the expanding population, and now under construction are 129 schools, 125 public libraries, 30 hospitals, 26 large community centers, 14 movie houses and four theatres.

"The total effect of the current five-year plan will be to make Siberia proper virtually as important to the Soviet economy as was the entire area east of the Volga at the outbreak of the recent war," The Review said. However, the area will continue to depend on European Russia for much of its consumer goods.

The Review defined Siberia proper as the undeveloped region east of the Volga and the Caspian Sea, north of the five republics of Central Asia, and west of Lake Baikal, excluding the Urals.

The publication said it would be wrong to assume that the preponderance of Soviet industry will shortly be deep in Siberia. Instead, it likened developments there to the recent trend in the United States, where some 3,000,000 persons have moved to the Far West since the beginning of the war boom, and where whole new

Hardwicke, Top Rank Actor Doubts Shakespeare's Work

By LAWRENCE PERRY

NEW YORK (NANA). — Sir Cedric Hardwicke, one of England's leading actors, arrived here from London in a mood of near disillusionment concerning the stage and the world generally. It even embraces Shakespeare. He, a gifted Shakespearean actor, has come to believe that the bard did not write half—if that—of the 34 dramatic works attributed to him.

"At least," Sir Cedric said, "I am strongly inclined to accept the informed opinion of most current Shakespearean scholars. How, by any possibility, could Shakespeare have done the work he was supposed to have done? He came to London, with but little education at the age of 21 and died in about his 52nd year. Research for the basic and detailed material of those plays would have required a full lifetime—and a sound and ramified higher education. You see, as a manager of theatres, as director of the Globe and other houses, Shakespeare received many plays from actors and writers—Lord Oxford, for one. As you may know, it was regarded as a disgrace to have one's name associated with the drama in that era. So Shakespeare whipped them into shape and produced them or had them acted under his name."

SWITCH TO OYSTERS

Having done with the bard, Sir Cedric speared an oyster—at a table at 21—and frowned down upon it.

"I would not like to create an international incident," Sir Cedric remarked, "by reminding you that our English oysters are better than yours. But such is the fact. However," he hastened to say, "you give me more butter here and many other good things denied us in England.

"American manners? As in England there are no manners any more, no more grace of living. So many things have vanished, so many changes, I am glad I am running on my last stretch."

Speaking of England, how are things there? The question did not lighten Sir Cedric's mood. He pursed his mobile lips and frowned again.

"Perhaps," he said, "I can give you the inferential opinion of my friend, Sir Seymour Hicks, who remarked to me just before I sailed that he views our Labor Government with gratitude and affection because it had robbed death of all its terrors so far as he personally was concerned.

"Sir Seymour will continue to stay grateful inasmuch as the present Government is not going to be displaced. The masses are getting free medicine, better pay than they have ever received—and they have the vote. They are on top and will stay there for quite a time."

HAS NO PLANS

What are the British actor's present projects?

"Like other actors," Sir Cedric smiled, "I say I have no present plans—meaning I am out of work, you know. I have come to the time and age when I am able to view my career objectively. No longer shall I act merely for the sake of acting. I refer to the stage. Of course," he went on, "if I am offered a play of which I could say 'Here is something very fine, something well worth while,' I would do it. But not otherwise.

"Take a play, the popular play, that will run a year, or two years. One year, two years mouthing the same role, marking less money in all that time than I can make in a month or two months of screen play! No thank you."

It was in line with this new policy of his that Sir Cedric recently did "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court"—for Paramount—in which he is one of the funniest kings ever seen on film or stage. When he returns home—he doesn't know just when this will be—he may do an English film. It is all rather vague and he doesn't much care whether the prospective picture is made or not.

"What's the use of earning money when you have to give most of it back?" Sir Cedric asks.

Thus, you have the picture of a knight in a forlorn mood.

Volcanoes Termed Heartbeats, Valves to Let Off Pressures

HONOLULU (UP). — A volcano is nothing but an important valve to the core of the globe, says Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, who is giving a series of lectures on the cause and effects of Hawaiian volcanoes.

Referring to his profession as taking "heartbeats of the earth," Jaggar said the underlying rock of all Europe and America is made of lava, and some of it on the actual surface is a type of lava from old volcanoes.

It is crystallized from molten matter, and that matter is originally glass, so that a volcano might be termed a glass factory of sorts.

"It is full of gas and the gases fizz through it like soda water, so that an eruption is really a foaming up," he explained.

Collapse of a crater may happen about every 35 years, Jaggar said, leaving a circular ridge where before there was a rounded hill. That is what happened to Vesuvius in Italy. At the end of the period the hole fills up and overflows, preparing the way for the next collapse.

"In Mauna Loa the breakdown is liable to happen every 11 years, and a bigger breakdown every 33 years. Probably," Jaggar guessed, "the mountain swells and bursts somewhere down its slope or under the sea, and lets the lava out.

"If it happens under the sea nobody sees it, if it happens on land we get a lava flow. These heartbeats 11 or 33 years apart are real accumulations and pressures like the pulsations of an engine."

The vast amount of water pressing down and under the Hawaiian Islands is pressing outward toward the ocean, where it is restrained by the heavier sea waters, he explained. If the lava lowers suddenly in a crack and pours down the mountain slope under the sea, a thousand springs rush into the crack and start making steam.

"Then we get an explosive eruption. This happened at Kilauea in 1924. The volcano suddenly changed its peaceful habits and became a gigantic geyser of upgushing steam, throwing out the fragments of rock accumulated in the bottom."

Ambulance Bell Sent Him Round World

WOULD you like to see the world? It's easy! All you have to do is to put a toothbrush in your pocket—and go.

That, at least, is the advice of Edward Lewis, who has learned to roam the world free of charge by hard experience.

After the war, Lewis grew tired of sitting at his desk in an office overlooking the Liverpool docks. Then one day he heard an ambulance bell. An ambulance was rushing through the dock gates. Hurrying out to make inquiries, Lewis learned that a member of the crew of a ship that was just leaving had been seriously ill. Lewis offered to take his place, and, rather than leave shorthanded, the skipper consented.

SEES NEW YORK

Seven days later he saw New York. He was given his wages and the necessary papers for shore leave, but, instead of returning, Lewis bought a toothbrush to replace the one he had left behind and spent his shipboard wages on a good time on Broadway.

When he was down to his last few cents he sat down in a cafe to think it out. The man in the next seat asked whether he knew anybody who could act as a truck guard.

"Yes, me," said Lewis. "What is it?"

All he had to do apparently was get aboard a truck and take care of the load, making sure nobody had a free ride behind. He was supposed to go to Toronto and back, five dollars and expenses being allowed for the journey.

Lewis jumped at the chance. He had a free ride by keeping off other people who wanted free rides and disappeared before the return run. Lewis says that he slept in all of Toronto's churches in turn until a parson questioned him and impressed by his religiousness in coming into the church on a weekday, gained him a post with a printing concern.

Lewis worked for two months. Then he had some postcards printed of himself, with the information beneath the picture that we was walking round the world.

ACROSS CANADA

And off he started on his travels once more, thumbing free rides across Canada. Once an insurance salesman gave him a lift and tried for over 200 miles to sell him an insurance policy. Vainly Lewis pleaded that he hadn't a penny. The man continued to argue. Eventually Lewis began to feel that the only thing to do was to get to work and make some money in order to take out a policy.

"That's all right," said the salesman as they reached their destination. "I was only rehearsing my sales talk on you!"

Another time he was picked up by a drunk who drove so badly that they went off the road seven times, and so fast that they covered 150 miles in just over two hours!

Reaching Vancouver, Lewis made a little money by selling his postcards and eventually took a steerage ticket across to China. He saw Singapore and Peking and then worked his passage to Calcutta. No one there seemed impressed by him or his story, but he noticed that most Indians were interested in the fakirs who stood at the street corners displaying their miracles.

So he prepared a card saying he was walking backwards across India. Backwards he went, carrying a bowl for alms, and the bowl was never empty. Long before he reached Delhi Lewis had put by enough money to travel respectably by train.

The Indian newspapers became aware of his exploits, and, like other travelers, Lewis found there was money to be made from writing.

At length, after leaving Britain with nothing and leaving none too comfortably, he returned as a passenger in a luxury liner with $200 in his pocket.

The Budding Moon

By MURIEL CORDEAUX

The second moon of the Chinese calendar is called the Budding Moon; it is not one of the major festivals but nevertheless it is quite interesting from many standpoints, one of the chief of which is that it is during this month that the great Sun Altars are set up in China, altars which have been used at this festival for thousands of years.

They consist of three mighty slabs of rough granite, two upright stones with a flat cross beam making the altar table. On the Sun Altar is a small mound to suggest to the people that the fecundity of the earth is rising, that the Sun is gaining strength after his long Winter sleep, that sap is rising in the trees, but above all, that it is time to "open the earth" or start ploughing.

Generally the grandfather of the family ploughs the first furrow, to be followed in turn by his sons and grandsons who continue until the whole farm is ready for seeding.

• • • • •

The first ceremony of the festival is that of the Rite of Water. This is especially interesting for it is the only ceremony of any kind in China in which women are allowed to approach the altar or to take any part in the rituals. This because of a very ancient superstition, namely, that after death women will be held accountable for every drop of water wasted during their life upon earth, and so the women of the household gather at the Sun Altars to petition the Creator of the Universe to have mercy upon them and to overlook the running feet of children who so often upset vessels containing the precious water.

The Sun Altars are always erected in the open fields or courtyards and upon them are the usual red candles, incense and at this particular festival the flat round Sun Cakes.

Very often the head man of the village or the rich landowner, in order to garnish, will have the ancient "Hymn to the Sun" printed upon slips of yellow paper and distributed free among the villagers to be burned at the altar. Prayers are chanted to all the Earth gods and goddesses, to the spirits of air, fire and water, and to ward off the "Five Sneers" or the five noxious insects and the five destructive animals.

• • • • •

In Chekiang, Frog worship is still carefully observed at the great Frog Temple, but generally elsewhere in China this is dying out. In Chinese symbolism the frog stands for riches and prosperity (particularly the prosperity gained from the fruits of the earth).

One of the principle interests during this Budding Moon festival is that it is the birthday of one of the Kings of Hell. According to the Taoist belief there are only ten hells, but the Buddhists have 128: Hot Hells, eight Cold Hells, several Dark Hells, along with miscellaneous other hells numbering in all about 182.

The entrance to the first hell or waiting room where each person is judged is known by the misleading name of the "Land of the Yellow Fountain," and its entrance is supposed to be concealed somewhere in the forbidding, jagged cliffs in the Province of Scheuzian.

The second hell is a cold one and is the abiding place of thieves, murderers and other unpleasant persons of like character.

The third is called the Hell of Black Ropes and is specially for unfilial sons, disloyal public servants, rebels, etc.

The fourth hell is named the Lake of Blood, and is a place of torture for those who have failed to pay their debts, and in other ways unfairly cheated their fellows.

• • • • •

Happily there is promised release after a sufficient time of punishment, and then follows the long road back again to earth and reincarnation.

At the end of this road is a great tower called the Tower of Forgetfulness where sits a most ancient mythical figure, Madame Meng. To the souls weary from their long imprisonment and the long walk up the path to rebirth, Madame Meng gives a drink of wine which causes them to forget their previous lives upon earth together with the pains of hell.

This figure of Madame Meng is so old that its origin is very much disputed by historians, but many believe that she is the spirit of the notorious concubine named Jade Bracelet of the Illustrious Emperor. It was this woman who caused the downfall of a dynasty and brought terrible suffering upon the Chinese nation.

• • • • •

As all things in China have their opposites, so has the terrible doctrine of Hell, in the person of Kuan Yin, Goddess of Mercy, for it is during the Budding Moon that her birthday is celebrated.

This goddess is the most beloved of all the Chinese hierarchy; she is the goddess of a Thousand Arms—arms to bless, heal, succor and comfort not only all China but all suffering humanity.

She is generally depicted standing upon the Sacred Lotus blossom, crowned with a pod of this same flower, upon one arm she holds the Urn of Immortality and in the other a plume of the willow tree, a most powerful Rain Charm. And what could be more desired in this land of sun-scorched wastes than abundant rain, and after the unremitting toil of the average Chinese life is over, rest and the promise of immortality?

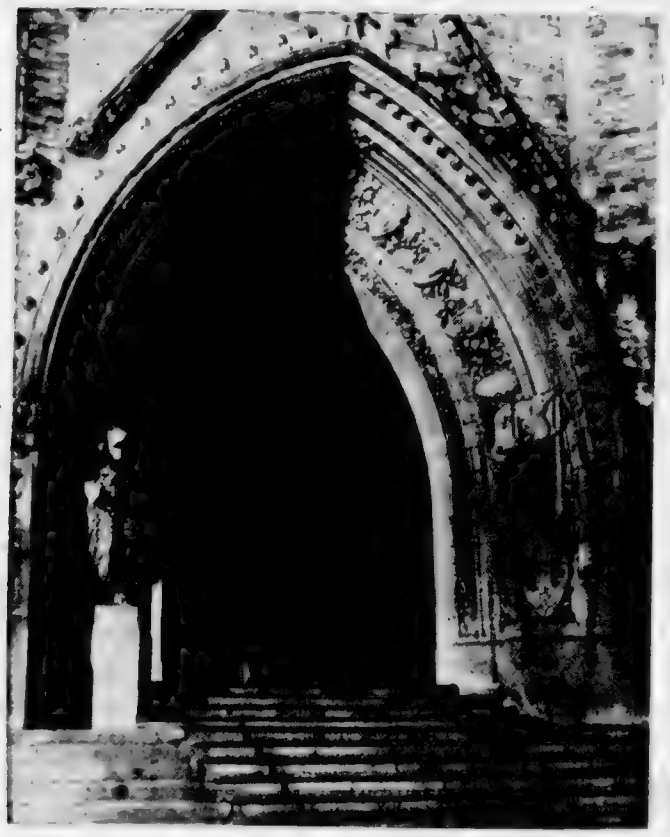

• • • • •

Kuan Yin is also one of the best beloved of the numerous Marine goddesses and gods, and in nearly every junk one can find a tiny image of her in a little shrine, whilst before her generally stands a living plant of some description.

The junk population of China is something that is almost unbelievable to anyone who has not lived in the country. Around Hongkong there are more than 70,000 junks upon which live whole families. These people never come ashore except to be buried, their whole lives from birth to the grave are spent aboard their family junks, together with various hens, generally a cat as a guardian against evil spirits, and often a motheaten dog.

Add One Province and Make Ten

By JOHN HUGHES

Gothic Arch at base of Peace Tower showing blank shield at extreme right. British Columbia's Coat of Arms is at left, or west side of arch. Other provinces represented in proper west to east order. Tenth blank shield was farsightedly provided and prophetically placed to the east of other provinces, all ready for Newfoundland's union with Canada.

CANADA'S nine provinces are officially represented by stone carvings of their respective coat of arms over the Gothic arch at the base of the Peace Tower of the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa. On March 31 there will be a tenth province, Newfoundland. It, too, has a coat of arms How will they fit it in?

Cleo Soucy, director of stone carving in the Parliament Buildings, thought of that just 12 years ago and designed the decoration with a wise provision, just in case. He made an extra shield and left it blank

Only nine of the ten shields carved into the Wallace sandstone bear designs representing provincees, and the one blank has gone unnoticed by hundreds of thousands of visitors to Parliament Hill. When one, more discerning than others, does notice it these days, the usual reaction is an exclamation of admiration for such happy foresight, and Mr. Soucy should take a bow.

"Oh, I suggested that we do an extra one," Mr. Soucy will tell you, "and Allan Keefer, the superintending architect, approved. We thought it might come in handy sometime."

DESIGN INTERNATIONAL

But Mr. Soucy won't be pinned down to a definite statement of the thought that must have run through his mind at that time. He did think it possible, he says, that the Northwest Territories might become the tenth province. That being so, "he builded better than he knew," for the blank shield is so placed in the design that it is to the east of the others, as if awaiting the entry into confederation of Newfoundland as Canada's tenth and most eastern province.

The coat of arms occur in the design, from west to east, in the same order that the provinces do geographically. British Columbia's carving is at the west side of the arch, Alberta's next to it, and the others in their proper order extending [illegible].

Mr Soucy does admit, and with a satisfied smile, that his arrangement of the designs would not have been such a comfortable one had the Northwest Territories indeed become the tenth province.

The carvings were designed and executed in 1937, and Mr Soucy will laugh if you suggest that there might be a numerology in the unit comprising the coat of arms of Ontario and Quebec—wedded.

Cleo Soucy, director of stone carving in the Parliament Buildings, is shown at work on a Gothic leaf design for corridor in House of Commons. All designs are first worked in modelling clay. That model then is used as pattern by expert stone carvers, three of whom are presently working under Mr. Soucy's direction.

Newfoundland's Coat of Arms. Mr. Soucy hasn't begun design for blank shield yet But after he has been given order by Minister of Public Works, four days only will be required for him to do carving on the blank shield he provided 12 years ago.

It was all for symmetry and artistic order and just worked out that way.

AWAITING ORDERS

Mr Soucy hasn't begun a design of Newfoundland's coat of arms. He won't until he has been given the order by the Minister of Public Works But he's a fast worker, and will have the design carved into the stone within four days after he is told to go ahead

Then there will be ten carved shields and the decoration of the arch will have been completed. With that completion a foregone conclusion, if you speak with Mr Soucy about the matter these days, he'll knead his modeling clay and with a twinkle in his eye will tell you that he's still a bit concerned about the Northwest Territories

When Youth Takes Over

By C. RAISBECK

EIGHT bells, eight o'clock. For a melodious minute or so the tinkle of ships' bells disturbed with imperfect unanimity the Sunday morning quiet of Iquique Harbor. From gaff and truck roiled flags were "broken out" to flutter dejectedly in the fitful breeze From the mizzen truck of the ship Candida the Bethel flag invited the season in port to attend divine service. A short mile away, and footing arid brown hills rich in saltpetre, the little Peruvian town straggled down to the waterfront. Over its seaward edge the sky was flecked by steam from the two big freshwater condensers, for Iquique has no rainfall, and in those now distant days its drinking water was condensed from the sea or brought in by coasting steamers

The quarterdeck of the Candida was festooned with flags. A spare ensign draped the capstan that was to serve as pulpit. The sailmaker's ensign draped the bench and an arrangement of deal planks provided seating accommodation. The cabin harmonium furnished the finishing touch. At 9 30 the familiar figure of the "sky pilot" was seen approaching in a shore boat. At his side was the unfamiliar figure of a young woman. The boat pulled round the stern of the Candida and hooked on to the gangway ladder. The young woman stepped lightly up the ladder, followed by her military escort, a grizzled elderly man crowned with a solar topee.

On deck 'Mr. West, the "sky pilot," and his daughter, were welcomed by Captain Jack. They accepted his invitation to lunch after service, and he returned ashore later to the Candida's gig. In the meantime, ships' boats were arriving. When four bells announced 10 o'clock and commencement of the service, an unusually large congregation, rigged in its shore-going best crowded the quarterdeck. Mr. West understood sailors, and knew that they suspected—not without reason—any display of interest in their welfare He had to combat the latent hostility that had momentarily yielded to the impulse of men cooped up on shipboard to accept anything in the nature of variety

Miss West, slim, fair, and distinctly good looking, was an invaluable ally Her touch on the harmonium was very different from that of Captain Jack, who, good man played only for his own amusement on an instrument not built for the kind of music he most liked. And when, with perfect self-possession, and a pleasing voice of no great volume, Miss West led the singing the response was immediate and hearty

Mr. West contented himself and his hearers with a short and direct address that had probably been more carefully prepared than might be assumed from the ease of its delivery. More singing, the benediction, and the simple service was over. After lunch the Candida's gig, in charge of the second mate, conveyed Mr and Miss West ashore.

* * * * *

Evening came, and between ship and shore the full moon spread a silver trail over the still water. On the poop of the Candida Mr. Bates, the mate, and Mr. Barnes, the second mate, smoked and yarned before going below for the night. They were both young men, but Barnes was some years older than his senior officer. Reliable afloat, when ashore his predilection for strong liquor had retarded his professional advancement without souring his naturally serene disposition He still looked ahead to making up for the lost leeway of his careless youth

"If old West likes it," Bates commented, 'that's his affair, but he's no right to keep such a clinking fine girl as Miss West in a dreary hole like this."

"Her interests are safer in his hands than they'd be in yours or mine," Barnes sagely replied, "though either of us might be glad to take the responsibility."

"You've said it for me," Bates agreed cordially, "and you didn't need to say it for yourself But to her—we just don't exist."

"'Out of the mouth of babes'," Barnes quoted, and led the way below.

* * * * *

In their little adobe house overlooking the bay, Mr. West and his motherless daughter discussed the day's events

"For a dozen years I've sky-piloted up and down this coast and never drawn such a crowd as we had today on the Candida But you were the attraction not me."

"What a nice boy the mate is," Miss West said irrelevantly What is his name?"

"Gates or Gates or something like that," her father replied absent-mindedly

"Would it be Bates?" Miss West suggested ingenuously But her father's thoughts were elsewhere

"Those nitrate shares I took when they could scarcely be given away, have done exceedingly well," he resumed. "You're returning to England soon, and we'll go together."

Mr. West had become aware of the social limitations of Iquique

* * * * *

The brief sequel is that a year later Mr. West's son-in-law, Captain Bates, newly given command of the Candida, and with Mr. Barnes as his chief officer, took his bride for a honeymoon sail around the world The expansive ideas of youth seek a spacious setting

Safety in Britain's Atomic Town

By DOUGLAS LIVERSIDGE

LONDON, England.—From time to time in Britain fearful whispers have been heard about the dangers of radio-active effluent from the Government atomic research station at Harwell in Berkshire reaching the great River Thames, artery of the Imperial capital. Widespread damage to public health and disastrous cumulative effects resulting from the Thames being turned into a radio-active stream were gloomily foreseen.

But Sir Jocelyn Bray, chairman of the ever-watchful Thames Conservatory Board, which controls the upper reaches of London's river has stilled these fears by his recent annual report.

"The effluent," he says, "is checked at discharge, and further checks are made by others including the conservators' analyst. We are advised that figures indicating the radio-activity of the effluent have been well within the safe limits, but we are continuing to watch this matter very closely."

FARM IN ACTION

As one who has visited Atom Town and seen the effluent farm in action, I can confidently write that nothing is left to chance. In short, neither Sir Jocelyn nor the public at large need have fears about it. And the entire system of the farm, which began to function last September, is duplicated.

The dispersal of radio-active effluent was originally one of Harwell's major problems. The solution was this special farm, and though at present incomplete it is perfectly capable of meeting current requirements, for the atomic system is itself unfinished.

Eventually a million gallons of Thames water will be used daily. The bulk of this will be to cool the giant atomic batteries and to satisfy the establishment's ordinary domestic needs. The remainder will be employed for research purposes, some involving radio-activity. In this particular instance a carefully controlled, separate system is being installed to deal with it. The most highly active portion will be separated and not returned to the Thames.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS

What, briefly, are the precautions insisted upon by the British Ministry of Supply to insure that the rest of the water is returned free from harmful radio-activity? After absorbing thousands of kilowatts of energy liberated by the uranium piles, the water flows into massive, concrete storage tanks until the heat and dangerous rays have been dissipated. The water is left to settle for some time before it is stirred up by powerful rotating arms, in order to dilute the radio-active particles.

The rotators, by keeping the water turbulent, prevent the radio-active effluent from becoming concentrated. Altogether there are three huge storage chambers, each of 300,000 gallons capacity, and by the time the effluent has reached the third tank radio-activity has been considerably reduced.

In an intricate system of checks scientists frequently test for dissolved uranium salts and other poisonous by-products of atomic fission. No salt can retain radio-activity permanently—not even the radio-isotopes manufactured in the atomic pile and used in various ways for medical and scientific research.

Survey officers, too, take a hand before the effluent, mixed with domestic waste water, finally passes a six-mile discharge pipe into the Thames at Sutton Courtenay. At this point the effluent meets a specially constructed weir which further mixes the Harwell water with greater quantities of river water.

CLOSE CONSULTATION

Nearby stands a small nearby laboratory, where the Ministry's scientists, along with Conservancy experts, take samples for tests. All these stringent measures were adopted after close consultation between experts of the Ministries of Supply and Health, the Metropolitan Water Board and the Thames Conservancy Board. But the guiding authority is the Medical Research Council's research committee on the medical biological applications of nuclear physics.

These scientists have ascertained that a degree of radio-activity in drinking water can be tolerated by human beings. The tolerance laid down by the Medical Research Council for Thames water is such that the medical and biological effects due to drinking the present water throughout one's life span would be negligible.

When Harwell is working at full capacity the million gallons a day will be pumped over a period of ten hours. Between 70 and 80 per cent of the water taken will be returned to the Thames. Every six month the Ministry of Supply pays the Conservators £126, if the water abstracted does not exceed an average daily quantity of 800,000 gallons, or £880 if it does not exceed that average.

Health protection generally is on a high level at Harwell. Varying types of monitor (devices for detecting the presence of gamma and beta rays) are found in all places where radio-activity is likely to be present.

A health physics group is responsible for the monitoring of scientists and their laboratories for radiation and radio-active dusts." All staff are given a medical examination on joining Harwell, and this is repeated periodically.

Fifty-Four Words Make Man Champion Liar

By OLIVER WALPOLE

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—People who tell the truth remember the last 12 months passed as a crowded series of interesting events: the way the pollsters went wrong over Truman, the fine sport of the Olympic Games, and, of course, a host of other things—national, international, or just personal.

But to champion liars the world over, and especially those in Canada, the year will remain long in the memory, a year to tell one's grandchildren about—the year that a Canadian living in Alberta pitted his wits against the champion tall story-tellers of America's 48 states and came away a high-riding winner.

For over a decade now the famous Burlington (Wisconsin) Liars' Club has held an annual contest to find out who could tell the tallest story.

PANEL OF BRAGGERS

An expert panel of braggers examines everyone minutely, decides which is the tallest lie of the lot and then flashes it to a waiting world.

This has been going on for 13 years, to be exact, and up to now it has been an inter-state affair with Texas usually in the lead. (Some unkind people say that Texans entering the competition ought to be handicapped because they have a head start to begin with, but that is neither here or there.)

But now the title has gone right out of the country across the 49th parallel to a L. W. Tupper, of Patricia, Alberta, and, to tell the truth, American liars are just a little sore.

This is the fragment of fiction that gave Mr. Tupper his new title and made him an international champion:

"In Alberta, we get some very bad windstorms. Last Summer a rancher dug [illegible] post hole. Then along came a northwestern wind and blew everyone of those post holes out of the country. The rancher found them 126 miles away, but they were so full of holes they wouldn't hold any dirt . . ."

AMONG THE STARS

Because tall stories have always been a specialty of mine, I have done some research into past championship stories and the men (and women, too!), who, since 1939, have carried off the Liars' championship.

This has not been very easy, as it appears that once having won a reputation as a liar the ex-champions have become a little soured and do not wish to talk.

But from the secret files of the Burkington Liars' Club, and with the help of one or two people, I have extracted some winners, and here they are 1936—The first national winner was a woman. She was a prepossessing brunette named Mrs. Gale Barnhouse, of Fowlerville, Michigan. Her story ran

"We had a mosquito so big it tried to eat our mule, but the mule kicked both hind legs and broke the mosquito's neck . . ."

1937—This time a man: a John F. Zelak, of Tacoma, Washington. He took first place with

"My wife's so lazy she feeds the chickens pop-corn so that the eggs will turn themselves over in the pan when she fries them . . ."

1938—The ingenious Gilbert Boettcher, of Milwaukee, said:

"We once ran out of coal on a fishing boat. The crew had caught a lot of dog-fish, so we made them bark and used the bark to keep the fire burning . . ."

1939—Frank F. Morton, of Toledo, brought in an allusion to the local industry of corn husking, which consists of hitting the tops off the heads of corn. He said:

"We put musical scales on the planks of the bang-board for the corn husking wagon and won the first prize in a band contest with chopsticks . . ."

1940—Again a farmer became national champion. (Are country people bigger liars than townsfolk?) Said Howard A Amberson, of Three Forks, Montana:

"We had a cowboy who put chili powder in his boots to keep his feet warm. He used too much. The heat popped his eyes . . ."

1941—In this year the championship went to Mr. R. C. Gross, of Wausau, Wisconsin:

"We went fishing once and our guide spilled a bottle of hair tonic in the river. The fish grew beards. We caught 'em by rigging up a barber's pole and yelling 'Next, please' . . ."

1942—U. U. Kemp came across the following:

"I'm such a good shot that I get my rifle and shoot squirrels out of trees during the cyclone season when they blow past my house . . ."

1943—This year the army won. Sgt Baron S. Ponnesbeck, of Tooele, Utah, said

"The mosquitoes in Maryland got so much of my blood that when I moved here they all got together and sent me a greeting card on Father's Day . . ."

1944—The armed forces again—. It was a woman. Captain Hope Harrin, of New York City, said

"A friend of mine got herself dehydrated and sent to me by airmail. I poured water on her and in an hour she was on her feet and talking . . ."

1945—A vintage year. Said M. E. Linneham, of Louisville, Kentucky

"I once stopped the Ohio River flood at its peak by getting a local option election called. We voted the town dry . . ."

1946—A. Atanacio Garza, of San Antonio, Texas, told this one

"I do a lot of fishing. Well, one day I hooked a fish and it tried so hard to get away it perspired and lost two pounds. . ."

1947—John C. Hopley, a Texan, told this one:

"I was once playing billiards and a fly landed on top of a ball. My friend knocked the ball out from under it so fast the fly fell and broke its neck. . ."

The Lighter Side

By JEAN DE NORTHOUHOUT

SICK

An Anglo-Indian colonel felt sick. The doctor told him he had hydropsy. What was that? Too much water in the body, the doctor explained. The whisky-drinking Briton was indignant. "But I've never drunk a drop of water in all my life, doctor!" he paused. Then, sadly, he concluded: "Must have been the ice."

(Constellation, Paris)

COURAGE

A Dr. Heer, of Herndorf, in Germany, is reported to have carried out a successful intestinal operation—on himself. He had only a nurse to assist him in the surgery. Next day he was able to get up and look after his patients. This operation on the caecum or blind gut certainly took courage.

COLLECTION

An Aberdeen pastor by the name of Gibson reports that for some months now he has not found a single button in the plate passed at church Sundays. The explanation seems quite simple: The canny Scottish parishioners realize that in these days of shortages, buttons cost more than a small cash contribution. The smallest British coin, a farthing, or one-quarter of a penny, is worth about half a cent.

Young Fashions Are Modified For Look of Sophistication

By ANNE YATES CLARKE

WHILE it is true that teen-agers and juniors start many good fashions, it also is true that they often "run them into the ground," in the words of their elders. It was the younger crowd that took long skirts to its collective heart and wore them flapping around the ankles. It is the young who sweep through a room in dresses so full that they take up the space of an extra person. It is the young who nip in their waistlines until they are spanned by the hands, who go all the way to ballet slippers when they want low heels and who wear spikes when heels should be high.

The girl who takes junior sizes but who is in her late college years or who has taken a job or a husband and home, prefers clothes with more sophistication. While she still looks for things that are youthful and attractive, she wants to look dignified and smart at the same time. Her formula is to avoid the extremes. There is plenty of fashion and good looks, too, in clothes of good cut that do not swirl with extra yards of fabric, that have the popular narrow shoulders but are modified with a bit of padding, that give her the fashionable slim waist without the aid of a waistline minimizer or girdle that is uncomfortably tight.

All the good fashions belong to such a young woman, for with her slim figure she can wear almost anything, and with her clear, young complexion nearly every color will be becoming. The trick is to select the clothes that have been tempered with wisdom, that have had the extremes and the frills removed. Fortunately there are a few designers of junior costumes who cater to this type of young woman exclusively, so that she can find the clothes that she likes, usually at prices she wants to pay.

The young girl who does not want teen-age clothes but still wears junior sizes can find smart, sophisticated suits and dresses for Easter and Spring that are made especially for her. Typical is this bolero suit, of pure wool with its own collarless white pique blouse. The cuffed sleeves and pockets on the hips are important fashion points, and there are gold buttons on the blouse and at the skirt fastening. The skirt has the modified fullness that is newer than the very wide skirt.

The new theme of coarse lace on linen-like fabrics is used in this dress for late afternoon and informal evening. Its clean, simple lines flow into the bertha-like collar of Venice-type lace which falls off the shoulders for a decollete neckline, front and back. In lovely pastels, it is of spun rayon.

New York designers show hats for Spring in two moods, simple hats for day wear and "romantics" for dress-up occasions. From the latter group is this lovely ripple bonnet of cowslip yellow Shantung with a brimful of yellow cowslips and red rambler roses. The big bow is of emerald green satin.

The dressmaker type of Spring suit may be bought and worn now under a coat, may serve for Easter, and be worn later without a coat. On the left you see two tones of one color, important for Spring, combining light grey double-breasted boy jacket with a straight skirt of dark grey wool. The dark grey is carried out on the revers of the jacket and a band which encircles the hipline for a cuffed effect. On the right is a two-piece ensemble, combining black sheer wool with a pure silk print in a big design of grey leaves edged in black on white background. The one-piece dress with square neckline and sleeves full below the elbow is topped by a short black wool jacket lined with the print, which is carried over to the collar and turned-back cuffs on the sleeves.

Lace Plays Important Role In Spring, Summer Dresses

LACE almost disappeared from the fashion picture during the war—lace looms were busy making mosquito netting and other essentials for the armed forces, and almost no laces were imported. Women were apparently starved for their feminine beauty and allure, for as soon as laces were again available they became fashionably important in every type of costume from the most expensive to budget-priced clothes.

In addition to the all-lace dress, there are many that use lace as trimming. It is done in such new and attractive ways that it adds almost endless variety to Spring and Summer dresses. Narrow laces are used as ruffling or inserts, wide laces are used as overskirts, apron effects, bodices and bandings.

One of the prettiest fashions climbed into a high place on the fashion scale during the resort season, and it promises to be even more popular next Summer. It is the use of heavier types of lace as yoke, banding, cut-outs or inserts on dresses of linen or linen-like spun rayons. In white or pastels, they combine smartness and femininity in a way that looks very new. The lace is sometimes dyed to match pastel dresses.

Linen dresses with lace used as a bolero or bodice are beautiful for Summer afternoons and the cocktail hour. Some designers even go so far as to applique the same coarse lace onto the brim of a hat, to go with the dress. Natural straw frequently matches the lace in color so that it will be easy to work out a stunning ensemble for late Spring and Summer, a costume that will be right for informal weddings, for luncheons and for afternoon parties.

Tomorrow You'll Wear—

—the white pique hat in flattering small shapes. There is the cloche with broken lines for the crown-peaked shapes, and the small hat with easy-to-wear cuff brim that sweeps low to one side.

• • • • • •

—pockets high on your shoulders. A few are even stitched into the sleeve seams. They are in various sizes and some are button trimmed.

• • • • • •

—the topper with stiff crinoline lining to make the most of its flaring silhouette. It is in a warm yellow-toned wool and trimmed with a row of three pocket flaps down each side in front.

• • • • • •

—crisp white organdie touches at the neckline of a Spring dress or suit. They range in size from narrow bands to huge bows that pose prettily under the chin.

• • • • • •

—the daytime dress with a soft drape between the shoulders at back. Just above this draping is a button closing. The front of the dress is buttoned, too, so that the dress has a two-way look.

• • • • • •

—the brief boxy jacket with matching cummerbund, the cummerbund notched at front and buttoned just like a vest. They are in wool and shantung.

The Fashion Beam

Raffia—This fiber from the raffia palm of Madagascar has long been a favorite with basket-makers and those who weave mats and hats. More and more raffia seems to be moving from the casual type of article that sightseerers bring home from faraway places to high fashion items. One of the smartest uses of this fiber is by the millinery designer, Emme, who uses it to embroider Spring hats. One of her smartest is a small cloche shape completely embroidered with raffia flowers that touch each other on the crown and brim. The flowers are in "candy" or multi colors, making it a perfect Spring and Summer hat to go with practically every costume.

Dressmaker Suits Useful For Most of Year Wearing

IF you need a wardrobe-freshener right away and would like to buy but one Spring costume, select a dressmaker suit that can be worn under a coat. It can serve for all your daytime social engagements now, it will be a beautiful Easter suit, and may be worn without a coat through the entire Spring.

While good clothes are made in many cities, manufacturers specialize in just such costumes. You'll find many of their labels in well-designed and expertly made clothes that are in the stores now. They have a slightly different flavor, they are sometimes priced slightly less for the amount of work and good fabric, and they are always in the first fashion ranks.

A useful suit this year is composed of dress and jacket, or of skirt, dress-up blouse and jacket. You can wear the jacket or not, according to the amount of formality you want, and a fur jacket or a loose cloth coat covers the costume when you're on the street.

This same suit can be worn for Easter, weather permitting, and it will be an excellent luncheon - through - the - day costume right into hot weather. It will even serve on cool days in Summer. Because it is a costume complete, planned to the last detail by the designer, it will have much more chic and fashion importance than a suit with odd blouse which you may assemble for yourself, unless you use exceptional care and have good luck in finding just the right things to go together.

Pope's Peace House to Open In Rome During Holy Year

VATICAN CITY (UP). — The "Pius XII House of Peace," a monumental project of Catholic Youth, will be opened in Rome during the 1950 Holy Year.

The project was conceived in 1944 when Catholic Youth groups vowed they would erect a peace centre if the pontiff were spared from injury in the World War. This year the Youth opened their campaign for funds to construct the sprawling three-building project near the Vatican. They hope it will develop into an international Catholic Youth centre and free university.

Pius XII donated to the Catholic Action Youth organization a large field on Via Aurelia. The area is called "Torre Rosa" (Red Tower) and there Catholic Youth will erect a central 400-room building with 800 beds as a hotel for youths visiting Rome. A second building will contain a church and a 600-seat auditorium. A villa of lovely design, will hold the offices of the international secretariat of Catholic Action youth, as well as accommodations for foreign visitors.

A big park will surround the building and planners foresee a tenting ground to serve youth groups making pilgrimages to the Eternal City.

FUNDS FROM DONATIONS

All funds for the project will come from donations raised by Catholic Youth. In the first month of 1949, Italian youths already have raised $50,000 for the fund. Other contributions are expected to come from Catholics all over the world as news of the project spreads.

The main fund-raising source is the sale of little religious emblems, bearing the slogan "In Hoc Signo Vinces" (With This Sign You Will Conquer) which the youth organization hopes to see displayed on the front door of all Catholic homes. The metal emblems are being sold for 100 lire each and 300,000 were sold in Italy in the first month.

The Catholic Action youth organization expects to raise almost $500,000 in Italy alone and believes foreign contributions will more than cover the construction costs of the Peace House.

Orders for more emblems from local Italian committees have ranged from 100 to 30,000. They will be distributed abroad as soon as possible through the Catholic Action organization. The symbols on the emblem show a cross, the basilica of St. Peter's and Pope Pius as the signs of Catholicism's "struggle against the forces of evil."

To enable all Catholics to contribute in some way to the project fund, Catholic Action also is distributing smaller wooden emblems which are to be sold at lower prices. A third campaign is under way to solicit direct donations to endow beds in Peace House.

Sold Shoes; Became a Prophet

By PETER DAVIS

THEY are celebrating the 325th anniversary of Jacob Boehme's first book of prophecy. Visitors have flocked to his birthplace, the little town of Gorlitz, in Silesia, to attend conferences on the man who began life as a cobbler and ended with such fame that others were willing to die for their faith in him.

Perhaps Jacob, three centuries ago, foresaw the celebrations of 1949 for himself. His knowledge of the future, at least, was good enough to enable him to spend a lifetime of correct prophesying until, in the end, he foretold the hour of his own death—and a tribunal arraigned him for telling lies!

Jacob's parents were so poor that he had to spend his childhood working as a swineherd, but at the age of 12 he became apprenticed to a cobbler and fate clamped down with a vengeance. He was working in the shop one day in his master's absence when a clerical-looking man pushed open the door and took up a pair of shoes.

"How much are these?" he asked.

Jacob hadn't the slightest idea. His master hadn't expected any customers, for trade was in a bad way. Jacob's knees shook at the sudden avalanche of responsibility. He was afraid to quote a price out of his head, but the man, for all his pious bearing, insisted.

Timidly, Jacob named a sum he was sure would be on the right side.

"Done!" cried the stranger, and set down his money. Then, with the parcel under his arm, he paused in the doorway. He turned, and an eerie light seemed to burn in his eyes. "Jacob, Jacob!" he called in a loud and earnest voice, "come forth!"

THE GIFT IS GIVEN

The lad was so impressed with the solemn tones that he crept around the counter. The stranger offered him the ability to see into the future, and Jacob accepted. The next instant the stranger whisked out of sight and he never saw him again.

That was Jacob's story and he stuck to it.

According to Jacob's writings, it was not long before the promised second sight came true. He awoke one morning to find a mysterious light all round him. It seemed to scour into all the recesses of the world, into the present and into the past.

For seven days Jacob went about his daily affairs like an automaton while his soul feasted on all the wondrous panorama before him.

He tried to trace the course of coming history, but so many strange figures of things to come passed before him that he could not tell the important ones from more ordinary men and women. He saw wars, because they were grand-scale movements, He saw cities changing, life moving at such high speed that he lived years in an hour.

Then he emerged from his trance to find his master swearing at him.

"You should be ashamed of yourself!" said Jacob.

PREDICTIONS TRUE

Before long, he started as a cobbler on his own. Then he married, and had four children, as he had prophesied. He foretold a war, a peace, and a plague and all three happened on schedule. Nearly ten years passed before the celestial light again appeared. This time he was sensible enough not to bother with events too far ahead. He studied the lives of the people around him, the life in the fields.

After that he was able to choose herbs with the power of healing. The curious paid him eagerly for his advice, for he knew all too surely what would happen to them. He published book after book, making one prophecy after another. Almost all were fulfilled, and then he went a stage further and declared he would die on November 18 in the following year.

This seemed the last straw. The rage of the town's doctors, clerics and professors grew so frantic that Jacob was arrested and put on trial as a charlatan. The case took place before the Elector of Saxony, and the Elector was so struck by Jacob's demeanor that he took him on one side and put questions regarding his own future.

REMARKABLE TESTS

The doctors collected plants and placed them before Jacob, who promptly revealed their properties. The professors tried him with Greek and Oriental words and Jacob was able to tell their meaning, though he had received no education.

He passed the cross-examination with flying colors and the jury could not decide whether he was guilty of lies in foretelling his own death, or innocent.

They decided to wait and see.

Jacob retired into the country and prepared himself. At three o'clock in the afternoon of November 18 he declared he would die at six. His wife and children took leave of him and waited anxiously. The church clock began to chime six . . .

"I go home into Paradise!" Jacob cried, and fell back dead.

Strap Revived in Toronto to Curb Youth

TORONTO, Ont. (UP).—Strapping of prisoners, a form of punishment abolished or dying out in most countries, has been revived here. The intention is to combat a serious outbreak of gang violence.

In one day, seven youths were sentenced to prison terms ranging from two to five years plus ten strokes of the strap each.

The strap was called into use as a last resort after teen-age gang battles, indecent assaults and robbery became almost a daily occurence on the city's streets.

Since the war, youths in poorer sections of the city had been forming into gangs known by such names as the Beanery Boys, the Tips Gang, the Junction Boys and the Bloor Avenue Boys.

These gangs, whose members wear some distinguishing article of dress, had developed a language of their own that accurately reflects their habits and behavior. If a gang member runs from a fight with a rival group he is a "chicken." If he "squeals" on a friend he is a "fink."

PUBLICLY WELCOMED

Any escapade that involves breaking the law is a "caper."

Newspapers have given prominent display to the activities of the gangs, and this notoriety was welcomed by the youthful hoodlums.

Social workers and psychologists agree on the fundamental reasons behind the formation of the gangs. They placed the blame on the breakdown of normal family life during the war and the restlessness of the postwar era.

The social workers and psychologists differ greatly, however, in their proposals for solving the problem.

The use of force has many supporters, while others interested in the city's favor more organized recreation for youths in poorer districts.

The Rev. Gordon Domm, pastor of a United Church of Canada parish in the city, has taken the lead in the drive for supervised recreation. He has allowed members of one gang to meet in his church hall. He encourages the gang to form baseball and hockey teams and to hold dances and other entertainments in the church hall.

Domm's word was welcomed by police and court officials, the same authorities who applauded the revival of strapping.

Police officers and judges, who meet juvenile delinquency daily, felt that both force and enlightened social work had their place in the solution of gang violence.

Increased opportunity to lead a useful life was vitally necessary, they said, but the strapping of serious offenders also would help in breaking up outlaw gangs.

Sealing Ships Ready to Sail For Spring Haul in East

By KNOWLTON ASH

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (UP).—Twenty or thirty sturdy Newfoundland sealing ships will sail soon out of the harbor, decorated with bunting and cheered by crowds on the dock, tooting whistles and brass bands.

It's a big event for St. John's when the sealing fleet leaves. The ships meet with several others from Nova Scotia off the southwestern tip of Newfoundland, and then they all head for the Strait of Belle Isle between Northern Quebec and Newfoundland. There great herds of seals are in their whelping season.

The seals fall into two categories: the hoods and the harps. Harp "pups" are the ones usually caught by sealers. The harps are child, frightened seals who come from the Hudson Bay area. They flee at the scent of man, leaving their young behind to their own fate.

HOODS ARE VICIOUS

But the rugged hoods are vicious and will fight to the death to protect their young. They live in rough, heavy ice, and come from the treacherous shores of Greenland.

The spotted green and white harps are about six feet long when fully grown. Their fiercer relatives, the hoods, are grey with brown spots and nine feet long when fully grown. There are as many as 100,000 seals in one pack.

The sealers pay particular attention to harp "pups" or "white coats." They're white as snow, with soft, unspotted fur, weighing about five pounds. They live a rather easy life in the strait, basking in the sun on the ice and gently fanning themselves with their flippers, while their parents are out fishing. The parents make a "blow hole" in the ice, and dive through it to go fishing.

PLANES SPOT HERDS

Early sealers in the strait made their catches with nets, but that practice was done away with in the early 19th century. Gaffs or heavy boat hooks are now used to club the "white coats."

The modern age has entered the sealing business with airplanes being sent out as spotters. The planes radio the location of seal herds to the fleet. Sealers leave their ships at dawn, taking along hard biscuit to munch through the day. They don't return until dusk. Sudden storms have caused many of them to lose their ships and freeze to death on the ice.

The Stamp Packet

By R. M. ANGUS

In 1833 Great Britain formally occupied the Falkland Islands, off the southerly end of South America. Both at and since that time, our ownership of these islands has been a bone of contention between Britain and the Argentine Republic. In 1933 a special set of stamps was issued in the Falkland Islands to commemorate the centenary of British rule. They are a very handsome set of stamps from ½d to £1, being 12 pictorials each depicting various features of the Islands, which are mostly concerned with raising sheep, whaling and fowling.

They were not, however, popular with the authorities in the Argentine, who seemed to think that Great Britain was rubbing it in to issue such a series and that the Argentine claim was dismissed. When, therefore, letters addressed to the Argentine inhabitants arrived there, the postal authorities refused to admit their validity as having paid the postage, and charged the addressees with double the postage payable, as if the letters had been posted without any stamps at all.

* * *

Three years later they went one better, as in 1936 the Argentine issued a set of postage stamps typical of production and industry. In one of this series is an outline map of South America with the Argentine Republic heavily shaded in chocolate color. The Falkland Islands are also shown on this map and are shaded in the identical color of the Republic itself. Protestations were launched about this philatelic attempt to establish control over a British Colony, but the authorities ignored it.

In 1946, to make assurance doubly sure, the Falklands issued four sets for use in the Falkland Islands Dependencies, Graham Land, South Georgia, South Orkney and South Shetlands, eventually consolidated into a permanent set from ½d to 1s simply titled "Falkland Islands Dependencies," and these are not an unnecessary set to raise revenue, as some might suppose, but a political set to establish Great Britain's ownership of the Islands. Some of these southerly islands are rocky and arctic and only occasionally visited by transient whalers, but have strategic advantages for naval or military bases.

In 1934 the United States issued a commemorative stamp to mark the tercentenary of what is now the state of Wisconsin. This shows the explorer, Jean Nicolet, landing on the shores of Green Bay, a part of Lake Michigan. In the foreground are a party of Indians awaiting the arrival of Nicolet and his followers, who are seen approaching. But the odd thing about it is that Nicolet, who is leading his men, is dressed up in the full attire of a Chinese mandarin! There is nothing on the stamp to explain this strange costume, but the explanation is simple. Nicolet was a Frenchman, one of Champlain's lieutenants in New France, as Canada was then called. The sphere of French domination only extended to a few settlements on the shores of the St. Lawrence, and Champlain was anxious to find out what lay farther to the westward. He, therefore, sent Nicolet on an expedition of exploration. The dream of explorers then, and for many years after, was to find the Northwest passage, the alternative route to the Indies and China. Nicolet thought that by voyaging up the St. Lawrence and crossing the Great Lakes he would eventually arrive in China and prepared to meet the situation suitably dressed. Accordingly he dressed himself in a mandarin costume to fit the occasion and got quite a shock when he only found a few Red Indians. What the Red men thought of his outfit is not recorded.

Another geographical curiosity occured during the Paraguayan-Bolivian war over the possession of the tract of land known as the Chaco. Both Bolivia and Paraguay issued stamps showing maps of their respective countries and each showing the Chaco as their own. The Paraguayans marked this territory "Chaco Paraguayo" and at the bottom of the stamp they inserted the words which, when translated, mean "Has been, is and will be." At the same time Bolivia's map showed the territory inscribed "Chaco Boliviano." Paraguay issued these stamps in 1932 to 1935, when Bolivia retorted with their issue.

* * *

United States: Up to the end of 1930 the United States had issued no fewer than 980 different stamps since they were first used in 1847, many of them extremely handsome commemoratives, others from dire postal necessity. This does not count airmails, special delivery, departmentals, and others required to fill especial uses only and not all for general ordinary postage. Last year 30 commemoratives were issued and the current year bids to even outdo this number. Already no fewer than 35 have been consented to by Congress and interested lobbyists are petitioning for at least 15 more besides, each celebrating the anniversary of some industry or invention such as the textile industry, the Angora goat, the cheese, honey, steel, silver and even the lowly milk bottle! A New York doctor has promulgated the idea of commemorating the issue of the 1000th stamp with a stamp to honor the stamp itself as being numerically the one thousandth stamp to be issued. We wonder if the good doctor suggests this with his tongue in his cheek?

Aerosols Kill Pests

Exhaustive experiments with liquified gas aerosols containing various insecticides have shown highly promising results in the control of a large variety of greenhouse pests, reveals C-I-L Agriculture News. According to this source, DDT aerosols with residual action, were effective against thrips, aphids, young mealybugs, roaches, crickets, sowbugs, leafminers and the rose and chrysanthemum midges. Pyrethrin aerosols destroyed all insects killed by DDT and others such as the cutlamen mite and spiders.

Fertilizers Needed for Crops

By E. R. BEWELL M. S. A.

IN order to produce profitable crops of any produce, fruits, vegetables, potatoes, grains, etc., the soil must have the necessary plant foods in it, or they must be applied in the form of manure or fertilizers. It is an erroneous idea that all virgin soils or new land cleared from the forest will produce well. Bench lands are often so low in plant food that very poor crops are the result; while bottom lands, which are composed of peat and vegetation washed there, is so acid that it also produces very poorly.

Before we go into the proper use of suitable fertilisers it is necessary that we have an intelligent understanding of the needs of the growing plant and the general lack of those elements in the soil of this coastal area.

As all plant food has to be in solution before it can be absorbed by a plant, it is necessary to have growing plants ready to absorb plant food as it becomes available through breaking down of humus or releasing from the earth through chemical or bacterial action. When there are no plants to absorb available plant food it is lost through leaching by heavy rains. Soil tests from October to March show a very low reading of available plant food, while from April to August there is an increasing amount made available if there is plenty of humus or applied fertiliser in the soil. The soil must be kept moist in order to keep the food in solution so it can be absorbed by the plants.

NECESSARY PLANT FOODS

The three main plant foods are nitrogen, phosphates and potash. These are required in large amounts, varying with the type of plant. Leafy plants like lettuce, cabbage, etc., require plenty of nitrogen; while phosphates are required to get a good set of seed and to produce in the seed a source of food for the new plant until such time as it can get established and secure its food from the soil. Potash is required in building cell walls and to assist in the production of starch. Potatoes require large amounts of potash.

There are several minor elements that are required in small amounts, such as magnesium, manganese, boron, sulphur, iron, copper, zinc, etc. Lime or calcium, while not considered an important plant food, is just as important as any of the elements listed above. When a soil is low or seriously lacking in lime, it is classed as being acid. Most of our commonly grown plants do not do well in acid soil. If the soil is very acid the available plant food in fertilizers is made unavailable by the action of the soil, which locks it up until we apply enough fertiliser to supply the soil requirements. If the soil has a good supply of calcium or lime in it, this locking up does not take place and the potash and phosphates are available for plant growth. Nitrogen is very unstable and unless used as it becomes available is leached out by excessive moisture or evaporates and escapes back to the air, which is about 80 per cent nitrogen. Most of our legumes can absorb nitrogen from the air if the right bacteria are in the soil to assist in this process.

LIME TO ACID SOILS

Lime applied to acid soils will correct the acidity and make it more suitable for most plants. Peas, beans, celery, legumes, cabbage and potatoes, all require a good supply of calcium. Ground limestone, while slow acting, is best for the soil and will keep phosphates and potash available. Burned or slacked lime acts more quickly and releases nitrogen too rapidly. It also keeps the phosphates and potash too readily available, so that they are lost through leaching if heavy rains come.

Lime benefits most soils and is especially beneficial in clay soils. It keeps it friable and stops it setting like cement. It also makes it absorb and hold more moisture for the use of the plants. The Chalk Cliff soils of Southern England draw moisture from the air, forming dew ponds, which supply drinking water for sheep and cattle. There are no springs supplying these ponds.

A good supply of humus in the soil is beneficial in many ways. It supplies plant food, provides a home for beneficial bacteria and earthworms, helps to keep the soil friable and absorbs and holds moisture for the use of the growing plants.

Turkeys Under Confinement Eliminates Many Hazards

TURKEYS given free range usually wander far from home and meet many hazards such as rainstorms, coyotes, dogs, cars, and predatory birds and animals, to say nothing of the serious exposure to disease and worms around the chicken runs and farm buildings. They also cause inconvenience when roosting on machinery buildings, etc.

Many people would like to grow turkeys for their own use and for sale at Christmas if the numerous difficulties and heavy losses could be eliminated. A solution to practically all of these difficulties is to grow the poults to maturity on wire or slats and never allow them to touch the ground.

At the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., says E. Van Nice, turkeys have been successfully grown for 18 years under partial confinement (in yards), but in 1948 the change was made to total confinement to demonstrate this method so popular in British Columbia, Ontario and the United States.

ELIMINATES HAZARDS

Under partial confinement many hazards are eliminated, but the poults must be placed on fresh land each year and considerable fencing is required. The total confinement plan is less expensive and requires no fencing or moving from year to year. The turkeys are out of danger, always near shelter and never get in the way around buildings. Labor is reduced to a minimum as feeding and watering is done from the outside and the droppings fall to the ground below to be removed when convenient. At Scott, eggs or poults are obtained each year and no turkeys are carried through the Winter.

Either welded turkey wire or wooden slats from one to one and one-quarter inch apart and one inch thick may be used for the floor of the porch, but wire is best for the floor of the house. Lighter, inexpensive wire may be used for sides and top of porch. Low perches about six inches high are provided and outside shade for hot weather is easily made by fastening some scrap lumber or burlap to the top of the porch. It is important to allow about seven square feet of total floor space per bird.

BROODING, FEEDING

Brooding and feeding cannot be discussed fully here, but turkey poults can easily be brooded by the use of regular chick brooding equipment, and a coarse screen floor porch outside to gradually harden them to the outside condition before they go to the permanent quarters at 10 or 12 weeks of age.

As for feeding, the average small flock owner will do well to purchase ready mixed feeds for the different stages of growth than to try to mix at home. Under total confinement, feather picking may give trouble, but it is easily controlled by use of turkey bits made for the purpose.

Publications on growing turkeys on wire are not very plentiful, but information may be obtained from the poultry division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa; Dominion Experimental Stations at Scott or Swift Current, Sask., and the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Ont. If possible it would be well to visit a plant where turkeys have been grown under total confinement.

New Compost

Announcement has been made of a new method for making compost on an economical mass production basis. It is the joint work of Joseph Fraser, president of the Kaiser-Fraser Corporation, and biochemist, Eric Eweson.

By the Frazer-Eweson process, compost can be made from any organic waste material, such as garbage, sewage in the form of sludge, corn stalks, straw and waste from canneries and sugar plants and fisheries. The decomposition of these materials takes place in a 3,000 cubic foot fermentation plant, the "digester," and through the induction of biological stimulants and proper aeration and heat, the length of the process is reduced to five days. The new method will make possible, for the first time, the announcement says, the marketing of compost at a price comparable to chemical fertilisers.

Vancouver Island Produces Variety of Lucious Berries

THE blackberry industry on Vancouver Island is concerned chiefly with the culture of the logan and Himalaya berries. A large portion of the logan and Himalaya crop goes into wine-making, but at the same time a considerable amount is processed for household use. The boysen, young and evergreen are grown as well for garden purposes. The boysen, young and logan—commonly called boysenberry, youngberry and loganberry—are closely related to the native trailing blackberries of the Pacific Coast, while the evergreen and Himalaya varieties are of European origin and are semi-trailing. All varieties mentioned form new plants by rooting of the canes at the tips. The upright or erect blackberry propagates itself by means of suckers. Trailing blackberries usually have rather deep root systems and ripen earlier than erect varieties, and because of this suffer less from Summer drought.

USES FOR BERRIES

The loganberry has been used in the past in several ways, but at present most of the berries are used for juice and wine-making. In Oregon the boysen has replaced the logan to a great extent because it is more acceptable to the fresh fruit trade and for freezing. It is also excellent for jam-making and canning. Growers on Vancouver Island claim that boysen yields are below those of logan, though at the Experimental Station, Saanichton, says E. R. Hall, similar yields are being obtained. Fruits of the boysen are very large and excellent in flavor. Himalaya is widely grown; its fruit is soft, mild, of good quality and matures between boysen and evergreen. Cascade and Pacific are new introductions from Oregon and the same season as logan. Both berries are smaller than the logan, soft and not suitable for fresh market purposes, though the characteristic wild blackberry flavor is very good, and both berries freeze and can well. The young enjoyed considerable popularity until the boysen was introduced. Since that time it has steadily given place to the boysen.

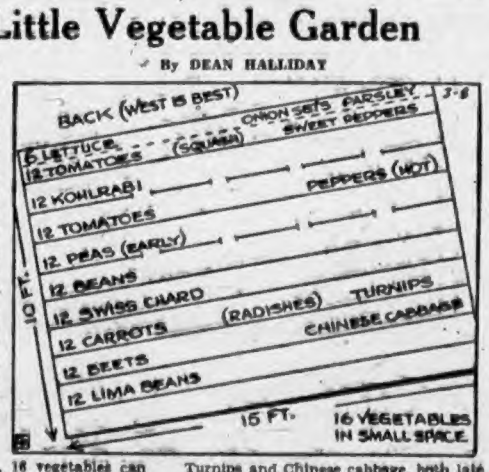

Thornless forms of boysen, evergreen, logan and young are well known and are being grown at the station. The perpetuation of these forms must always be by the rooting of the tips of the canes. Shoots from the roots always bear thorns. It is commonly reported that thornlessness is associated with low yields. This is not necessarily always true as instances occur where thornless forms have at least equaled the thorny in yields.

New blackberry originations are constantly appearing, and it can be confidently expected that some of the present varieties will be surpassed.

A "Big" Little Vegetable Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

THE first step in starting a vegetable garden — large or small—is to have a plan, arranging the vegetables so that no space will be wasted and that all the ground will be utilized all of the growing season. A small home garden properly planted and properly cared for is, in its own way, just as practical as a large one and will produce fewer backaches. A plan for a "big" little vegetable garden is shown in the accompanying gardengraph. On a "planned" basis, 16 vegetables can be grown in a 10 x 15 garden plot. Use the plan illustrated as a working chart.

In locating such a garden choose a spot receiving sunlight at least three-quarters of the day. Keep it away from large tree roots, which absorb large amounts of food and moisture from the soil. Vegetable seeds should be planted in rows running north and south to give the plants all the sunlight possible.

The plan suggested on the broken lines of the chart, lettuce, onions, kohlrabi and peas will be harvested by the time all the space is required for tomatoes. Swiss chard is suggested in place of spinach since it can be cropped all season. When cutting Swiss chard remove only the outer leaves, for by this method the young centre will continue to grow and develop.

Radishes can be sown thinly with the carrots. They come up quickly and when they are pulled for eating it will break the surface of the soil for the slow growing carrot seedlings. Try the new radish from Holland, Cherry Belle. It produces small cherry-like globes, crisp and delicious.

Turnips and Chinese cabbage, both late crops, can follow early carrots and beets. This should keep the area producing all season.

Remember, to grow more on less space, start with a "paper plan."

Rake off protective straw or litter from borders containing spring-flowering bulbs and perennial plants, after all danger of hard freezing is past.

An Early Start for Sweet Peas

SWEET peas are almost a must in most flower gardens throughout Canada. Except in those few areas where hot Summer nights come early, there should be little difficulty in making a good showing. The secret is an early start, and preferably in a prepared bed. These plants, as well as the vegetable variety, make their first growth when soil and air are fairly cool, therefore, planting just as soon as the soil is fit to work is advisable.

It is best to dig a trench about a foot or so deep. In the bottom put a six-inch layer of well-rotted leaves and manure. On top of this should be a couple of inches of good rich loam. In this the seed is planted about two inches apart and half an inch deep. Gradually as the plants develop the trench fills in, thus encouraging a deep root growth. Recently very much improved varieties have been available in Canada, as well as new colors. When the plants are up three or four inches some support for climbing should be provided. This may be brush or strings, or a combination of the two. Wire is not advisable as it is liable to cut or burn the tender growth. If flowers are removed daily and no seed pods allowed to form, blooming will last far longer.

Be ready to fertilize shrubs, lawn, trees and flower borders. This will make all the difference in the world in their growth, appearance and productiveness. Use a complete plant food according to directions on the package.

Hardy roses may be pruned as soon as one is reasonably sure that danger of freezing weather is past. Replacement of roses that died during the Winter may be made as soon as the ground can be worked.

Stonework Makes Dignified Home

Plan No. 1007—Stone has added much to the charm of this one-story home. It has given the facade a degree of solid dignity often lacking in small houses in a suburban development.

The floor plan shows a design that has apartment-like efficiency, with a liberal dash of "luxury living" for the homeowner with a medium income. The handy kitchen is close to the front door, service door and the dining-room.

Perhaps one of the nicest features of the house is the ample living-room, with the dining-room separated from it only by an arch. This great sweep of room is unusual for a house of this size. The master bedroom is roomy, light and has "husband and wife" closets. The other bedroom is smaller, but has cross ventilation and a door leading to the back terrace.

Build Homes for Less Money

SOMETIMES home builders find that the bids offered for the building of their hoped-for new homes run too high. By investigating these cases we learn that there are two principal causes. The first is the difficulty of picking out the right contractor. The second is the difficulty of making suitable changes in the plans and specifications to reduce costs.

The answer to both these questions is the same. Study your problem. It takes time, but this time is worth money to you, and you are justified in putting a lot of it in your home—the only home that you will probably ever build.

Stock plans and specifications are often prepared to suit the largest number of people under average circumstances. Study them carefully to see that they contain everything that you want to have. See that they do not call for what you do not desire. If there is an excess of millwork too elaborate heating or plumbing systems, omit or substitute for these features. You can reduce the cost of almost any five or six-room house at least 15 per cent by eliminating extra items. Study them with your millman, with your plumber, with your heating contractor.

CHAT WITH BUILDERS

Sit down with your general contractor, or far better with your architect, and see what he can offer in the way of sound substitutions that will not change the architecture or substantial quality of the building.

There is no justification for the millman to figure your plans for "special millwork" just because he does not happen to stock what is commonly carried and called for by the plans. Through agreement with you he should make substitutions of stock he does carry. Here is a way for you to keep costs down. But in order to do so you must be entirely familiar with the plans.

And finally, but among the very first of all things in its importance in keeping down costs is the sort of arrangement you make with your contractor. Be business-like about it, see that the plans and specifications list all that you require and that changes will not have to be made in them as the building proceeds.

Lawns Need Spring Attention

GRASS seed is another thing that makes its best growth during the cool weather. The seed can be sown even before the last snow has disappeared. It is best to do this on a day when there is no wind and to make sure of even coverage it is advisable to broadcast from two directions. Some experts even advocate sowing last thing in the Fall. The seed will lie dormant throughout the Winter and start to grow first thing in the Spring.

For new lawns the ground should be thoroughly prepared, cultivated several times to level off the surface and kill the weeds. Repairs are handled in somewhat the same fashion, with the bald spots raked thoroughly to open up the soil. A light raking one way will cover seed sufficiently.

Well-nourished grass and high-quality blended seed from a reliable seed house will usually crowd out most weeds. Grass like any other plant will benefit from a good dressing of fertilizer. Commercial fertilizer, because it is free from weed seeds, is recommended. It should be high in nitrogen, which is the chemical element which provides the green growth in plants.

A little early work with the spudder and regular cutting with the lawn mower will help. Then there are the new 2-4-D sprays. These must be applied carefully according to directions and after the weather turns warm. They are a little hard on clover, but they certainly do an amazing job in destroying dandelion, dock, plantain and most other weeds. Where there is heavy infestation one should follow with fertilizer, watering and some reseeding so that grass will take over where the weeds have been killed or removed.

The Inside Story

By ANN PRINGLE

BLEAK SPOTS IN THE DECORATING BUSINESS

I LIKE the decorating business, but in spite of that fact, or maybe because of it, certain things about the business irritate me. For example:

Manufacturers who say, "Oh, we could produce better styled merchandise, but the public wouldn't buy it." That's what the movie people have said, and they've been proved wrong more than once. I think any merchandise in good taste, at a good price, will find its market—a big one.

Advertisements that harp on the term "gracious living." What do they mean? I may be naive, but it's always seemed to me that useful, vigorous, happy lives have a grace all their own. Grace, even with dancers, is, I think, chiefly a matter of hard work and good muscular co-ordination, plus a certain spirit and verve. Let's have more people living the way they really want to live, and the graciousness will take care of itself.

White nursery furniture, chastely decorated with little pink and blue flowers. Nurseries like this remind me of hospitals. They introduce the baby to a sterile, other-worldly environment he will never in his life meet again. And when can the furniture be used again, except for another baby? Why not plain wood furniture for nurseries, treated for easy cleaning and sealed in size, but versatile enough so the infant can grow up with it, and use it in his room when he's past the toys-and-rompers stage?

The term "hangings," used to denote draperies. I know it's accepted, but the dictionary gives as one definition, "execution by the gallows," and that's the one I always think of first.

Advertisements that describe merchandise as "priced to fit your pocketbook." Often it's merchandise I couldn't afford at all, and I don't like to be told I can. I know more about my budget than the ad writers do.

FIRST-AID FACTS

First-aid kits in the home, factory or office may be more of a danger than a help if they are not properly maintained. Kits should be checked regularly to see that antiseptics have not been used up or evaporated to a dangerous potency. Bandages should be kept sterile to avoid infection. And most important, the first-aid attendant should be well trained and efficient.

Rev. Robert Staines: Martyr or Missionary

By J. K. NESBITT

A CENTURY ago last week the barque Columbia dropped anchor in Royal Roads and a small boat took the passengers into Fort Victoria.

It was a wet day and planks had to be put out so the ladies in the party could walk from the beach on the waterfront up the slope and into the fort.

Among the little group were the Rev. Robert Staines, the first resident clergyman of Victoria; Mrs. Staines and their adopted son, Horace.

Rev. Mr. Staines was to become a controversial figure, and in the few years he was here he certainly created argument. Though a servant of the Hudson's Bay Company, he heartily disliked company rule and proceeded to fight it, and in doing this, of course, ran headlong into James Douglas and was disliked by other high company officers, but staunchly supported by the independent settlers who thought the company had too much control.

Indeed, it might be said Rev. Mr. Staines was the first opponent in British Columbia of company towns. What he started 100 years ago is still going on: Victoria, of course, was a company town—one hardly dared breathe without company permission.

POOR BEGINNING

Roderick Finlayson, who was in charge of Fort Victoria that March day a century ago, met the Staines and his memoirs give a picture of their arrival: "It was my duty to receive the clergyman, which I did, but felt ashamed to see the lady come ashore. We had to lay planks through the mud in order to get them safely to the fort. They looked around wonderingly at the bare walls of the building and expressed deep surprise, stating that the company in England had told them this and that, and had promised such and such. Anyway, their rooms were fitted as best could be done."

It was easy to see that Staines and his wife made a poor impression on Finlayson, who didn't like criticism of company affairs any more than Douglas and Dr. J. S. Helmcken.

(For much of the material in this article, the writer is indebted to G. Hollis Sclater, who has done a great deal of research into the life and times of Robert Staines, and who has left his record in the Provincial Archives. Unfortunately there are no pictures of Staines or his wife.)

SCHOOL AND RELIGION

Mr. and Mrs. Staines started the first schools in the fort—he teaching the boys, she the girls. Douglas, with a disapproving eye always in the direction of Staines, once wrote to A. C. Anderson: "The school is doing as well as can be expected in the circumstances. More assistance in the way of servants of respectable character is required than we have at our command; so many children give a great deal of trouble and I often wonder how Mrs. Staines can stand the fag of looking after them. She is invaluable and receives less assistance than she ought from her husband, who is rather lazy at times. The children have greatly improved in their personal appearance, and one thing I particularly love in Staines is the attention he bestows on their religious training. Had I a selection to make, he is not exactly the man I would choose, but it must be admitted we might find a man worse qualified for the charge of the school."

Douglas may have had some love for Staines at that point, but it soon went, as the parson proceeded to feud with the company, first about the prices he was charged for supplies and goods in company stores, later about the company treatment of the few independent settlers who were trying to eke out an existence in defiance of the company.

PIGS AND PRICES

Capt. James Cooper, the master of the Columbia, which brought Staines and his wife here from England, gives us in a more unbiased way a good insight in the parson's character. Cooper in his diary wrote of Staines: "This gentleman had probably mistaken his avocation, inasmuch as he would have made a very good parish lawyer instead of a parish priest. He had, nevertheless, many trials to endure—one of his grievances was that he was entitled by his agreement to be furnished with provisions from the company's stores at servants' prices, viz. 50 per cent over prime cost. He, however, found that by careful calculation the company was charging him something like 2,000 per cent above cost price for some articles. This gentleman had his peculiarities and was to make his round of visits on horseback, in a rig that would not have done discredit to Don Quixote himself. Mr. Staines had devoted his attention to farming and prided himself upon possessing a fine breed of pigs and encouraged every master of ships trading to this country to import from him breeding stock, and in the course of two or three years had for Vancouver Island a very fine show of fine breed pigs."

In between preaching and teaching and looking after his pigs and growing fine lettuce, Rev. Mr. Staines carried on his disagreements with the company and with Douglas. He vigorously objected to the latter appointing his brother-in-law, David Cameron, the Chief Justice of the colony. Cameron, Staines said, had no legal training and should not be in such a position.

INDIANS AND WIVES

Staines, in a letter to Rev. Edward Cridge, who was then in England, shows he was a man of imagination and keen powers of observation. This letter, preserved in the Provincial Archives, gives a first-class account of Indian affairs as they were at the time of his arrival: "A great many of the Indians are occasionally employed by the company. I have had one of them, a son of one of the Clallum chiefs, by name Yolstam, who is a great friend of mine, in my service, but he does not like steady work. He is a boy of about 16 and a few days ago I found that his father had gone away, and, previously to leaving, had bought his son a wife. He now, I suppose, considers him as settled in the world. They all marry very early and the women become quite old and haggard by 25. The men have a plurality of wives—according to their wealth, chiefly. There is one of the Clallums, who, I am told, has 11.

"Their property chiefly consists of slaves, blankets and canoes. Every man has his gun, or two, or three, his canoe sometimes two or three of them of different sizes for different purposes. The chieftainship is hereditary, but may also be acquired and in rather a curious way. It is not by permanent possession of wealth, though possession is previously necessary. If a man can destroy seven or eight blankets of his own he is reckoned a chief, and the more he can destroy the greater chief he is deemed. Men already chiefs do this to gain superiority among chiefs. One man on this island, to the northward, was seen to destroy, with great formality and very deliberately 100 good blankets in this way. They mount on these occasions on the roof of their huts, and tear the blankets into strips—and distribute them amongst those who are assembled round."

Mr. and Mrs. Staines were great friends of Mr. and Mrs. Blinkhorn who farmed at Metchosin and often the clergyman and his wife went there. The Blinkhorns' niece, Martha Cheney, later Mrs. W. B. Ella, wrote in her diary: "Uncle came home with Mr. Staines—uncle went back with Mr. Staines to the Fort."

HOME IN HILLSIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Staines took property far removed from the Fort—in the Hillside-Shelbourne area of today. Dr. J. S. Helmcken, in his reminiscences, gives interesting sidelights on the Staines. He wrote: ". . . Mrs. Staines gave a salad supper—a not uncommon occurrence, and on these occasions some of the lady visitors occasionally slept the night in the house. During the night people would meet, one going down the passage, the other coming up with a modicum of lighted candle. In the morning they appeared a little the worse at breakfast, and began comparing notes. It could not have been the salad, for that was very lovely. At last Mrs. Staines said, "Mrs. Blinkhorn, where did you get the oil for the salad?" "Out of the old salad bottle, the same as usual." "Oh," said Mrs. Staines, "I forgot to tell you I had a fresh bottle—and had filled the one you used with castor oil. It is a mercy we were not all killed."

Early in 1853 Douglas became so annoyed with Staines that he wrote to Archibald Barclay, secretary of the Hudson's Bay Company in London: "I have . . . had a great deal of trouble in consequence of Mr. Staines' disagreeable manner and unyielding temper . . . Mr. Staines is an unsuccessful teacher and the boys who attend his school make so little progress—though Mrs. Staines is more successful with the girls." Later Douglas wrote to London: "The Rev. Mr. Staines is a fomentor of mischief, and, I believe, a preacher of sedition," and he asked that Staines be replaced by "a person of real piety and Christian experience, a lover of peace and one who eschews politics, and maintains the true dignity of the Christian character . . ."

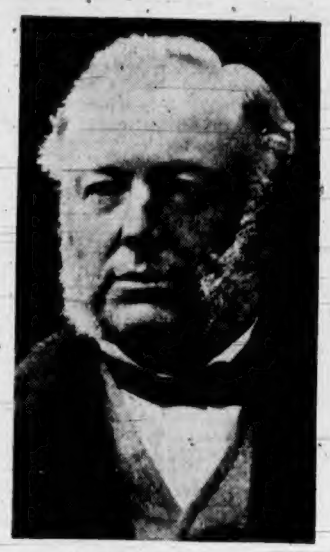

PETITION TO LONDON

It was about this time that the enemies of the company in Victoria decided to protest to London, pointing out that the company was ruling with too iron a hand. Staines was chosen as the man to carry the petition to the British Government. The secretary of the company in London, hearing of this, wrote to Douglas: "As Mr. Staines has thought fit to leave his station without asking or obtaining leave, the Governor and committee consider that the office of chaplain to the company at Victoria is vacant and are taking steps to procure a successor to Mr. Staines. They trust their selection may prove more fortunate, as it appears from the accounts received from Vancouver's Island that whether as schoolmaster, clergyman or citizen, Mr. Staines' conduct has been uniformly unsatisfactory."

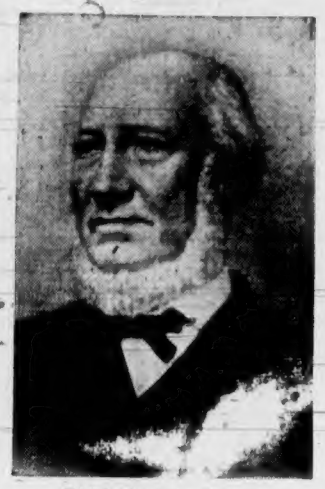

DEATH AT SEA

But long before this letter was received by Douglas, Robert Staines was dead. The ship on which he sailed from here in 1854 foundered in the region of Cape Flattery. Douglas wrote a brusque account to the company in London: "It is reported that the vessel in which the Rev. Mr. Staines sailed from Sooke to San Francisco foundered off Classet, having a heavy deck load of timber—and that everyone of the unfortunate persons on board perished with her, except one man who was picked up at sea some days afterwards clinging to a part of the rigging, which remained above water. His sufferings must have been fearful, and he did not survive his deliverance."

Mrs. Staines and Horace returned a few months later to England, sailing in the Princess Royal.

Where Rev. Staines Preached and His Wife Taught
. . . Inside the Fort, these buildings were used.

Finlayson, in his memoirs, gives further details on Robert Staines: "He was a man full of frills, whom the Factor endeavored to receive and treat politely, but whose patience was sorely treated by Staines. He was insufferably conceited, without being at all shallow-pated. He was a married man and his wife was with him—he was a good husband, and Mrs. Staines stood true to him. Together they labored, for they were both hard workers, teaching, preaching and finishing, generally what their Creator had left undone in this little world. Together in Victoria Church they taught the first school in the colony, for the Hudson's Bay servants were seldom without children; the services were carried on in the messroom of the Fort. Here also was erected a temporary pulpit and prayers were held every Sunday. He early quarelled with the company, accusing them of failure to keep their promises with him, more particularly in the prices of goods which he had been assured before leaving London should be furnished him at servants' rates, that is, 50 per cent on cost, instead of which he was in reality charged in some instances 2,000 per cent."

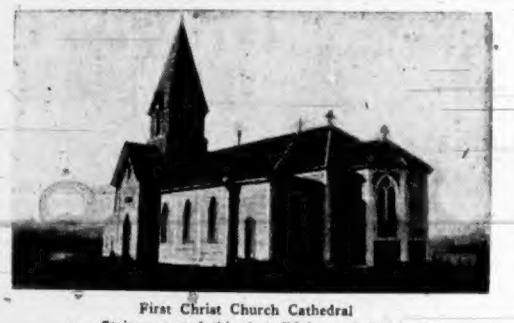

STRANGE CHARACTER

In his reminiscences that tell so fascinating a story of the Victoria of long ago, Dr. Helmcken gives his account of the personality of Robert Staines: "The parson Staines was an excitable politician and a very dissatisfied man—and, of course, belonged to the dissatisfied, though he did not mix with them at Yates' spirit house. Anyhow, the malcontents determined to send home a delegate to lay thir grievances at the foot of the throne and poor Staines consented to be the man—perhaps, his vanity and visions of glory assisting his desire; his love of his profession not being great enough to counteract the worldliness."

When news of the drowning of Staines reached here, Helmcken wrote: "There was general pity—he was praised or blamed—a martyr or a fool as the case may be—but all, nevertheless, regretted his end."

Helmcken further wrote that Lady Douglas, his mother-in-law, and Mrs. Staines "did not chum at all, there being too much uppishness about the latter—she being the great woman—the great complaining—the great schoolmistress—and I may here state that she really was the best schoolmistress ever seen here, even since, in Victoria. She kept the girls in order, took them out, saw they were properly and neatly dressed, carried themselves properly and paid much attention to deportment and was really good to the girls—although the latter did not like the strictness. The school and residence of the parson and Mrs. Staines was a very large portion of Bachelors' Hall Building—the ladies slept upstairs over our heads—and the little mischiefs used to play pranks, occasionally pouring water upon us through cracks of holes in the flooring, for our ceiling was not ceiled. By the same token our proceedings may have annoyed them, too, for occasionally Bachelors' Hall was pretty noisy."

If we go by the record, Staines was a much hated man, with few good characteristics. But, of course, we must remember the people in authority here were all H.B.C. men; they would brook no interference with, or criticism of, the rule of the company. Anyone who challenged its authority was branded a blackguard and a rascal. It would seem, looking back a century, that Staines was a courageous person, who did his duty as he saw it. Certainly the part he played, in so brief a time, was a significant part in the development of this province, for his independence, his defence, his stubbornness, his hatred of autocracy, became characteristics of so many people in this new land. It is too bad that today Robert Staines is mostly forgotten. Perhaps, in his own way, he was as much a giant of our pioneer days as those men of the company.

Facts on File

It usually takes 4.6 bushels of corn or its equal to put an additional 50 pounds on a 228-pound hog.

About 80,000,000 or more acres of undeveloped land in the United States are estimated to be suitable for farming.

It cost $2,000,000,000 and two and a half years intense work by 100,000 physicists and chemists to perfect the first first atomic bomb.

In a typical bee colony, there are a queen, 100 or more drones and 3,000 to to 30,000 workers.

To make a gallon of maple syrup it takes from 45 to 50 gallons of sap.

February Thaw

A Short Story

By RUTH GILBERT COCHRAN

CAROL Macrae, standing ankle deep in snow for the first time in her 21 years, turned the collar of her heavy sweater higher around her ash-gold curls and mournfully surveyed the ruin of her cherished garden.

It was the first day of thaw after Florida's mid-February blizzard, a freakish storm that, piling drifts shoulder high in the roads, had threatened disaster to the citrus crops upon which the financial life of the little city of Tallacola depended. Even here, sheltered by the south wall of her father's old white-pillared house, the olea blossoms — delicate lemon-scented froth only a few days ago—were brown and sere; the narcissus borders a tangle of brittle, ice-blackened foliage. Carol shrugged resignedly at them . . .

To tell the truth, Carol was more than a little bored. Three days indoors with a heavy cold would kill anyone's enthusiasm for this unprecedented Winter weather. And those days of enforced idleness had brought back miserably before her eyes a picture she had vowed to forget . . . the sight of a lean, square jaw tense in anger, of bitter hurt in two proud grey young eyes . . . Wallace Stout's eyes.

Almost a year now since that other February day when she had given him back his ring . . .

"Understand just one thing," Wallace had said levelly, "this is my life we're discussing. And I happen to know what I want to do with it. I want to marry you, Carol, of course, because I love you . . ."

"Oh, you do?" she had whispered fiercely. "You're sure of that?"

"I am . . . heaven knows why. Oh, Carol, must we hurt each other this way? Can't you be content to be the wife of a struggling small town doctor who wants to make a success the hard way? It was kind of your father, and I know how much undercover work went on to get that offer of the State Medical Board job for me, and how much more I'd be making right now if I had accepted it. But I don't want wires pulled for me, by Angus Macrae or anyone else."

"I don't like the way you say 'Angus Macrae,'" Carol had pouted. "Father was thinking of my happiness, too, remember."

"I'm not forgetting that. But what little success I've had so far I've won for myself . . . and I intend to go on that way. Your father may be able to tell a hundred citrus farmers what to do . . . he may lay down the law to the shareholders of the Savings Bank, but . . ."

"Stop!" Carol had cried. "Stop right there, Wallace Stout, or . . ."

"Or what?" the young doctor had demanded quietly.

"Or . . . this!" She had pulled the ring so furiously from her finger that it slipped and fell to the floor . . . the little diamond that had meant so much to both of them twinkling up at her reproachfully.

Wallace had picked it up and pocketed it. "You'll get this back when you ask for it . . . not before," he had said. And had gone away. Out of her father's house, and out of her life.

It would be nice, Carol thought wistfully now, to be in her teens again. She could go rollicking off to the grapefruit groves with the gang to set out smudge pots and oil flares. One doesn't know what heartache is at that age . . .

A gleam of purple under the hedgerow caught her eye. The Russian violets had been spared, then. But when she had sludged across the snowy lawn and bent over the bed, Carol's hopeful blue gaze clouded. The stems of the lovely crumpled flowers broke like glass in her fingers.

"Oh, darn it all!" she wailed.

An answering shriek of mock protest came from the other side of the hedge: "Carol! I hope you're using language fit for a pastor's wife to hear."

* * * * *

Looking up, Carol saw the sweet, homely face of Nell Bristow dimpling at her from the folds of an old brown wool fascinator. "Fortunately, yes," she grinned, and coughed croupily.

"Goodness, child," her neighbor scolded, "you shouldn't be out in all this drip. How come?"

Carol frowned anxiously. "I'm watching for old Aunt Sally Green. We're down to our last sticks of lightwood, and father just won't use anything else for his evening fire."

Old tyrant, thought Nell impishly, but said brightly, "I'm worried about Aunt Sally, too. This cold's so bad for that 'misery' in her back. And that flimsy old shack in Darktown . . . hark, I think I hear her now."

From the next block a wavering cry sounded: "Light'ood! Git yore nice, fat light'ood. Full er rosin!"

"Bother!" grumbled Carol. "It's that awful Mrs. Stebbins and her son, Raleigh, with their mule cart."

"Reckon you'll have to buy from them today," said Nell. "Have you seen a doctor about that cough?"

"How could I? Old Dr. Mason is away, and . . ." Carol's eyes misted ". . . and I can't consult Wallace. You know why . . ."

"Mm-hm, I know. Listen, Carol, drive over with me after lunch to see Aunt Sally? Wrap up warm, and the air will be good for you. Unless you have something else to do, of course."

"What do I ever have to do?" inquired Carol a trifle bitterly. "A dollar's worth, Raleigh. Well, that'll help take father's mind off this freeze. He's been so upset."

"He's not the only one," said Mrs. Bristow dryly. "Run in, now. I'll call for you in an hour. I have a few little things to attend to first."

And so she had. For Nell Bristow had suddenly had an inspiration. Aunt Sally's misery was in her back; Carol's, if Nell knew the signs, was in her heart. And right here in Tallacola, available in half a minute by telephone, was the one person who could cure them both. It was an inspiration, and she meant to waste no time in acting on it.

"You know, John," she confided to her husband at luncheon, "that handsome old Simon Legree next door exasperates me!"

"Oh, come now, Nell," the rector protested.

But his wife went on relentlessly: "He thinks an interest in his comfort is all a pretty girl like Carol needs. Something's got to be done about it."

"I see trouble ahead," said the Reverend John darkly.

"Don't worry," laughed Nell. "I've only done a little telephoning so far . . ." her listener groaned ". . . and the rest will be up to Carol. I'm tired of seeing her mooning around, the sweet little fool, just because she didn't appreciate having a real man in love with her. Goodness, I must fly!"

* * * * *

On the way to Darktown, Nell said little, admiring her companion's smart forest-green outfit with the platinum fox collar just a shade lighter than her hair. Angus might be tight as the bark on a tree, but he denied his daughter none of the material luxuries. There was no envy in Nell's gaze . . . her own made-over costume was worn with the good-natured acceptance of a wife long accustomed to making things do.

"Yonder's Aunt Sally's, Carol," said Nell finally. A furtive glance through the windshield showed the intervening road free of cars except for a few lopsided jalopies, and Nell nodded in satisfaction. She led the way up the worn steps and knocked at the cabin door. "It's Mrs. Bristow and Carol, Aunt Sally," she called. "May we come in?"

"Step right in, chillen," a voice quavered. Bright sunlight from the opened door dimmed the flicker of the wood fire on the hearth, revealing the single room's shabby furnishings. Aunt Sally's dark wizened face beamed from the pillow of her sagging iron bed. "Ain't this somepin'," she crooned. "Shore is pleased to see you-all. Find cheers an' ress yousefls."

"Sorry to see you laid up this way," said Nell.

"Bless you, chile, I'll be roun' in a few days," said the old woman perkily. "Right now this ole misery in my back ain't lettin' up like it should."

"What are you doing for it, auntie?" asked Carol fondly.

"Oh, Rosemary—that's my gran'chile—she rubs me good with hoss liniment every night. That takes the kinks out quicker'n all this fancy medicine. Nothin' like good ole hoss liniment fer a misery."

Carol sank into a chair, dismayed, but Nell spoke up briskly. "You're going to need more than that this time, Aunt Sally, so I've asked Dr. Stout to come look you over. There's his car now." Ignoring Carol's startled gasp, she flung the door open. "Hi, Wally!" she called.

"Hi, yourself, sugar," a deep voice answered, and if Wallace Stout's grey eyes showed a flicker of surprise at seeing Carol it was quickly suppressed. "Just like you to drag me down here today," he scolded, shedding coat and scarf in two swift motions. "I've got an appendectomy on in 40 minutes."

"Stop talking biggety," commanded Nell, "and tell us what Aunt Sally needs. Then you can take a look at Carol's throat. She's been barking like a sea lion."

"Of course," said the tall doctor stiffly. He grinned coaxingly at the frightened Negro woman. "Relax, auntie," he scoffed affectionately, his long, sensitive surgeon's fingers gently probing the sore muscles.

"Lawsee, no," chuckled Aunt Sally. "Knew all 'bout that!"

"Nothing here that our new lamps at the hospital can't set right in a couple of weeks," he declared.

"I ain't in no way set on hospitals," wailed Aunt Sally. "Don't take me theah!"

Wallace patted her shoulder. "Sixty dollars'll take care of everything," he announced. "How about it, Mrs. B.? Can you and the church ladies swing it?"

"Certainly," said Nell. "We'll have a cake sale; folks still eat! When do you want Aunt Sally to go?"

"What's the matter with right now?" The doctor turned to Carol. "If you'll drive to the hospital with us I'll have time to give you a quick once-over."

Carol found her voice . . . a very small, faint voice. "I didn't think you'd want to bother with me, Wallace."

"Nonsense!" the doctor snapped, briskly professional. "You should have called me a week ago. How about wrapping Aunt Sally in that blanket, Mrs. B., and I'll carry her out to my car."

"I ain't goin'," whimpered the old woman.

"But you'd never get well here, all alone," chided Nell. "Now, you'll be warm as toast. Ready, Wally," she added, and laughed to herself as she saw how reluctantly the doctor turned from Carol. "Pooh to you, Angus Macrae," she exulted inwardly.

* * * * *

Wallace Stout, M.D., held a wooden spatula firmly down on Carol's tongue. "Say 'aaah,'" he commanded.

"Aaaagh," said Carol meekly.

"Hmm. Nothing serious." Wallace removed the spatula. "Now," he directed, "say, 'I've been a spoiled brat with a warped sense of values, and I'm sorry.'"

Carol swallowed hard. "I am sorry," she admitted faintly.

"Very well." The grey eyes twinkled. "That will do for the present. Treatment will consist of a daily visit to Aunt Sally's ward with a short stop in this office for a checkup and spray. Carol . . ."

A loudspeaker broke in monotonously, "Calling Dr. Stout. Dr. Stout. Wanted in Operative Three."

"Good gravy!" said Wallace. He stooped, pressed a most unprofessional kiss on Carol's soft, trembling mouth, and fled.

Carol was kept busy the next few days begging donations from the town's best cooks for the cake sale. The response in angel foods and Lady Baltimores was gratifying . . . everybody loved Aunt Sally. Why, she was a Tallacola institution. And when the event was over Carol and Nell, after a final counting of receipts, found they had made even more than the specified sum.

"Enough," Nell said gleefully, "to refurnish Aunt Sally's cabin completely, as a big surprise!"

"But maybe she won't like that," Carol demurred.

"She's bound to," cried Nell. "Imagine! Lovely fresh things . . . I have a maple bed up in my attic, just going to waste—and you could give those faded blue chintz curtains . . ."

"And that old red plush rocker," said Carol, catching the other's enthusiasm. "But we'll have to hurry to get the place ready. Wal . . . the doctors tell me Aunt Sally'll be going home Saturday. I've been seeing her every day," she hastened to explain, her cheeks suddenly peony pink. "Had to be there, anyway, to have my throat treated."

"You're certainly looking better," smiled Nell. "Well, let's go over tomorrow and see what's what."

Dust motes danced thick in the beams of the next morning's sun as the two surveyed the cabin's dilapidated furnishings. "What a mess!" shuddered the Scotch woman. She walked to the open door. "Raleigh!" she called sharply. "Come here."

"Yes'm." Mrs. Stebbins' son swung his long legs over the side of the mule cart and ambled to the doorway.

"Before you bring in any of that furniture you hauled over," directed Mrs. Bristow, "I want this place cleared out. Take every smitch of this stuff and throw it down that gully over there."

"Oh, dear, ought we?" protested Carol, but she might as well have tried to stop a gulf tornado.

"Everything!" said Nell.

* * * * *

Darktown hummed with activity that day. Its more enterprising members surrounded Raleigh, scurrying off with a chair or table before the white boy had carried them more than a few yards from the house. And then they gathered to admire the newer household goods. "M-mm, shore is one purty plush rocker! An' lookat 'at swell bed. Aunt Sally gwine bus' herself wif joy when she see 'em."

But did she? The old woman, led into the room by Dr. Stout and Carol, dropped their arms and gazed around in dismay. "What happen heah?" she demanded.

"It's all new, auntie," beamed Nell. "A surprise . . ." she stopped, amazed at the frown on a face she had expected to see the picture of delight. "Come, sit down in your new chair," she coaxed, "and see how comfortable it is."

Aunt Sally grudgingly obeyed. "Ain't as cumfable as my ole one," she grumbled. "Ain't got the lumps that ress the misery. G'wan home, chillen, an' leave me be a while."

They did not dare smile until they were outside. Then Wallace took Carol's arm. "I have a call to make back in the woods," he said. "Want to come along for the ride? Nell can take you home, if you'd rather."

"I'd . . . like the ride with you," she faltered.

"O.K.," said Wallace, and talked briskly of town matters as they drove along the country roads.

Carol waited in the car while he attended to his patient in the desolate farmhouse, and when he came out and swung quickly into the driver's seat she faced him bravely. "I'm ready to ask you for the ring now, Wallace," she said brokenly. "I . . . I've missed it terribly."

A strong hand drew her head down to a hard, broad shoulder. "That's my girl," said Wallace softly. "Go ahead and cry. I've cried, too, inside, many a time since you threw this little bauble at me. Here!" He slipped the ring on her finger, then pulled a large and competent handkerchief from his breast pocket and wiped Carol's damp cheeks. "Now kiss me, and then we'll go tell Angus."

Carol's whole heart was in the kiss she gave, but she said: "I'd rather break the news to him tonight. He's not going to take it very nicely."

Supper that evening in the Macrae household was a triumph in diplomacy. Angus' favorite finnan haddie and scalloped potatoes, his pet dessert, his own blend of tea—brewed to a wicked blackness. Replete and looking rather like a proud old eagle in a benevolent mood, he sat beside his glowing lightwood fire, smoking his ancient pipe. This was the hour he most enjoyed.

"Sit down, Carol," he commanded, "and stop fluttering about. You scarcely touched your food. There's something on your mind, lass. Out with it!"

Carol eloquently held out her left hand. "I'm going to marry Wallace," she said shakily.

"Are you, indeed?" her father glared. "I'm bitterly displeased with you . . . a thing I thought never to say to my motherless bairn. Good night, Carol." He strode from the room, but once out in the balmy air of the garden, his anger cooled. He paced the graveled path, then snapped his fingers. "That's it!" he exclaimed. And Carol, watching him from her window with misty eyes, knew that in his usual inarticulate way Angus would try to make amends for the hurt he had given her with the only means he understood . . . money. But this time, she thought, resolutely, she would not soften until she had gained her heart's desire.

* * * * *

Aunt Sally's response to Angus' knock next day was not a cordial one. "Moah white folks stickin' theah noses in mah business," she muttered. "What you want, Mistah Macrae?"

"Tut, auntie," chided her caller. "I'll come right to the point. You pay ten dollars a month for this cabin, don't you?"

"Yes, suh," snapped the colored woman. "'Peahs like some people knows evvathin' about othah people."

"Whisht," interrupted Mr. Macrae, "take this!"

Aunt Sally's face was a study in bewilderment. "What's this heah?" she demanded.

"Did you never see a deed of ownership, woman? That paper shows that this house belongs to you now. I'm making you a present of it."

"You, Mistah Macrae?" gasped Aunt Sally. "You?"

"Aye," glared Angus. "Me!"

The story of his philanthropy went the rounds. "You'll have to admit, Nell," said John Bristow, "that you failed to do justice to your Simon Legree. Pretty fine thing for Angus to do just now, with things looking so bad for the bank."

"What do you mean?" asked Nell, alarmed, but her husband's reassuring, "Perhaps it's only a rumor," dismissed her vague foreboding, and in her busy days she forgot the matter. She saw little of the Macraes, noticing only that Carol and her father did not exchange their usual affectionate farewells when Angus set out each morning. Standing up to him about Wally, Nell reflected sagely. Well, it'll do him good!

A thought she recalled a bit remorsefully a few days later when Wallace on the telephone announced gravely: "I've some bad news for Carol, sugar."

"Not Angus!" gasped Nell, her dimly remembered fears a grim reality.

"Yes. Heart attack. He's here in the hospital, and wants to see Carol."

"But what happened?"

"Haven't you heard? The Savings Bank closed this morning. The shock was too much for Macrae . . . his old pump's been none too good of late years, but, of course, he wouldn't do anything about it. He's resting quietly now. Will you bring Carol over, Mrs. B.?"

"Of course, Wally. Just give me time to tell her."

The familiar white-tiled corridors of the hospital called for courage, and Carol, calm and composed, was a different creature from the badly frightened girl Nell had comforted.

"Well, lass, you certainly took your time to get here!" The querulous words were music to Carol's ear. She bent to kiss her father's cheek, and his arm stole awkwardly around her. "I'm sorry I was so harsh, childie," whispered Angus.

"As if that mattered," scolded Carol, "so long as you're all right." She glanced questioningly at the tall figure standing at the foot of the narrow bed. "Wallace," she breathed, "have you and father . . .?"

"Losh," rapped Angus, "the young loon saved my life just now, and since your heart's so set on him . . ."

"Oh, father!" Carol murmured.

"I'll not change my opinion that he was no more than a fool to refuse that appointment, you understand," said the Scot. "It would be handy now. Your father's a pauper, Carol."

"I told you to stop worrying about that, sir," said young Dr. Stout severely. "The bank has weathered freezes before, and the depositors are insured. If I can trust you to sleep now, Carol and I will go take a final look at Aunt Sally before she starts on her rounds again. How about that shut-eye?"

Angus smiled wryly. "A fine state of affairs," he grumbled. "Taking orders from a stubborn young whippersnapper of a son-in-law. But run along. I'll sleep."

Aunt Sally, spry as a cricket again, was out in her dooryard loading her wood wagon. "Mornin', chillen," she called. "Nice to see you-all. Doctah, you's lookin' mighty peart today. 'Peahs like you might tell ole Aunt Sally about it."

"It may surprise you, auntie," said Wallace gravely, "to hear that this young lady and I . . ."

"Lawsee, no," chuckled the old woman. "Knew all 'bout that, watchin' Miss Carol blush up in de hospital. Reckon I's fit to haul light'ood agin, doctah?"

"You're fine," said Wallace. "Go ahead, and good luck to you."

Off went Aunt Sally. "Light'ood!" she piped. "Nice fat light'ood." Then as Wallace and Carol drove past her, waving happily, she grinned. "Shush, I's fine," she chuckled. "Doctahs, huh? Long's Rosemary gives me a good rub evvy night I's gwine to stay fine. Nothin' like good ole hoss liniment fer a misery!"

Italy's Recovery Goes On—Future Clouded

By ALEX CLIFFORD

ROME, Italy.—The small boys gave me the first clue: the tough little dead end kids who for three years have haunted the Genoa end of the Milan highway and operated the black market in petrol.

These untutored children could take one glance at your front number plate and know in exactly what language to start bargaining as they loped alongside you.

The point about the small boys is that they are no longer there. And when I asked why, I was told: "There is no petrol rationing in Italy this year. The Black Market has disappeared. The boys are out of a job."

So Italy has been able to add this to her achievements—to her glittering shops, her excellent food, her neon signs, her new houses, her gaiety and cheerfulness, and all the other symptoms of her extraordinary recovery.

This defeated, impoverished, war-ravaged, overpopulated country is the first big European nation to suppress petrol rationing.

And it means, in effect, that she now has no rationing left.

RECOVERY IS REAL

It makes one wonder again whether it can really be true—whether the gaiety and the glamour and the luxury do not conceal some vast misery and rottenness festering beneath the surface.

Italy herself has been taking stock of her own position just lately. She has had to prepare her Four-Year Plan for the handling of Marshall Aid.

Her results show that there is in fact, however surprising and galling to other nations, a great deal of soundness and solidity beneath her spectacular recovery.

The statistics which proves this are, of course, a mass of complicated and often bewildering figures. But here are the highlights:

Italy's exports for 1948, valued in dollars, were 80 per cent higher than in 1938. In terms of purchasing power they about equal the 1938 level, but they are still going up;

And this is all the more remarkable when you consider that her two main pre-war targets for exports—Germany and her own empire—now take virtually nothing at all;

Italy's industrial production, which sank to 25 per cent of prewar in 1945, was up to 96 per cent by last September. Unofficial estimates are that it has topped the 100 by now;

Her production of electricity—and she is one of the most electrified countries in Europe—is now one-third higher than it was in 1938;

And work is well under way — all financed by private enterprise — on projects designed to reach the country's physical maximum of hydro-electric production by 1952.

FOOD STOCKS BETTER

Italy is now 80 per cent self-supporting in food as compared with only 35 per cent in 1945.

And when American aid is added to this 80 per cent, you can see why Italian shops and restaurants are so well stocked.

In case you think it is only the rich who eat these good things, it is worth knowing that the available calories per head are almost exactly the same as before the war, and there is no Black Market.

The currency has been absolutely stable for well over a year now—which is saying something in present-day Europe. The price index has on the whole dropped slightly.

Nearly all wages have risen more than prices; in fact, State employees are the only ones whose pay will not buy more than in 1938.

You could add a lot of other figures to these and build up a very pretty picture. You could pile on the wonderful free sunshine, the cheap wine, the beauty of the country, and all the benefits that come from a natural gaiety and a genius for improvisation in the people.

You could hold Italy up as a model example of what can happen to a country which has had every interest in forgetting about the war; which does not have to bother about empires or armies; which has adopted the freest economy of any big nation in Europe, and where individuals are prepared to work really hard. And you would be partly right.

FUTURE IS PROBLEM

But there is another side to the picture. And the other side is not so much a problem of present misery as a problem of future bafflement.

Where does Italy's economy go from here? How can it be developed much further?

The hub of the difficulty is the fact that today over 2,000,000 Italians—some 4 per cent of the population — are unemployed and trying to live on a dole of about 2s 6d a day.

That, of course, comes pretty near to misery; probably not as bad misery as Britain's unemployed endured between the two wars, but nevertheless a situation that cannot be indefinitely endured. And Italy does not look like being able to solve it.

Some of these unemployed are not really unemployed — they are workers who, by some means or other manage to draw the dole.

But the real unemployed are really higher, because employers are forced by law to continue paying workers for whom they no longer have any use.

And there you have a vicious circle—business cannot expand because these useless employees make the cost of production too high, and because business cannot expand, these useless, employees cannot be given work.

The Government has been studying the unemployment problem ever since last April's elections, but so far it has done very little.

THE FANFANI PLAN

Parliament has been debating a stopgap project called the Fanfani plan, which aims at turning unskilled workers into skilled workers and using the unemployed on vast reafforestation schemes. Marshall plan undertakings are expected to create 250,000 jobs.

But that won't solve the difficulty. And all the time Nature is making things worse. The Italians are breeding hard. Every year there are 450,000 more births than deaths in this over-populated land.

Italy's soil can be made to grow a little more food, but not much. Emigration is increasingly expensive and difficult especially now there is no Italian Empire.

Electricity production will have reached it maximum by 1952, and then? "Atomic energy," say the Italians blithely, shrugging their shoulders.

Italy will find it hard to export much more in a competitive world — which for the most part has a horror of importing. Her costs of production are too high.

COMMUNIST TACTICS

They are high because of high wages, because of superfluous workers, because of the shortage of capital for investment, because of the high bank rate (a deflationary measure), because of high political strikes, because many Communist workers are using a "go slow" technique, because there is a bad hangover of uneconomic industries from the days of Mussolini's attempts to make Italy "autarchic" — economically self-contained.

Italy's present is outwardly brilliant—and outward brilliance means a lot in Italy. Her future is dark and doubtful on paper.

And yet—it is impossible not to have a certain unreasoning faith in a country that has recovered so adroitly and cheerfully from the blunders and disasters of the war.

There is such a national and individual genius for making and mending, for adjusting oneself. With her outward signs of hard work and her relatively free economy, Italy has very special charms for appealing to America.

It is hard somehow not to feel, as most Italians obviously do, that they will come out all right in the end.

Preparations to Conquer Everest

By WEBSTER FAWCETT

IN a pressure chamber in a Cambridge laboratory I have just seen a young man madly pedaling a bicycle, duplicating the conditions of strain to be encountered when he climbs Mount Everest next year.

Britain is planning a new all-out attempt to reach the hitherto unscaled peak of the world's highest mountain. With the advantage of all the altitude technique and lightweight equipment perfected during the war, the expedition will be the seventh to assail the 29,002-foot "roof of the world," and its leader, 36-year-old Group Captain A. F. Bandit, believes it will prove a case of seventh time lucky.

Volunteers for the team are already being tried out in compression chambers, living behind glass for 30 days at a stretch while oxygen content and atmospheric pressure are gradually reduced. Only those able to withstand this conditioning will pass the final selection, and the final leg of the climb will probably be undertaken by two men who have been conditioned to 30,200 feet or more.

PAINFUL TO EAT

In the topmost camp—27,750 feet—it has been discovered that men can exhaust themselves by the mere act of turning over in their sleeping bags. Eating is painful. Air hunger produces frenzied irritability. The brain blacks out and a climber on the last expedition could not remember what his camp was for. Modern oxygen apparatus, weighing 15 pounds, against 35 pounds used in the 1938 expedition, will help to solve these problems. The new packs give an oxygen supply for six or seven hours, and it is hoped to parachute unlimited supplies from the air.

Previously, too, the task of trekking the final 200 miles up the foothills has not only served to exhaust the party, but has drastically curtailed the actual time available for the assault on the final ridge. In 1950, transport planes will fly men and equipment to a marshalling point in the Himalayas, and helicopters may hop the rest of the journey to the base camp at 16,000 feet at the foot of the Rongbuk glacier.

FORMER ATTEMPTS

The first reconnaissance expedition, just 28 years ago, did not possess even satisfactory maps of the mountain approaches. The second attempt the following year saw George Mallory and others within nearly 2,000 feet of the summit without oxygen. The third assault in 1924 made many people almost believe in the Tibetan legends of malefic gods firmly entrenched in the never-melting snows at the crest. Seven men were swept away by a crushing avalanche. Despite this disaster, George Mallory and Andrew Irvine took up the attempt beyond the last 1,000 feet with oxygen masks. An hour after they had left the final camp the shrouding mists parted and watchers saw the two tiny figures lumbering slowly upward only 800 feet from the summit. They were never seen again.

In 1933, Hugh Ruttledge's expedition found an ice-axe stuck like a tombstone in the ice 700 feet from the peak. That same year, F. S. Smythe continued on alone, attempting the final great barrier of the north cold single-handed. In an hour of agony he clambered only 50 feet. The slopes were like a slate roof. To the freezing terror of solitude were added hallucinations of huge, beaked, bloated creatures hanging malevolently in the sky.

VICTIMS OF WEATHER

Expedition after expedition was defeated by the weather. The strangest adventure of all was the lone-wolf exploit of Maurice Wilson. Positive that by rigorous training and fasting, anyone could become capable of surmounting any obstacle, he set out alone to climb Mount Everest to prove his theory. A subsequent expedition found his body at 21,000 feet.

The new party, however, will remain at the base camp for a few days in order to acclimatize themselves to height and temperature. As they begin the gradual stages of the assault on the slopes, climbing equipment developed by wartime commandos may help them over hitherto unsurmountable obstacles and possibly even open a new route. Lightweight clothing evolved for high flying, with self-heating apparatus, will provide a new barrier against the searing wind. Tent pegs and struts are made of superlight magnesium, three times lighter than the aluminum hitherto used. Self-heating cans of food will alone save precious weeks which must otherwise have been spent in lugging fuel up the mountain.

Though hundreds of candidates have approached Britain's Royal Geographical Society to join the expedition, few will be chosen. As the climbers near the peak, their supplies will become more highly specialized. At the end there remains the simple issue of man versus mountain. The two climbers who make history will dare desperate hazards when they start out from the final camp. Despite the aid of postwar science, two men single-handed must penetrate the unknown.

Expedition Will Attemp To Locate Ark of Noah

By WENDY MacGOWAN

LONDON (NANA).—Noah's ark may be brought to light once more. A Londoner, Egerton Sykes, is preparing an expedition to Mount Ararat this Summer in hopes of finding the remains of the Biblical vessel.

Sykes said he had been in communication with A. J. Smith, president of the Oriental Research Expedition of Greensboro, N.C., discussing the possibilities of a joint expedition.

"Naturally," Sykes said, "we do not expect to find a complete ark in perfect preservation, any more than we expect to find a zoological collection of pairs of animals. But from my own knowledge of that part of the world, and from reports which have come in over a period of years, I am hopeful that we might find a skeleton of the ark preserved in the glaciers of the Ararat region, at a height of 14,000 feet."

The ark is supposed to rest in a remote corner of the Caucasus, close to the Soviet frontier. However, Sykes does not anticipate any trouble in obtaining a permit to search for it.

Sykes' greatest interest is the lost continent of Atlantis. After years of research, he is convinced that Atlantis exists and plans eventually to lead an ocean expedition, equipped with radar, to discover the fabled land.

Search Jungle and Swamp For Crime Proved False

By LESLIE BRODIE

SYDNEY, Australia (CP).—One of the most dramatic manhunts in Australian criminal history was started early in January by a false alarm, but it cannot be stopped for at least another six weeks.

The manhunt is taking place in the unexplored heart of Arnhem Land, and there is no way to contact the police party till it returns to civilization in from six to eight weeks' time.

The hunt began when a report reached Darwin police headquarters that a native chief had been speared to death in Central Arnhem Land. The spearing of a native in that part of the world seldom calls for more than a report and an attempt to bring the culprit to justice, but in this case the reported victim was Raiwalla, head of the Mildjingji tribe, who has been described by anthropologists as the "greatest aboriginal of all time."

Now Raiwalla has turned up at a ranch 300 miles south of Darwin with only a couple of ribs broken from a fall from a horse.

The patrol that went out in search of his "murderer" left Darwin in January with the intention of crossing Arnhem Land, if it were necessary to get their man. If they complete the journey they will be the first white men to make the crossing from north to south.

CONTINUE SEARCH

While the party plunge on through crocodile swamps and vermin and snake-ridden jungles unaware of the false alarm, Raiwalla told Darwin police the story that led to the belief that he had been killed.

A spear-throwing episode began when Raiwalla and his wife caught up with a native from a neighboring tribe who had stolen one of their daughters. Raiwalla had tracked the native through Arnhem Land for weeks before he finally caught him.

When they met they began to throw spears at one another till the thief lost ground and hurriedly made off into the bush—closely followed by the "stolen" daughter. No one was hurt, but the story got around by "bush telegraph" that the famous chief had been killed.

Raiwalla has been in the public eye for years. He assisted Dr. Donald Thompson, the anthropologist, when he was investigating a particularly brutal native massacre of a number of Japanese and Malay trepang fishermen at Caledon Bay in 1939. During the war he helped organise natives for aircraft spotting.

On the debit side of the old chief's life is a murder rap in 1930. Raiwalla was convicted and sentenced to death, but was reprieved and served five years before he was paroled.

Testing Shoes Healthy Job

LONDON. — Peggy Robertshaw has a very funny occupation—she is a shoe tester. Every day she presents herself at the office of a well-known firm in the north of England which specialises in rubber footwear. There she puts on a pair of their shoes and sets off to walk 12 miles. If it is a wet day she can tramp round art galleries or museums, if it is fine and lovely weather she probably takes a train out into the country and does her 12 miles there. She knows when she has done her daily dozen by the pedometer on her leg, which is checked when she goes back to the office.

Peggy wears the same pair of shoes every day until a fault develops. Then she reports this to the technical manager and is given a new pair. Times vary but the average pair of shoes goes about 300 miles before it becomes faulty. Peggy finds shoe testing much more to her liking than office work, and healthier, too. She loves walking and has done 42,000 miles in her arduous job. In all those miles her feet have never ached and she has never had a corn, which is a pretty high compliment to the shoes she has worn.

THOUSANDS OF HOMES

New houses built in Britain last year set up a fresh record in the postwar housing program. For the first time since the war the number of permanent dwellings constructed in any one year exceeded 200,000. The grand total of those completed since the program started in April, 1945, now stands at more than 406,000. The number of families in Britain for whom temporary or permanent homes have been provided since the war now number about 843,000.

Shore Posts Temptation To Sussex Fishermen

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

HASTINGS, England (CP).—Too many of Hastings' young fishermen are discarding their jerseys and putting on the blue suits of office workers — and, say the old salts, the industry is dying out.

"Young men nowadays would rather go dancing in town than do an honest day's fishing," says 83-year-old Tom Martin, father of the Hastings' fishing quarter. "I'm disgusted with the lot of them."

Answered one of the young men: "Our fathers spend day after day, week after week and year after year at sea, working like slaves. At the end of a week they are lucky if they bring home £3 ($12)—chicken feed which we could easily double in safe jobs ashore. Why, then, should we be expected to follow in our father's footsteps?"

Joe Coglan, 33, spoke in the same fashion. "I started life as a coal miner," he said, "but changed to fishing. Sometimes I wish I'd stayed in the pits. There is no money in fishing today. I'm hanged if I'll let my children go to sea when they grow up."

YOUTH NOT TO BLAME

White - bearded William Betts, Hastings' fish market superintendent, who is 65, declared: "Our kind are dying out fast. It's a sorry thing, but I don't know as how I blame the younger folk. There are lots more easier ways of earning a living, with considerably less risk involved.

"If fishermen were paid in proportion to the hours they work and the risks they run, the situation might yet be saved."

Many Hastings' fishermen take shore jobs in their spare time to help out the family budget. One is Bert Harwood, 35, who drives a truck when he is not out at sea and sometimes makes more money on the road than he can by fishing.

"Very often we are at sea for several days without catching a sprat," he said ruefully.

Jim Strangeways, 37, whose family have been fishermen for three or four generations, said: "Fishing is in my blood and I'd rather fish than do anything else in the world. But, with a family to consider, I often think I should take up something that offers a fair wage for a fair day's work."

Receives Albert Medal

Seventeen-year-old Alfred Raymond Lowe shows his sister, Jean Lowe, the Albert Medal he received at Buckingham Palace investiture for his rescue work while swimming to the aid of survivors when the liberty-boat he was aboard sank in Portland Harbor in October with the loss of 29 lives. The boat was from the aircraft-carrier Illustrious. The midshipman Lowe attempted to save subsequently died but Lowe acted with complete disregard for his own life. His action was in accordance with the highest traditions of the Royal Navy. Lowe's naval rating was that of "Boy." He is now serving in H.M.S. Implacable.

County Town of Derbyshire

By ELIZABETH RICHMOND

DERBY, the county town of Derbyshire, is a great industrial centre in the English Midlands. It is famous for its engineering products, and boots and shoes are also made in its factories. Derby is also the home of that lovely chinaware known as "Crown Derby China," which has been prised everywhere since the factory was established in 1750 by William Duesbury.

The streets of Derby today are broad, and its factories and modern buildings are hives of busy, prosperous people. But the traveler will find as he walks through the streets interesting reminders of old Derby, which have marked the stages of its development. Old Derby was a small and compact place, and one can visit its antiquities quite easily.

The main thoroughfare, St. Peter's Street, takes its name from the old church of that name which was mentioned in William the Conqueror's Domesday Book. A tree-shaded gabled building in St. Peter's Churchyard is the Derby School first mentioned in a charter of 1160. The school's most famous pupil was John Flamsteed, born in 1664, who became Britain's first Astronomer Royal.

A short walk from here brings the traveler to Becket-Well-Lane, a narrow cobbled street with a conical structure of stones which covers a well from which the town partly took its water supply before 1700. Then comes the Wardwick, where, close to the library, are the Old Silk Mill Gates. These picturesque gates have come from England's first silk mill which was built on an island in the River Derwent in 1717 by John Lombe. Nothing remains today of this mill except a tall square tower. The Silk Gates made by Robert Bakewell about 1725 are of magnificent wrought iron, and they were removed to their present site in 1920.

NOTABLE MARRIAGE

Facing the Wardwick is St. Werburgh's Church where the 18th century great Dr. Johnson was married to Mrs. Porter in 1735. The entry of the marriage is to be seen in the church register. County Hall, too, has literary associations, for it is believed that it was described by the 19th century woman novelist, George Eliot, in "Adam Bede" as the scene of the trial of Hetty Sorrel.

The Dolphin Inn stands in the shadow of Derby Cathedral. It is a black-and-white timbered building and the traveler can refresh himself in its quaint 16th century interior. Near the inn, in St. Michael's Lane, are cottages which were built in the 16th century.

The traveler can then make his way to the Bridge Gate, where, on an arch of the original bridge, stands an architectural gem, a 13th century chapel, St. Mary's of the Brigge. Today the chapel is looked after by the Derbyshire Archaeological Society. During the past centuries the chapel was used for many purposes and has been in turn a shop and a house. In a house near here the great philosopher, Herbert Spencer, was born in 1820.

But a great deal of Derby reminds us that it was always a busy town for many of the street names, such as Full Street, Sadler Gate and Iron Gate, are reminders of the trades which flourished here in bygone days.
